Fuck yes, that looks awesome.

Also, I don't think a Homu Purple suit would work with that hat, to be honest.

The hat and suit need to be color coordinated and shit. Its less unique, but we'll have to go with a black suit to be perfect. Though, maybe if we went with a black dress shirt underneath the suit we could get away with Homu Purple...

It's possible that the gothic lolita that Mami is hanging out with is Oriko, girlfriend of Kirika who we killed early in the quest. In the manga, Oriko has the power to see the future which would make her the prime candidate for being "the Prophet" that's supposed to kill Mami. And given that she's likely seeking revenge for Kirika, she has the motive for trying to kill someone close to Chiaki.
But then again, I don't recall Oriko having an American accent. Regardless, I imagine Oriko will show up to cause problems sooner or later.

You glance at the still-sleeping Midori by your side. You know she'd been sleeping the entire way from Siberia, not to mention a full night's sleep before that - but she seems to still be sleep-starved even then, enough that she's even snoring lightly here. Running around in overlapping barriers must have worn her out more than you thought.

Another look at the flower shop just outside, and it's then that you make your decision. You'll get the roses on your own. Not much sense of sending Kyoko over to get it, and you could use the opportunity to stretch your legs after the flight. Besides, there's something you need to ask Fabiola.

"Fabiola...? Oh, you mean that maid back from that gala thing?" Kyoko blinks, before following your gaze. "Huh. Didn't even recognize her." The Eversor shrugs. "Alright, go ahead. I'll wait here, keep the engine running." She presses a button on the dashboard, and the door on your side unlocks. "Don't take too long, alright? We got a schedule. Mami-san's going to scold me if we get there with your pancakes already cold."

Yes, yes. She doesn't have to remind you.

You carefully extract yourself from Midori's grasp before getting out of the car, reaching up with a hand to irritably flick some of your long hair that's fallen over your shoulders.

...This'll take some getting used to, to be sure. You idly wonder when you'll be able to get it cut short again.

Pushing the car door closed, you make your way inside the flower shop. It's an old-fashioned one, but with some modern improvements here and there - some of the more expensive flowers being stocked in sliding-door refrigerators, to keep them fresh longer. A bell hanging over the door rings as you push your way through, alerting the senior shopkeeper there and netting you a greeting. You return it as well as you could - and your voice, despite you keeping it low, makes the only other customer in the shop turn at your arrival.

"...Well, I was going to mention your eyes. They're a slightly darker purple, with keen crimson pupils." She smiles.

Huh. Well. That's...a thing. Not even Kyoko noticed. But anyway--

"They're beautiful. Much more beautiful than I remember." Fabiola smiles just a bit wider, a pink tinge blossoming on her cheeks.

I agree it'd be a bad idea on several levels to encourage any sort of shipping with Iori, but on the other hand it wouldn't be right to give her the cold shoulder entirely. We are trying to become a somewhat less dysfunctional human being (or pseudo-lich or whatever you want to call what we are -- person, anyway), and we were making some decent progress toward that end with Iori. We don't want to drag her into the mess that is our life, and she's pretty well out of the question for shipping stuff aside from that, but that doesn't mean we can't still maintain a friendly and professional relationship.

You try your best to ignore your own cheeks heating up as you tell Fabiola, in the same deadpan tone of voice that you've always spoken to everybody - that the line, as it was, forms to the right, and it's quite a long one. You also ignore the smile that the maid makes as this, quickly following up the retort with a query about what's been happening in the Garcia Household.

"Hoh~ You don't need to be so nervous, Magical Girl. I have no interest in...falling in line, at the moment. I am content to simply admire from afar. Although, I do remember that you still have to collect the payment I owe you." The smile turns into a rather rosy one, and she bows. "You are free to ask me of anything you wish, whenever you wish. For that, at least, I am at your service."

...Are all maids like her? Seriously?

"No, I do not believe so. We of the Garcia Household are one of a kind, trained by the Head Maid to be the most efficient and capable maids there are." Fabiola smiles the kind of smile that makes you wonder if she's being truthful at all, or simply jerking you around. "As for your question, well...everything is as it should be, at the household. There has been little excitement as of late. Minase-sama has been safe behind our doors ever since you left her in our care, and remains safe up to this day." A moment's pause, here. "She and the young master has been getting along quite well. She rarely cries about you anymore."

That's...well. You look around the flower shop a bit uncertainly, before nodding. That's...good to hear.

"I believe so, too." Fabiola isn't smiling now, rather studying you carefully.

...Yes. Right. You remember something about the Head Maid acting strangely. Does she still need your help?

"The Head Maid seems to have calmed down a bit, when she saw the young master being preoccupied with Minase-sama. She believes that Minase-sama's company is doing the young master good, getting him out of his shell."

The maid hesitates a bit. "Although...it is not with a small amount of wistfulness that she talks about this, of course."

That's something to take note of, at least.

"The Head Maid has always been mysterious, at least to me. She is honest and hardworking, but she keeps a side of her hidden, even to the young master. We do not pry or question, what only matters is that we serve as well as is expected of us. And the Head Maid had served beyond expectation, every time." Fabiola seems to be careful in her words here, and you decide not to pry any further. She knows how to reach you, anyway, in case you're needed.

What about her? Why is she out so late at night, buying flowers?

"An order, direct from the young master. A surprise for Minase-sama, for tomorrow. The exact details of it I'm not aware, but I am reliably informed that an expensive dinner and a night out in the town is involved." A wistful smile. "And you? Surely you did not simply stop to just talk to me, Magical Girl?"

...Not exactly.

Never killed a person =/= pacifist.

Pacifism is an ideology. Just because you've never done something that ideology denounces doesn't mean you adhere to it. And given that her role is based on subterfuge rather than combat, it's fairly plausible that she's simply never been in a situation where she needed to kill someone.

After a moment's thought, you shake your head, allowing yourself a small, yet brittle smile. No, you tell her. Not just to talk to her.

You turn to the shopkeeper who seems to be keeping himself busy behind the cash register - you'd caught him ringing up Fabiola's order - and ask him if he has any blue roses available. The shopkeeper nods, gesturing to the sliding refrigerator display at the farthest end, saying that he has a dozen left. You nod at this. You'll take them all, you tell him.

"...Blue roses?" Fabiola asks, her eyes widening slightly as she receives her receipt, before the shopkeeper himself goes to fix your own order in a proper bouquet. "I...do you have any idea what those mean in flower language, Magical Girl? Or is it simply one of your customs, the significance of which is kept secret from the rest of the world?"

They're just flowers, you tell the Maid as you hand over your debit card to the shopkeeper. She shouldn't read into it too much.

"...Yes, well. I am sure that what they mean in the language of the flowers does not figure into you buying them. Yes. Of course." Fabiola replies after a moment, as she watches you receive your order. It's a tastefully-done bouquet, and the flowers themselves have quite long stems with the thorns shaved off. You get your card and your receipt a moment later. "Well, it appears that you're in a hurry. I will leave momentarily, so...it has been good to see you again, Magical Girl. Do you have any message you'd like for me to convey to Minase-sama?"

You shake your head no at this, but much too quickly.

You're just happy that Iori's happy, you tell her. And this conversation never happened.

"What conversation?" Fabiola smiles innocently. "Goodbye, Magical Girl. I hope we meet each other yet again in more favorable circumstances. Maybe...I will take a place in the line after all. Or take a number."

...You shake your head at this. You bid her goodbye, and make for the car. Kyoko had stepped out, industriously chomping on some Pocky.

"Took your time, there." The Eversor remarks, before holding out the half-empty box to you. "Want one? And what's the flowers for?"

You take one of the chocolate-dipped sticks. You just felt like buying them, you explain without going further. Which is...practically the truth, but not the complete truth. You wonder if this was what Kyuubey felt like.

"Yeah, okay. Sure." Kyoko shrugs. "Get in. We're still in schedule, I guess. I'll have to floor it for a bit, but we'll get there in time." She grunts as the both of you get in your respective seats, Midori still fast asleep. You place the bouquet on your lap, before allowing Midori to once more lean her head on your shoulder.

"So what did you guys talk about?" One of the few friends you've got asks as the limousine barrels through the road once more.

Maid stuff, you say, and leave it at that.

Yeah. Just maid stuff.

The rest of the trip back to the Officio is rather uneventful. With it being after dark and everything, it's not as active as you'd like, although you look up at the building with a sense of...nostalgia, you suppose. You missed it. It's only been two weeks, but those two weeks felt like months.

The guard stationed for the night doesn't seem to recognize you, blocking you and Midori access after allowing Kyoko to pass through - and she gets an irritated, if half-hearted scolding from the Eversor for this. You tell Kyoko to let her be, she was just doing her job - and it's not her fault you look barely recognizable at the moment. You probably don't even match your ID picture right now.

"Yeah, alright," Kyoko grumbles, carrying the luggage containing the Golden Weapons one-handedly, as if it weighed little. "Sorry. I guess I got a bit...well, I got reminded of how Yuma got really screwed up by what happened. Mind, she's improved a lot since then, but..." She shakes her head. "Ah, nevermind, we'll talk about it later." She glances at Midori - you've managed to wake the Callidus up after a few moments' shaking, and you'd held her hand the moment she stepped out of the car. The bouquet held carefully in your other hand, resting on your shoulder.

"Here, is she going to be alright?" The Eversor asks, concerned. "She was saying some stuff in her sleep earlier, back in the car. Somethin' about you needing to come back to her, stuff like that."

You glance at Midori, before turning to Kyoko and nodding. Midori has...had a hard time in Siberia. You'll tell her all about it after you report to Kyuubey, you promise. But Midori should be fine, she just needs more sleep.

"Alright." Kyoko's eye narrows slightly at you, before she turns away. "Just tell me if you need me to take her into sick bay or somethin'."

You nod at this. Beside you, Midori yawns, before shaking her head.

"I-it's okay, sempai. I'm fine." The Callidus slurs, her voice still thick with sleep. "Just need a bit more shut-eye, and I'll be okay."

You're worried, but...well. You need sleep yourself, so you can understand her, at least.

With that, all three of you make your way up to Kyuubey's Office.

Pity. You were half-expecting a grand welcome, but...well, them's the breaks.

The doors to Kyuubey's Office open to reveal none other than Mami, slumped in front of Kyuubey's desk - seemingly having fallen asleep on her arms. A plate of still-steaming pancakes placed on the table beside her, along with a clear crystal pitcher of syrup and a pre-sliced stick of butter on a saucer. The smell makes your mouth water as soon as it hits you, but even that goes out the window as the blonde lifts her head slowly to blearily blink up at you.

She does so once, twice. And beside you, Kyoko muffles an awkward cough with a fist, before breaking the silence with a greeting. "Er...yeah, Mami-san. I went and fetched Murderface from the airport, just like you asked." She smiles. "She's still in one piece, and she still remembers us."

Mami's eyes go wide at this - and you note with some horror at the hint of eyebags underneath the blonde's amber eyes - and she murmurs your name with the same kind of desperation that you'd heard Midori whisper yours in her sleep. Another moment, and she'd walked around the desk, and you see her office lady suit wrinkled and rumpled as she steps towards you.

"Chiaki-san...Chiaki-san!"

You drop the bouquet - and Midori's hand - as Mami suddenly pulls you into an embrace, a warm, soft one, smelling of honey and pancakes and sweetness and tears. Dimly, you feel her crying into your shoulder.

"I...I heard what happened! Souji-san called us, briefed us about the situation...! I thought we'd lost you, Chiaki!"

How do you respond?

"Can't get rid of me that easily," you find yourself replying deadpan, even if you felt tears springing to your own eyes as well. Mami cries even harder at this, hugging you a bit more tightly.

It's...strange. Always has been. You've seen strange things, disturbing things, things that shouldn't be. You've managed to stare at them without so much as flinching. But the sight - and sound - of Tomoe Mami crying was not something you could bear so easily. What made it worse than everything you've seen so far? You have no idea, and yet you feel repulsed, infuriated even, at the mere thought of it. It meant a grave injustice has been done, fueling your knee-jerk response for reparations made with force. Someone made Tomoe Mami cry, and therefore that someone needs to die.

...Whoever this prophet was, they were dead. You'd sooner burn this city in flames than allow harm to come to Tomoe Mami. You'd have hoped that what you did to Kirika would have served as a warning. Apparently, you need to make a second one.

You let Mami cry for a bit more before you...well, you do your best to awkwardly return the hug, your own arms coming up around her and clasping slowly. She shivers slightly at this, before drawing back and placing a quick kiss on your cheek, one that makes your own tear-stained cheeks redden once more.

"I knew it, though. I knew that...that Chiaki-san would fight to get back to us. She'd do her best or...or destroy the entire world trying!" Mami reaches up to wipe at her eyes with the sleeve of her uniform, before pausing and pulling out a handkerchief instead. "We...we've been worried sick ever since Souji-san alerted us about the situation. Kyuubey-san in particular, he was...very concerned."

What? The mutant cat? But--

"Yeah, he was pretty upset too." Kyouko grins. "Just like a long-tailed cat in a room full of rocking chairs. Oh, for the record, we still don't know what happened, but we kinda inferred some of it. If things get bad enough that even the mutant cat gets distressed, well, then it's bad." It's then that Kyouko slaps you on the back, making you wince. "But hey, you're back, right? S'all that matters!"

...Yes. You suppose.

Of course, erm. You look back at Midori, who's visibly trying to stay awake and look a bit miffed at the current situation - and you take her hand and pull her forward. Back to your side.

You tell them the real reason you're back and in one piece. Midori, who jumped in two overlapping nightmares to rescue you. The only person who went in without a moment's hesitatioin. Without her, you wouldn't even be here talking to them.

"...Yes, of course, we know that," Mami smiles through her tears, and she steps forward to pull Midori into a hug as well. The green-haired Callidus squeaks at this, although she seems to fall limp in such an embrace. "Everyone in the Officio will know her name, of course. The girl who saved the future Warmaster of the Ninth. There will be awards, I'm made to believe. And it should be right." She lets go of Midori. "...Thank you for bringing back Chiaki-san for us, Midori."

"It's...it's alright," Midori mumbles, swaying slightly on her feet. This gets a concerned look from Mami. "Midori-san, are you alright?"

"M'fine, really," Your Callidus replies, her brow furrowing, before all but collapsing in your arms. The luggage crashes to the floor as Kyoko rushes forward to help out. The both of you hoist Midori back to her feet, while Mami looks on worriedly.

"I think we should get her to sick bay now, yeah? Just to get everything checked out." Kyoko says. You nod at this, and make to leave with her, but Mami places a hand on your arm.

"I'll take care of Midori personally, Chiaki-san," Mami replies firmly. "...Let us take care of the rest, for now. She's done enough. You've done enough." A smile breaks her professional expression. "The both of you need rest, and while I can see that you're concerned, it won't do if you're there in the room while she's being checked. It's probably nothing, but the moment something is found, we'll notify you right away."

You nod at this. You...well, you're not sure at all at the moment, but Mami knows what she's doing, right?

"I'll come back for you once we've made sure Midori-chan is in the sick bay and getting the care she needs. In the meantime, you can enjoy the pancakes I've made for you, Chiaki-san." she gestures to the table, where the nearly-forgotten pile has been left steaming. "I made sure to make them special for the occasion. I hope you like them."

You...you have a feeling you will. You nod again.

Say, where is Kyuubey, anyway?

"He was called to an urgent meeting with the Incubators, a few hours before you arrived. He'll be arriving shortly, I believe." It's then that Mami nudges you towards Kyuubey's desk. "Now, go on, Chiaki-san, before they get cold. Midori is in safe hands." A moment. "Oh, and please don't touch Kyuubey's computer."

They leave before you could say anything else, leaving you alone in Kyuubey's office. With the golden weapons. And a pile of pancakes, made specially by Tomoe Mami.

After a while, you make your way behind the desk, settling in on the high-backed leather chair. Swiveling it a couple of times, before pulling it forward to get you nearer to the desk. Sliding the plate of heavenly delight towards you, so it's right in front.

You pour a healthy amount of syrup, place a square of butter on the uppermost cake - and then, with fork and knife, begin to feast.

You could cry. You really could.

And you do so.

You're home. For what it's worth, you're home.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 04/14/13(Sun)08:05 No.24237412

You are a Magical Girl, and you've somehow fallen asleep on top of your Incubator's desk.

You're not sure how exactly you fell asleep, or when. But you did, somehow. Further proof of that - if you needed any more convincing - was the sticky way your cheek peeled off from the surface of the plasteel desk as you lifted your head up, having adhered there by a puddle of drool.

...You still find ways to embarass yourself, even know. You're supposed to be the new Warmaster now, for fuck's sake.

If there's any consolation, you didn't do yourself the indignity of falling asleep face first in your empty plate of pancakes. You moved it out of the way before you got knocked out, it looks like. At least you didn't smash your face into the bouquet of blue flowers beside it, either--

...

Wait. You left the bouquet on the floor, after you dropped them from Mami hugging you.

How the hell did--

>> ☐ Deculture 04/14/13(Sun)08:06 No.24237417

"Ah, Matsuda. You're awake, finally." You haven't heard this voice in a while, but the way it sidesteps your own thoughts to be heard in your mind is as annoying as ever. "I was beginning to think you'd be spending the night here in my office. Personally, I wouldn't mind, but it seems such a waste for the new apartment I've furnished for you."

You look around for any sign of the furry little bastard in the wide, spacious office, one hand reaching up to surreptitiously wipe away the crusted drool on the corner of your lips. It's then that you see it - a rather well-maintained cat tower, at the very corner of the office, cleverly positioned in an unlit area. You don't make any move to go toward it, but you're pretty sure you could see a pair of crimson eyes twinkling your way from inside one of the cat tower's 'rooms'.

"No need to get up, Matsuda. I'm just trying to unwind at the moment. Stressful meeting." And for some reason, you believe him - the usually cool, collected voice has a bit of a strained note to it, a jittery tone. "Welcome back, in any case. I trust Siberia's been a productive vacation, all in all?"

How do you respond?

Kyuubey seems to blink from inside his hideaway, before poking his head out in that madly-curious way that all felines seem to have. "As usual, Matsuda, your powers of summarization never fail to surprise me. Yes, I suppose your stay in Siberia was much too eventful to be called a vacation, but despite this, you seem to have turned out perfectly alright from it. Looking much more intact and put-together, if I may say so."

He shrinks back inside the hidey-hole. "As for my brother, well, we'll discuss that in a later time. Yes, I do realize that retaliation is something that should be expected of us, in this line of work - and what happened does offer some degree of justification to the entire thing - but we will go about it professionally and properly, as I've always strived for this Officio." A moment. "Which, of course, had often fallen on the wayside due to Kharn's tenure as Warmaster, but I have high hopes for you, at least, Matsuda. I look forward to having a Warmaster who's not that eager to call a full mobilization simply because of an easily-forgivable misunderstanding."

Another moment.

"...I realize the irony of making that assumption a moment after I remembered your incident with the Third." Kyuubey lets out a sigh. "The meeting must have affected me more than I thought. Although, I suppose, teleportation to the Lunar Base always does that. I could never get used to it."

The Incubator clears his throat, here - or at least, makes a sound approximating one, seeing as he doesn't really need to do so. "And yes, your new apartment. You were quite adamant on being supplied a new one, after what happened with Kure's retirement." A small metal card, the size of a credit card, shimmers into existence on top of the desk, briefly outlined in crimson light.

What do YOU think would happen, Kyubey?

Yeah, yeah, I get it, the hole heat-death of the Universe-part, the Sacrifice of the few for the many and what not, I also get that most Incubator don`t tell us that were part of the harvest not the witches.

We know that QB did it once.

What we don`t know however if this is his usual approach nor if this is also how other Incubators handle it.
I´m also pretty sure that the "I can blow up your soulgem and turn you into a witch"-is pretty new and horrifying knowledge to every Meguca in existence.

I mean, just think about how it turns the table: Before it was either death due to getting killed in Action by witches or you witching out due to despair/overexertion. But now there is one Incubator who can turn his Megucas into Magical Suicide-Bombers. And we know that this is already the second time he did that.

We called Kyubey once while at Siberia. He said he intended to make Sayaka the Eversor Leader, and Kyoouko was going to be her Second.

He was surprised when we asked for both of them for our personal retinue.

It's not entirely a bad thing. Malal was Culexus Leader and Warmaster Aide, so there's that as precedent.

Then again, she was exceptional.

What we need less is a retinue, and more squad leaders. You don't always need a powerful retinue.

You DO need a retinue that can run away effectively, though, if they're not powerful in themselves, and that can handle burecracy and handling people.

(Midori fits the first role of being sneaky, not so sure on the second parts, though)

>> ☐ Anonymous 04/14/13(Sun)10:00 No.24238453

We've already thrown the idea of having both of them work for us past Kyubey, and Kyouko wanted us to ask Sayaka first, so throwing the idea past Kyubey again without doing so isn't going to accomplish much.

We still have some time to fully decide and talk to bluehair first, so we don't need to rush on this entire thing, if something comes up we definitely still have a small retinue of helpers even though nothing has been made official yet.

The sad thing is that Mami thing pretty much has every perfect skill for being an aide, it's just that she might be a bit distracting for us to have someone who mothers us in the role, plus Kyubey would be sad at us taking away his lap pillow.

As for stability, Mami's older and more mature now, and even back then she seemed a lot hardier about being a magical girl than Sayaka.

"Your...aide?" Kyuubey's voice takes on an inquisitive tone, as he finally squeezes himself out of one of the cat tower's hidey-holes - before clambering up slowly and carefully to the perch at the very top of the pet accessory, easily balancing himself there and then turning to look at you.

"Ah, you must mean Hanegawa Midori. She is currently recuperating in sick bay. From what I've been told, it looks as though she'd suffered an entire month's worth of sleep deprivation, dehydration, and other ailments you probably needn't hear from me. Barrier sickness, nothing serious. Time does move differently in barriers, even more when you're in an overlapping one. She will be discharged in a day or two, you may depend upon it."

The Incubator tilts it head slightly to the side. "Speaking of which, though, Matsuda. Does that mean you've decided on taking Hanegawa on as an aide? I distinctly remember you wanting to have both Sakura Kyoko and Miki Sayaka for aides, as well. Not unheard of, of course - the former Warmaster of the Eighth had three aides of her own, although she called them in more colorful names than that." A moment. "I do believe that Miki Sayaka does have something to say about it, first, so you may want to breach the matter with her personally before you make your official decision."

You take the metallic passcard to your new apartment and tap it carefully on the desk in front of you. Doesn't Sayaka have something to say about everything, anyway?

"She is of the outspoken, opinionated sort, so yes. But she is strong-minded, sharp, and quite astute for an Eversor. If anything, you might want to consider a special role for her, if you do take her in as an aide."

A special role...?

She can advise the Warmaster, fight alongside her if she wishes, or even act as her in her stead should the Warmaster be absent or indisposed. She can also help the Warmaster make the decisions necessary to lead an Officio." Kyuubey's tail flicks from side to side as he explains.

"The rank is martial, never one of servitude, although...Kharn certainly made a secretary of HER Equerry. Although, I rather think she preferred it that way. The Equerry, I meant. Kharn has never been one to concern herself with the details."

Another moment of silence passes between the two of you.

"...Please do not mistake this as this Incubator's clumsy way of trying to ensure that his top Eversor officer and his Warmaster do not spend all day trying to find out what color each other's intestines are." He says after a moment. "This is frank and cold-blooded manipulation with no regard to your well-being, or sanity, or company stock. I assure you of this."

...He's getting sarcastic again. You hate it when he does that.

"Ahriman?" Kyuubey seems puzzled for a moment, before blinking. "Ah. The former Warmaster of the Third. Yes, I was expecting Kharn to talk to you about her exploits." For a moment, it looked very much like the Incubator was hesitating.

"I'm afraid that I have nothing to tell you about it other than the fact that we don't know where it is, Matsuda. Kharn's Equerry conducted the search herself, an hour after her injuries were taken care of. She was adamant that it was found, but it seemed to have disappeared the moment Ahriman let go of it."

So it's gone, then? And nobody knows who has it?

"There hasn't been any sighting of it, even from the other Officios. At least, those who still deign to reply to us in a civilized manner." It's here that Kyuubey sounds disappointed. Crestfallen, almost. "Well, I'm sure it will turn up sooner or later. We will simply have to deal with it as it comes, and hope that it won't come to another bloodbath when it does."

Right. Now, about that moon base--

It's here that his tone becomes slightly bitter.

"Only Incubators and the Warmaster of the First Officio are allowed access to it, so do not feel slighted, Matsuda. Besides, once I go insane, you will be among the first that I will send in order to capture it for our use."

That's comforting.

"I knew you would appreciate it."

Right. Now, what about your chair?

"You mean that chair you stole?" Kyuubey seems to be almost smirking. "Integrated into your new apartment, as I believe you'll be pleased to note. Tomoe Mami oversaw the preparations personally, and her words, as I remember it, describe it as something that 'really ties the room together'. She also made sure to organize your firearm cache into something approaching a proper armory, rather than just stacks of ordnance haphazardly stored in flammable crates."

He jumps up again, easily clearing the height of the desk, and he sits back on his haunches as if to survey the damage you've done to his workspace.

"...I'll have to get Housekeeping to see to this later." You hear him mumble to himself, before he places a paw on the bouquet of blue roses. "Now, I've satisfied your curiosity, Matsuda, satisfy mine. What are these for? I recall that roses of the red variety are mainly used for purposes of romance, but I've never seen blue roses used before. What is the context of these, may I ask?"

"A joke. I...see." Kyuubey grows silent at this, as if in deep contemplation. "I understand. Yes, well, it's nothing compared to the jokes that Kharn perpetrated in her tour of duty as Warmaster. Filling Vindicare lockers with toothpaste, stealing underwear and wearing them on her head, skull puppet shows...not very tasteful, very puerile jokes that always had someone in tears at the end. This seems relatively harmless, and quite fragrant."

You see him take a sniff of one particular blossom. "Ah, excellent crop. You either have good taste or bought from a flower shop with a halfway-competent florist." He nods at this, before turning back to you. "In any case, Matsuda, do not let me detain you. I've quite the backlog, as I'm sure you do as well." The Incubator seems to catch your eye as you look down at the mess you've made of his desk. "Don't bother picking up after yourself, Housekeeping will take care of it. You can take your roses with you, however, as I'm sure you need them for that joke of yours."

You do so, after making sure to place the passcard of your new apartment in your inventory. Kyuubey immediately occupies his leather chair as soon as you vacate it, the mutant cat resting right on the spot where you'd sat.

...Clever little bastard.

You make to leave, but something catches at your subconscious. Something strange about the conversation you had with Kyuubey just now. You point this out to him, and the Incubator takes a few moments to respond.

"...There isn't anything to tell about Malal that I'm sure Kharn hasn't told you," He replies in his usual dulcet tones, although the faint hint of tension is there. "I refrain from speaking about her because I find that it is easier to forget." Kyuubey turns away. "I will say, however, that she was my greatest triumph as an Incubator - and at the same time, my biggest failure."

...It was that bad?

"Is it so surprising for me to say that?" The Incubator turns towards you, blinking. "Contrary to what we usually display, Matsuda, we do have emotions of our own. We simply try to remove them from the equation as much as we can when business is at stake. When decisions need making."

Well, it's not your fault Incubators have a rap of being souless, furry little satans, then.

"Perhaps. I will dwell on that. But I am not concealing anything about Malal that you may find useful in the future, Matsuda. Trust me on that at least."

You'll try.

"I suppose that is the best I can hope for from my Warmaster. very well, Matsuda, don't let me detain you."

You nod at this, before finally leaving. Outside, Kyoko seems to be snoozing on the receptionist's chair - but she snaps awake the moment you come within five paces of her. Nearly falling off the chair doing so.

"Gwah? Ngh." Kyoko barely manages to come across as intelligible, before she shakes her head and slaps both her cheeks. "Wake up, wake up," She grumbles, before standing up, a sleepy grin baring her teeth as she sees you. "O-oh, hey, Murderface! How'd it go with the boss?" She yawns as she steps around the desk to meet you. "Just gonna report that those Golden Thingies are in your own personal lockdown vault downstairs." She gives you another passcard, this time a completely-black metal one. "Kyuubey's told me to show the place to you anytime you want to. Oh, and your new apartment, too. I'm supposed to drive you there so you know where it actually is."

"Hahaha! Sorta like that, I suppose!" Kyoko grins. "Oh, I guess I can drive you to my apartment! Sayaka's there now, if you want to get that talk with her out of the way." There's a rather plaintive note to the red-haired Eversor's voice, here, as if she wants you to choose that particular route. "Oh, and, um. Remember that idol chick?"

You decide to have Kyoko take you to your personal lockdown vault for now, but after a quick detour to sick bay, to pay a visit to Midori. Kyoko grins at this, but doesn't say anything as the both of you make your way there. You earn more than your lion's share from the night shifters you pass by - it's almost like clockwork, how they glanced at you, doing a double-take - before finally gawking at the bouquet of blue roses resting on your shoulder.

Some of them blushed a full crimson, stopping right in their tracks and stuttering greetings, while others shyly asked if they could snap a photo of you. Before you could frown at them and decline, however, Kyoko had nudged the prospective photographer aside, cheerfully yet brusquely telling them that you were on important business, and that you mustn't be held up.

You asked her about this, just outside Midori's room. What was that all about?

"Huh? Oh, you know, just trying it out, being an aide kinda deal," Kyoko seems to be tickled pink at this, clearly enjoying herself. "It's the truth anyhow, isn't it? You're on important business, and it's not like we have all night for it."

Well, that's true, but--

"Ah, I don't remember you being this fussy, Murderface. Man, what'd they do to you in Siberia?" Kyoko pats your shoulder. "Come on, it's okay to relax your shoulders a bit more, you know!" It's then that she pushes you towards the door leading to Midori's room. "Now, go on, get in there, do your thing with the flowers. Do your best Murder Mayumi impersonation or somethin' - hell, just be yourself, that's accurate enough."

What? But how did she--

"Friend reads it, alongn with the rest of the freakin' Eversors," Kyoko hisses. "Now go!"

...Fine, fine. She didn't need to be so pushy.

You enter Midori's room quietly. She's...well, she looks alright, thankfully. You were expecting the worst - the Callidus hooked up to tubes and such. The only tube she seems to be connected to is an IV drip, and she seems to be fast asleep on her bed.

"Matsuda-sempai..." You hear her murmur in her sleep. "P-please stop teasing me..."

Well, now. It seems that Midori's having a strange dream about you.

You're pretty glad Kyoko's not around to hear this.

What do you do?

[]Put the bouquet of blue roses on her bedstand.
[]Place a single rose on her pillow, put the rest back in inventory.
[]Listen to her dreaming for a while.

You listen to her dreaming for a bit.

It's...you wish you hadn't done that. She's tired and probably on medication, and she has no idea what's going on. Of course she's going to have weird dreams, like you holding her down and having your way with her, or stuff that involves candlewax and handcuffs and blindfolds. And really, as the person who saved you from two overlapping nightmares, she deserves better than her sempai barging in on her unguarded, vulnerable moments.

No, you did that the last time already, reading her manga beside her on the plane.

Shaking your head, you take a single rose from the bouquet - making sure that all the thorns on its stem were sheard off - and it's then that you place it on her pillow, beside her. With luck, it'd be the first thing she sees when she wakes up, and not roll over it or something.

You nod at your own handiwork, before reaching out and giving her hand - the one without the IV sticking out the back of it - a gentle squeeze. She mumbles something and returns the gesture, her grip feeble, feather-light.

You let go a moment later, and place the rest of the roses in your inventory. You slip out of the room as quietly as you can, giving the green-haired Callidus one last look before finally exiting.

Hopefully, that would be the last time you send Midori to the hospital.

Because you can't help but fear if the next time will be to the morgue.

"Ready to go?" Kyoko greets you, the Eversor seemingly having waited just outside, leaning on the wall just beside the door. "Thought you were gonna spend longer in there, to be honest."

...Midori's asleep, you tell her. It wouldn't be much point, anyway. Besides, the both of you are still on a timetable, aren't you?

"...I guess so." She shrugs. "Anyway, we can take a short cut through here. Vault's pretty much close."

With Kyoko leading, you do manage to get to the vault in barely no time at all - although you did have to do a lot of corridor-cutting and such. The vault is exactly what it looks like - a huge bank vault of thick, uncompromising iron, with gears and spokes and the entire thing.

You slide the card that Kyoko gave you into the slot she points out, and it's with a heavy grind and groan of metal that the vault doors begin to carefully dismantle each other, the interconnected gears and cogs breaking apart and folding back. A heavy blast door rolls upwards, followed by another, and then another.

...Until finally, a room is revealed. One with twenty seemingly-specific weapon racks, each with their own numbered plaque burnished in gold. Each plaque sporting a roman numeral, from I to XX.

Kirika's sword is placed in the XX rack, of course. Kharn's chainaxes, the only other set of Golden Weapons in the vault, is placed in the XV rack.

"Take your time, I'll be right outside," Kyoko grins and waves, just before one of the blast doors slam down in between the both of you. You're worried about being stuck there for a second, until you see the same card input slot near the vault doors.

In any case, you're here now.

What do you do?

Shitty little dive bar. That was new. Never been much for drinking, and this sure as hell didn't look like somewhere I'd been dragged to before. It had that kind of personal, old timey touch you can't find in Santa Destroy. It was comforting. Warm. Maybe not pristine, with the heavy burn of old smoke and cheap liquor in the air, but…untouched. Three phantoms sat on the stools, talking and laughing in old and distorted voices, memories washed away by time. …It was easy to pick Kharn out. It'd always be easy to pick Kharn out. Next to her was Kong. Was probably a pretty old memory, she didn't seem anything like Kong as I'd seen her. And on Kong's other side was Malal. …I could believe that. Malal probably found this place. Serving the three of them was a reedy shadow, almost human, with a long, beaklike nose. Its eyes pulsed an eerie red as it craned its neck toward me, and we exchanged a silent nod.
…That one was mine.
My knife was in my hand in an instant – more out of habit than concern. If there was a reason to be concerned, I'd know. The floor was soundless under me as I made my way to the bar and took a seat next to 'Kharn'. The voices didn't get any louder or clearer, and filtering it through Japanese was a pain, but I could recognize her barking, unintelligible accent, at least.
Jumped a little when the bartender grabbed my wrist. She jumped, too, when I stabbed hers a second later. …Didn't have the patience for their bullshit. Something was about to go down, I could feel it, and that warranted my attention a fuckload more than the same old night-to-night game of cat and asshole. The bartender's scream filled the air, piercing and inhuman, like every other time Eversor Diplomacy had invaded my dreams, and the whole bar seemed to break apart, the memories next to me fizzling and dying. The smoky smell was replaced by an all-too-familiar rotting stench. Blood and death. With accompaniment by about a hundred flies.

Told her to get me some fucking whiskey if she wanted to stick around, and found a drink in my hand a second later. Not like it mattered. Couldn't even get buzzed in a dream, not that I wanted to anyway. …It was pretty good whiskey, though. And the only thing the damn place seemed to have.
After a nice, long drag, I took a look at the suddenly-fucked bar. The quiet melody of the old jukebox in the corner had lapsed into eerie silence, and its cheerful light flickered, barely powered. The whole place had turned…dusty, I guess. It wasn't natural light. Sort of like staring at the world through an old, dirty TV screen. The scuffed wood flooring wasn't visible at all, though in clear view, as if each had its own dim spotlight, were…bodies. Corpses, lots of them.
Wish I could say I didn't recognize a few. …It'd always be easy to pick Kharn out. There was Mickey Blueberry, with some girl in red clutching her. …Maybe she'd hugged her to death or something. And…there was also Miss Tomoe's costume, filled out by Miss Tomoe's chest. …Looked like her head was gone, though. Like somebody cut it off to make a statement. Sounds like something we'd do.
Or kept it as a trophy. She had a nice head, I guess.
I heard the door open about then. …But it was probably just a noise. Doubt the door there even opened. It was pretty obvious who it was just by the less-than-subtle signs her mind was giving me, but I figured I'd have to wait around until things got worse to hear from her. If she even showed at all. Kind of a nice surprise.
So I did the ladylike thing and offered to buy her a drink. I was a little relieved just to hang around someone who wasn't completely batfuck crazy or way, way too energetic, anyway.

"Anyone can buy me a drink," she mumbled back. Didn't take her eyes off me for a second, like she already thought I was going to open her up. "but they should at least have the courtesy to tell me who the hell they are, and where the hell this is."

Cheeky bitch. …Kind of reminds me of me. That probably shouldn't be a surprise, though. I gave her my name and called the shady bartender over again.

I couldn't help but laugh as she mumbled out her astonishment at her drink's sudden appearance. Kid wasn't a dreamer. Or maybe normal people don't have dreams like this. Hell if I know.

Told her not to worry about it. Trying to figure out dream logic is probably the quickest way to give yourself a seizure, anyway. I did my best to lay it out for her – we were in one of our dreams, God knows whose. …I could tell by the way she looked that she didn't remember me, but apparently she was to amnesia what Annie was to shitty nerd conventions. Least, that's what they said about her. She pretty much confirmed it a second later.

It's alright, I told her. Job's tough on all of us. Harder than most on us. Heh. We had a little toast, to a reunion.

…Thought I caught a sweet scent in the air. Smelled like death and a flower field, and it was…fresher, somehow, than the rest of the room. Might have been the Lady poking her head in to check on her Shieldmaiden. Might have been her keeping tabs on me. …Might have just been an old, stupid memory springing up, the kind you think of whenever you meet someone like you. A fellow monster.

Warmaster Marigold asked me three questions the first day I became a magical girl. Guess she asked anyone she thought might be promising. They're questions I answered pretty easily back then, but lately I've been thinking about them again. I had a hunch about the new Kong, too. Seemed like she had to sort her shit out.

Is ignoring Iori the road to her BAD END?

As for feedback, this is the first time I actually got to be in one of the threads, took me 5 days to read everything on foolz and I love this quest, it's fun to actually discuss with the people in here.

>> ☐ Wendy Cooldown 04/14/13(Sun)14:37 No.24242035

I asked her if she liked hurting people. …It was a requirement to get into the Warmaster's Special School. She only took in a special kind of crazy bitch. Someone bloodthirsty, someone who'd come hunting for her later. Someone who would get off on it like she did. Someone who would sit and drool at the idea of carving her fucking chest open.

Yeah. I like hurting people.

…The second…Heh. The second question Marigold asked us was whether we understood flowers. I didn't. … Always thought there might be more to it, but the only person I'd ever seen think about it was Malal. …She was like that. Ten steps ahead and five feet deeper than anyone else in the room. I remembered Kong's phone from other dreams – little flashes of using it, struggling with a diary app. Used to be Malal's, see. Probably set it up with a bunch of riddle bullshit. Wouldn't be surprised if she was still trying to cover asses from way past six feet under. Yeah. I had a better question than…flowers. Least I could do, after all the time we spent in shitty dives like this one, dragging our bosses' drunk, bleeding bodies home together.

When the Warmaster asked the third question, it was a threat. …So that's how I asked it, too. I needed to know about her. About the Shieldmaiden, about the Blessed Lady's Chosen One. …Needed to know if we were really just an offering for their moonlit blood-orgy hate date.

A Mexican standoff is like sex. It's amazing when it's happening. …Then a few minutes afterward, it's just messy and awkward. My knife cried out as it sunk into her throat, in that special way only a weapon you've got a long, dirty history with can. …I was impressed at her speed. Vindicares are usually slower up close. Usually just try to put some distance between you. She really was a Warmaster, and I couldn't help but smile as her desert eagle took out most of my head.

Wasn't my first Vindicare Makeover in recent memory, and I could only hope it'd be my last. I could still feel it as I crashed into the jukebox, shorting the whole damn thing out. Everything was dark, and sort of wet, and the phantom pain I knew from my dreams overwhelmed my body. I tried to talk, but all that came out was a wet hiss, and as the air lightened around us, I knew she was gone.

…I managed to push myself to my feet, and that was when the jukebox started to sputter.

...pillars in the night…

I recognized Annie's ringtone. Glanced around, though it didn't do any good. Pretty sure another chunk of my brain fell out. It was a decidedly weird feeling, even for a dream.

…guide your way…endless trial…

Always tempt your fate with luck and a smi-

“Goddammit, how d’ya even answer this friggin’ thing?” Something soft under my head…and as I opened my eyes, I saw some big blobby looking thing with a ribbon - the design on one of Annie’s shirts. Seemed like she’d dressed down for a change.

…Felt nice, just laying there. Still felt like my head had been blown off, in a distant, airy way. I rolled over a little so I wouldn’t have to look at the weird blob thing. Sounded like she was talking with Nakajima – I could hear her giggling at Annie swearing into the phone, and her voice. Guess they needed to talk about a trip to Siberia.

Right at that moment, though, it was really hard to care. Knew I wasn’t going to fall back asleep, but I wanted to pretend a little while longer.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 04/21/13(Sun)08:15 No.24375548

You are a Magical Girl, and you're standing in your own personal vault. A vault made to house weapons that, in an RPG, would have really ridiculous stat points but hit the user equipping them with all sorts of horrible status effects. Weapons that you're pretty sure need to be constantly oiled with the blood of the innocent or the souls of the damned, that sort of thing.

Weapons that really have no business of being used, really, is what you're trying to get at here.

Even if they do look really flashy, what with being completely gold and everything. The shiny, blindingly-lustrous sort of gold that makes even real gold look fake. The sort of gold that drive Magical Girls completely insane, reducing them into bloodthirsty creatures, hallucinating about a crazed goddess in pink and gibbering about the Flesh of Fallen Angels.

It's all well and good that you have to collect all twenty of them, eh?

You're far from being the selfless paragon of Justice that Magical Girls are supposed to be, but you're in no hurry to see the next person you're in good terms with get reduced to a raving lunatic by wielding one of these around.

Better you than them.

...Ah, you could really go for a smoke right now.

>> ☐ Deculture 04/21/13(Sun)08:16 No.24375556

>>24375548

Anyway, you have four of these Golden Weapons in your possession.

The first Golden Weapon you acquired is the Desert Eagle. Pinky gave this to you personally, after helping you wake up from a Callidus' illusion during a protection assignment. It's gotten the most use out of you so far. It bears the number VII on its handle.

The second Golden Weapon you procured is Kirika Kure's Murasame, the former Eversor's former pride and joy. She cut off your arm with this blade, moments before you had her reduced to hamburger by Misaka. You've used this...just once, from what you remember, and with nearly disastrous results. It has the number XX on its hilt, and it's currently stored in the vault, on its rack. You don't like it every much.

The third Golden Weapon you won is Lance Kilgore's gauntlets - or bracelets, as they are now. He wasn't a Magical Girl, but it still turned him into something twisted, something craven, that you managed to put down after getting help from Tiny Pete. They transform into large, punchy things that have autocannons installed in each finger. You've used this just once, during a half-remembered training session with Kharn. You've also managed to talk to the soul of the Magical Girl seemingly residing in them, Kotarou Yuu. She seemed a nice enough girl. You have this in your inventory right now, along with the VII Golden Weapon.

The fourth Golden Weapon that you were given is Valnikov Kharn's chainaxes. They're huge, imposing, and really have that kind of intimidating air that matched that of their former owner. The axes themselves have a dirty sheen of dried blood on them, and the teeth look as though they're about to tear into flesh any second. From what you remember, they can fit together into one monstrously-huge battleaxe. They bear the number XV, and it's stored in this vault along with the XX Golden Weapon.

>>24375556

You can't really deny the atmosphere that you get just by standing in the same room as both the XV and XX weapons. It's a dangerous sort of atmosphere, the sort that makes you watch your step and hold your breath for a moment before exhaling. A palpable killing intent, which, in the case of Kirika and Kharn, both had in copious amounts. But despite how the chainaxes dwarfed the katana, the former seems to be...jovial, friendly almost. Just like Kharn, it had the air of a person who absolutely loved murderous combat. Someone who enjoyed war and the bloody business that comes with it. Fitting, really, what with the previous owner having a hobby of collecting skulls.

The latter, though...well. You're not all that keen to even get involved with it.

Kirika Kure. What a fucking bitch. Seriously.

What do you do?

We can apologize for being tactless, but we already did that way back when. We just need to let her know we're back and that if she wants to talk, we're willing to listen but we have new responsibilities that demand our attention first.

You decide to talk to Kotarou Yuu for a bit. You remember her from your training session with Kharn, and for someone who's obviously spent time using a Golden Weapon, she seemed to be quite the personable, stable sort. ...More stable than you or Kharn, at that. Definitely much more stable than Kirika was.

You take out the bracelets from your inventory and slip them on, one after the other. Even in the relative chill of the vault, they're skin-warm, as if you're putting them on after someone else had been wearing them all day.

...Now, how do you talk to her? You remember being able to, but only after having them transform into their...bulkier forms. You also had a chainaxe buried in your shoulder, right down to the bone, and were in danger of losing that shoulder and the arm connected to it at the time. You probably won't be able to replicate that situation at the moment without considerable effort, but--

+ Matsuda-san? Is that you? + You suddenly hear Kotarou Yuu's voice in your mind, shy and polite as always. + Ahah, that kind presence. I'd recognize it from anywhere. It really is you, isn't it? +

Huh. Well, there's a thing. You weren't sure if she'd recognize you at the moment, seeing as she met a Chiaki Matsuda that's slightly different than the one you are now.

+ Ah, I suppose that's reasonable, but a little forgetfulness like that, it doesn't really change a person. Matsuda-san is still Matsuda-san no matter what, I think. + She replies quickly and eagerly, which really makes it clear that the poor thing is starved for conversation. You shake your head slightly at this.

+ Um...s-so, did Matsuda-san just want to talk like this, or...would you like me to take you back in here for the moment? + Yuu says after a while. + I don't mind talking like this, but maybe Matsuda-san would prefer a face to talk to...? +

How do you respond?

Lets not do that, I am sure no one is under the illusion that we can get back together with Iori. ~~(hopefully)~~

What I think we should do now is to make sure that Iori isn't getting into any destructive behaviour (i.e. getting in the relationships just to spite us, taking up smoking just to emulate us) and let her understand that while we would like to be back together it would be far better for both of us that we don't

After a moment's thought, you agree to take her up on her offer. Talking face to face would certainly be good at the moment, and...well, you want to learn more about dealing with the Golden Weapons from someone who isn't Kharn. It only strikes you now that you've literally learned nothing about them from the Russian, only coming away with a couple of hats, some new bruises, and an aide who's recovering from the entire experience in sick bay.

Well, she did help get your procedure done, but..

+ Oh, alright! Um, well, this'll just take a second-- + Yuu's voice seems to come from far away, and the vault around you flickers before suddenly disappearing into complete and utter darkness. But before disorientation at standing in the middle of nothing could take your senses, the lights are switched back on - and you find yourself standing in a field of thick, white snow. Not unlike the Siberian landscape you've left only hours before.

You hear a growling by your feet - or at least, snoring - and you look down to see a massive bear, lying on its back. It seems to be deep asleep, but the ugly bruise on its jaw makes you arrive to the conclusion that it's been knocked out by one single punch. Its tongue is even lolling out in that slack-jawed way that punch-drunk pugilists get after being put down.

"He'll be alright, Matsuda-san," Comes a voice behind you, and you turn to see the girl of the XI Golden Weapon standing in her strange, one-piece black dress with the thick, oversized hood covering most of her face. "At least, I remember that he was. Tried to maul someone else before thinking better of it and looking for fish instead." She giggles quietly, her shoulders shaking. "Silly old bear."

"Mmm! With one punch!" She holds up a gloved fist, all exubrance. "Always with the one punch that I've practiced for ten thousand times!"

. . .Well. She's certainly some kind of Magical Girl. You're not sure if you know anyone else with her kind of dedication.

Putting the fact that the person you're talking to - who seems to be only a few inches taller than Misaka, really - could knock out a giant bear in one punch, Yuu actually seems like a normal kid, or at least as normal as Magical Girls go. Quite a refreshing thing, since you've met a lot of girls that, after contracting, seemed all too willing to adopt a new personality to come with their new lifestyle.

You tell her to walk with you as you talk, and she acquiesces all too readily, keeping in step with you as you trudge through the ankle-deep snow. The powdered ice crunching underneath your soles with every step, your breaths misting in the crisp, cool air.

You open the conversation by asking her what Officio she's from. This was going to come up eventually, so you might as well bring it up in a casual conversation like this, rather than waiting for an interrogation. This might also give you a clue as to just how spread out the Golden Weapons actually are, although you remember that Pinky warned you about a particular Magical Girl having five of the things in her collection already.

"...Officio?" Yuu replies after a moment, her black, amber-pinned eyes blinking at you in surprise. "O-oh, no, I didn't really belong in one. Not like the sort you're in, anyway."

Oh? If that's the case, how'd she become a Magical Girl?

"Through the usual way, of course! An Incubator found me, and asked me if I'd like to be one. He...he was really friendly, and explained everything to me, including what happens if I don't keep up with my Grief Seeds. He told me that...that he only wanted to see me reach my fullest potential, both physically and spiritually." Yuu seems to smile behind the oversized collar of her hood. "He...he also used a lot of big words that I didn't quite get, but overall he sounded like a really nice person who only wanted me to continue my training."

...That sounds like an Incubator, yeah.

"Mind, I was in the hospital then. I had horrible asthma, and it knocked me right out if I so much as run an entire lap...but after my contract, I felt like I could do anything." She grins. "And he even offered to send me a Grief Seed whenever I needed it, so I didn't need to interrupt my training with hunting Witches. But I declined and hunted Witches anyway, or at least, whenever I could find them. I'd like to think I did well enough on that front."

You change your mind, that doesn't sound like an Incubator at all. That sounds much too nice to be an Incubator. Not even Kyuubey's that altruistic.

"Really? Well, I wouldn't know, Matsuda-san. I didn't really do much, being a Magical Girl. The odd Witch, here and there, and training. Always training." A wistful tone overtakes her voice, as if she misses it sorely. And she probably does. "I managed to travel all the way to America, too, one time! And I challenged a lot of Magical Girls there!" She giggles. "Managed to punch out one who nearly killed me with a kitchen knife!"

A...kitchen knife, did she say?

Eh, Wendy can wait. Get the Incubators name first if you can, then ask her about the bangles and Kilgore if she's willing to talk about them, then excuse yourself. You're on a schedule and have several appointments to keep.

As you shift the conversation from her training - which sounds more like something from a battle manga than anything else - to the Golden Weapon that she herself is inhabiting, it's then that the mood seems to subtly shift. "I...I got the bracelets from...from a very pretty girl. She wore this dress with a lot of frills, and she had the loveliest smile, and...and..." You see her cheeks redden slightly. "...I think I fell in love with her at one point, too..."

You let your silence be a gentle signal for her to continue, and she does, but haltingly. "...Ah, it's embarrassing, but I don't really remember who she was. She had really long hair, though, as white as snow...does that help? I know you're trying to find who's spreading them around, I'm sorry I can't tell you any more..."

It's alright, you tell her. You know how it is, when your memory starts to become unreliable. Hardly her fault, and what little she's told you can probably help in some form or other. It does confirm that someone else other than Pinky is handing out the weapons, though...but who would do such a thing like that?

You file this question away for now, and ask her about Lance Kilgore. He doesn't seem to be her type at all - how'd Yuu get mixed up with him?

"Now, that, I remember." It's here that Yuu narrows her eyes, and a frosty tone eliminates what warmth there was in her voice. "He cheated! We were supposed to have a fair fight! I needed money to get back to Japan, so I challenged him, and bet my bracelets!" She growls in frustration at this, and a clump of snow hurtles skyward, kicked up by her upraised foot. "I made sure not to use magic at the time, too! But he found out, somehow, and..." Another irritated grunt issuing from her throat, and she clams up right then and there, pouting even though her lips are hidden.

A sensitive topic?

"...A bit," She murmurs after a moment. "I really can't get angry. I...got a bit too foolish, too daring. I knew it was a trap, somehow. I knew he was going to try something, but I went for it anyway." She shakes her head, before looking down at her gloved hands. "Didn't even get to land a punch before the first shot took my right arm, off the elbow. Next shot went took my legs away, the third..." She tapped her forehead. "Kilgore gave that to me personally, grinning like an idiot. Before he could shoot my soul gem to pieces, though, the Blessed Lady gave me a way out, and I took it."

A way out? Like...being here, in her own Golden Weapon?

"It's not so bad," Yuu says mildly, reaching down to scoop up some snow off the ground, patting it carefully into a ball. "It's a bit boring sometimes, but it can be worse."

How?

"I...I'm not exactly sure how." The girl seems to hesitate here. "But I know it can."

Well. At least you know now how Kilgore got the gauntlets.

...She's had a rough time, still, being alone for so long. You reach over and pat her on the head, gently, careful not to make it a condescending gesture. She squeaks at this, stopping right in her tracks, and looks up at you with wide eyes.

"That...w-what did you do just now, Matsuda-san...?"

You blink at this. You...you patted her on the head. That's what you did. Is...is that a bad thing to do? You didn't mean to be inappropriate, you just wanted to--

"O-oh, I see! Um, no, it's fine, I..." She reddens from behind her hood's absurdly-large collar, and she looks down, seemingly bashful about the entire situation. "I do believe I've been here for too long, I...I forgot what it was like, having someone else around and doing that to me. It felt nice." She looks up again. "Can...can you do that again? Just one more time, before you leave?"

...Well, you don't see the harm in it, so you shrug and oblige her. Yuu makes a happy sound at this, before reaching up with both hands to pull her hood back and down, revealing her own snow-white hair.

You wonder idly if this is yet another bad decision in the making, as you spend a few moments smoothing out the girl's hair with a hand, patting her like one would a cherished pet, while she herself made some very satisfied sounds.

"...Thank you," She says after the deed is done, in a pleased and breathless voice. She pulls her hood back up, her cheeks positively glowing, and you glance down at your patting hand, mulling over the potential consequences of what you've done.

Nah. It's...no. Yuu's a nice girl. She's nothing like that.

At the very least, you're safe in the knowledge that she hasn't read any of Midori's stuff.

In any case, you think you've spent long enough with her for now. You'll have to get back and attend to something else, but you tell her that you'll visit her again as soon as you can.

"I look forward to it, Matsuda-san!" Yuu says cheerfully. "Ah, the way out is through there, just keep walking and you'll find yourself back where you came from!" She points to the path ahead of you. You nod at this, and make to set off - but before you do, you ask her about the Incubator she contracted with. Did he have a name, and what did he look like?

"O-oh, um, the Incubator who gave me a contract called himself the Seventh! He looks like a white cat with long, floppy ears and really cute red eyes, like a mascot...a-and he had this really cool red scarf that had a wind effect, even if it wasn't windy!"

...Huh. Sounds like an Incubator, all right. You thank her for this, and trudge on, leaving her behind.

"Matsuda-san!" You hear her call after you've made some headway, and you turn to look at her, puzzled - before receiving a thrown snowball right in the face.

. . .why that little--

After you scrape the snow away from your eyes - intent on returning fire - it's then that you realize that you're back in the vault. No more snowy forest, just the chill of the airconditioned room and the lustre of the two other Golden Weapons in their cases.

Silly kid. If she didn't get mixed up in this stupid Golden Weapon business, she'd have made a great Magical Girl.

You managed to get some information from her, at least, so it wasn't completely wasted time.

In any case, what do you do now?

You pull out your smartphone to check the time. From what you can tell, it hasn't really been that long since you stepped inside the vault - in fact, talking with Yuu didn't seem to take nearly as long as you thought it would. This confirms that time moves much more slowly when you're taken...well, wherever it is she took you for that conversation. You keep this nugget of convenient information to yourself, before noticing that you've received no less than thirty miscalls from a certain idol.

You shake your head at this, before stuffing your smartphone back into your inventory. Not right now. Not when there are much more important things to do.

Reaching up, you take the chainaxes from their display racks, trying your best to ignore the sudden burst of adrenalin as your fingers come in contact with the handles. Kharn was painfully accurate in her description - as intimidating as they looked, touching them actually made you WANT to use them, to just attack an entire Officio on your lonesome just having the things equipped and nothing else. They wanted you to fight with odds stacked against you, because the more enemies there are, the more skulls you can offer to the Blood--

You spit out a curse as you shove Gorefather into your inventory, right after Gorechild. The chainaxes nearly had you going there for a moment - good thing you managed to get them in before you decided to make yourself retirement material. Not that it felt bad or anything, but with everything that's happened so far, you're not in the mood at the moment.

This left the Murasame, of course. The XX Weapon. Kirika's all but made herself known like Yuu did with the bracelets - as such, you're not taking any chances, here. You grasp it by the sheathe, careful not to touch its handle, and drop it into your inventory, not caring if it clattered against the chainaxes or whatever on the way. It could get lost there for all you care.

Your business done, you slide your passcard at the required slot, and the blast doors slide open to let you out of the vault. Kyoko, true to her word, is waiting for you outside, trying Kharn's Ushanka on for size.

"Oh, finished?" Kyoko says as she turns to look at you, looking utterly ridiculous with the ushanka on. She seems very pleased with it, however, even after the fact that it still smells like bear. And vodka. It smells like a bear drunk on vodka. "I'm not supposed to ask what you just did there, so I won't. Anyway, where do you wanna go? I'll drive, of course."

...Before that, you have to say that she seems really happy with the ushanka.

"Ahaha, well, it's your first gift for me, so it's kinda special! Besides, I've wanted one of these for the longest time!"

...Huh. Right. Well. She should take care of it.

"YOu don't have to tell me twice!"

Where do you want Kyoko to drive you?

"Ah, sure, I can do that." Kyoko grins as the both of you make your way back to the elevator, to return to the building lobby. "Lemme just call ahead and say you're coming over, yeah? Probably have her get coffee on the boil for us so it's hot when we get there."

You nod silently at this, and let your red-haired Eversor companion call up and chat loudly with her life partner in peace. Besides mulling over what Yuu had told you - about the Seventh Incubator, as well as the mysterious girls she'd met during her relatively short career - you can't help but think back on Iori.

...You didn't part ways with her before Siberia all that well, that you can remember. And while you're the last person to admit it, for some time, you...felt something, towards the girl. But was it really attraction, or just plain infatuation? Idols had that effect on people, after all. Mass-marketed cute personalities designed to incite protectiveness and affection, that sort of thing. Your first impression of her wasn't all that great, either, when she yelled at you for smelling like liquor the first time you met. Asking you to take a shower during guard duty, of all things.

Then again, she did start to look at you properly after that. One of the few people, besides Mami Tomoe, who could set eyes on you and not look like they're surveying a pile of garbage. One of the few people to say your name without it sounding like a curse.

For Christ's sake, what were you thinking? Were you REALLY expecting it to work? Between the both of you, a Magical Girl living on borrowed time, and her, a popular idol?

Your life isn't a third-rate shoujo novel, for fuck's sake.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

>>24524827

You are a Magical Girl, and you're en route to talk to a certain colleague of yours. A certain colleague that you haven't really been in good terms with, as far back as you can remember. You haven't been keeping score, but you're pretty sure she's tried to kill you as many times as you've tried to kill her. It's only because of the disapproval of a few mutual acquaintances and an ever-decreasing amount of self-restraint that the both of you haven't made pincushions out of each other's kidneys, or splattered watermelons out of each other's faces.

The reason you're coming over, of course, is to try and convince her that it's a good idea for her - and her girlfriend - to become one of your personal flunkies. Aides to the Warmaster, or something like that. Granted, you're not at all that hot with the idea of having the Berserk Blueberry Bitch within stabbing distance of your back, but you do recognize the fact that as long as she's within sword length of your squishy bits, no one else will be.

It's still a bit of a drive before you get there, though. Which gives you enough time to attend to someone you've been meaning to get in touch with for a while. Specifically, Minase Iori, popular idol and a past client. Things are...relatively complicated between the both of you, and you didn't exactly handle things well with her before you left for Siberia.

You've already dialed her phone number on your smartphone. All you need to do to initiate the call is to press the big green button that says 'Dial'.

Well, it's not like you've got a knack for good ideas or anything.

You press the button, and hold the phone up to your ear. You grumble for Kyoko to keep quiet, and she nods at you from the rear view mirror.

Iori's phone rings once, twice. She picks up halfway on the third ring, her voice hesitant and alert despite it being really late at night. It's pretty much nearly morning.

"H-hello? Chiaki-san, is...is that you?"

You find yourself unable to speak for a moment, and you look out the car window, wishing desperately for a cigarette. You mime the act of smoking at Kyoko, and she takes out a pack of cheap ones from the glove compartment and tosses it your way. You nod at the Eversor in thanks, and grumble into the phone that it is, indeed, you calling her. You're sorry if she was expecting anyone else.

"N-no, that's...it's fine, Chiaki-san. I'm...I was waiting for you to call. I've been waiting since I heard about you getting back." A moment's pause. "I, I may have overdone it a bit, trying to contact you earlier. It...it must have been annoying, isn't it?" She giggles here, nervously. "I...I'm just glad you're back here. I...missed you."

You manage to fish out your old lighter from your inventory, and after a few taps, you get it to light up. The cigarette between your lips is lit a moment after that, and you take a long, heavy, soothing drag.

It tastes like absolute shit, this brand, but it's enough to calm your nerves.

"Chiaki-san...?" Iori's voice comes over a bit...strained. You could tell she's been crying for a bit.

How do you respond?

I really can't think of anything good to say.

Mumble something about getting promoted at work (no more than that or it'll sound like an excuse) and then something like "You wanted to talk?"

Completely non-committal and it puts the conversation on her end again.

Unlike now when she just called like 30 odd times, is still awake and has been crying?

Folks tend to resist such things. She'll be more likely to get even more frantic in trying to get close to Chiaki.

We give her something to focus on and by letting her get a little closer, she's more likely to calm down abit more.

BAYERN MÜNCHEN

You murmur out your reply after taking another drag, blowing the smoke out the car window, watching the gray plumes get twisted away into nothing by the wind. Iori takes a few moments to respond herself - and while she sounds just as hesitant as ever, it sounds like she's heartened a bit by you not being your grumbling self. You thought about telling her off for miscalling you thirty times, but she probably doesn't need it.

"I...things are fine, Chiaki-san. The few weeks you were away wasn't all that bad. Mami-san and Sayaka-san kept me company throughout - Sayaka-san mostly, since Mami-san seemed to have a lot of meetings these last few days." She pauses here, as if trying to desperately think of something to add. "Sayaka-san even frees up her schedule just to come with me whenever I'm out shopping or conducting radio interviews, too. She's very kind and considerate, which was surprising considering we didn't...really have a good first impression of each other."

Really? Well. That's very surprising.

"Mm, it is! I rather thought she'd be all hard-edged and everything, but she turned out to be very nice after a while. I think it's because that she can be gruff at times, but that's only because she's really practical, and...and...w-well, um. I'm sorry if I'm rambling a bit, there isn't really much to tell, really, Chiaki-san." You get the hint that she's hiding something, but at the same time, she can't help herself from talking. "After that dreadful business...with Kilgore, nothing else untoward has happened."

It's fine, you tell her, using the now-spent cigarette to light a fresh one, and flicking the former out the window.

You'd be hard-pressed to talk about what happened to you in Siberia if she asked, anyway, simply for the fact that most of it is probably classified.

How do you proceed?

"Oh, Chihaya and Takane, you mean...? Iori's voice sounds a bit more normal now, as if sounding relieved that you didn't pick up on her tone. "Ah, they're alright, Chiaki-san. In fact, they've been busy at work a few days after the incident. Chihaya-chan has always been a hard worker, and Takane-san even more so. Makoto-san, one of our friends, is still resting up, though...but she'll be recording another CM next week, so there's that."

Hnh. Well, that's a good thing, you suppose. You didn't see much of her friends, but they seemed to be alright, for idols.

"Kyuubey-san told me that I'll be able to work properly after a week or so, too. It seems that he's just waiting for a few more days for the dust to really settle. ...Our producer's told me that I'll have a comeback concert after that. I...I hope I can still do it, it feels like it's been ages since I actually performed in front of an audience!" She giggles here again, a bit less strained and forced than before, but still nervous.

She'll...she'll do fine, you hear yourself say after a few moments of awkward silence. She's an idol. Idols can do anything.

"H-hee. We're...well, we're not Magical Girls, Chiaki-san, but I'm glad you think so." Iori giggles again, and this time she sounds like she means it. "I...I wish I could do more than just perform, though, sometimes..."

You consider the glowing end of your cigarette briefly, before reminding her to be careful with her words. Wishes are nothing but trouble. She should be satisfied where she is, right now.

"...I haven't forgotten, Chiaki-san. I promise I haven't." Her voice still sounds...happy, even after this mild scolding.

Not sure if our Witch form is still Homulily or not, given that Chiaki has had entirely different experiences and traumas from Homura.

But Armored Chiaki sorta witched out, I suppose. Close enough that after slaughtering the entire Siberia base, she was deemed a big enough threat to warrant moving out the entire Ninth Officio.

Sadly, that wasn't enough.

He's like the manager of our department in this giant mega-corporation that we disliked but grew to tolerate and maybe like after all the times he's covered us and hasn't fallen to low business practices and such.

Guys why don't we just have Midori nearby but out of view, and TALK to Iori about it? We tell her that while Kyuubey is a smarmy bastard who twists the truth to manipulate people into doing what he wants, there are far worse Incubators out there. Incubators that won't hesitate, for example, to assist in a gang-rape. And that the magical girls who fall into their clutches have little choice but to go along with it, until someone gives them a way out.

Second, if she loses her career, what she holds dear to her heart, isn't it more likely for her to Contract in order to repair her career as an idol?

You burn through the rest of your cigarette, right down to the filter - and it's then that you tell her to keep the day after tomorrow open. You have a lot of work to catch up on after your two-week furlough - but you think you can manage the day after tomorrow, if nothing else comes up. You'll just call her in advance for any changes.

"A-ah. that's...that's alright, Chiaki-san, I fully understand." Iori's voice sounds much more cleaner now, much happier than it's been at the start of this call. "I'll make sure to keep my phone with me at all times, just in case you call."

...Right. She should. Just in case.

"I'll be waiting, Chiaki-san! Ah, but, you probably need to attend to something else, now, don't you? If so, then...have a good evening, Chiaki-san. O-or, um, early morning. H-haha, I just realized what time it is...goodness, I didn't think it was this late already..."

It's fine. She should sleep. Idols need to take care of their bodies.

"O-of course! I always try to, Chiaki-san! I...I just couldn't sleep before talking to you, that's all, and--" She squeaks at the realization of what she'd said, before resuming hurriedly. "Um, w-well, goodbye, Chiaki-san! Please take care, and I'll be waiting!"

She ends the call just as you say goodbye, and you spend a few moments looking at your phone's screen before putting it away.

That went as well as you were dreading it would.

"Ladykiller Murderface," Kyoko grins at you from the rear view mirror. "You askin' idols out for coffee, now? Man, is that what Warmasters do? I mean, Kharn slept with a few during her time, but..."

How do you respond?

You glare at Kyoko for a moment, before replying that you're just trying to be professional about the whole thing. This means trying to keep a good working relationship with a repeat client no matter what you or Iori felt about each other. Coffee is as far as it'll go - strictly business. Besides, if you have time to socialize, then you have time to take care of a certain green-haired Callidus who's busily sleeping off her medicine in a hospital bed.

"Oh? Heh, well, that's new." Kyoko replies, sounding rather pleased. "First time I've heard you talk that way about someone else other than Mami."

That so? Is it a bad thing?

"Nah, not in particular. Just different from the usual 'Mami this', an' 'Mami that'. Guess it's a good thing, if anything else." With the car braking at a stoplight, she turns to grin at you. "Just watch out, all I'm saying. It's easy enough to get signals mixed up if you just do things without thinkin' about them first."

Right. Since when did she become the relationship expert all of a sudden?

"Aw, I'm just tellin' you what Mami told me back then!" Kyoko turns back to the road as the stoplight turns green, the car moving once more. "If you wanna get into a relationship, all well and good, but you gotta do things properly. 'Specially considering our unique situation, and all, bein' what we are and everything. It's not just getting a boyfriend or a girlfriend and then callin' it a day, it's makin' sure the both of you understand what's up, and what could happen, and being okay with it."

...You're not exactly looking for relationship advice at the moment, but should the time come that you do, you'll keep her in mind.

"Yeah, well, just don't rush into stuff if you're not completely sure."

Yeah, alright.

Silence.

"...Does that mean you're not into that idol, then?" Kyoko looks at you from the rear view mirror, her one remaining eye narrowed at you.

You blink at this, before shaking your head slowly.

No. You're...well. You're not sure. But you're...into more exotic hair colors. Yes. That.

"Hah!"

The rest of the drive resumes in a slightly-uncomfortable silence. But you feel like you've just dodged something horrible for actually giving Iori a call.

You hope that being Warmaster doesn't really involve more of that kind of thing.

You're not too sure you can do a whole lot of that.

Soon enough, you arrive at Kyoko's apartment building. An elevator ride to the ninth floor and a bit of a walk later, and you're in front of Apartment #913. You note that it's a rather large apartment in the good side of the city - not too rich, but certainly a well-off side. Kyoko reaches up to adjust the ushanka - she'd worn it the entire trip here - before ringing the doorbell incessantly.

Is...is she not even going to take the ushanka off? You tell her that it still smells like the drunken bear they made it out of.

"Aw, it doesn't smell that much!" Kyoko grins, still madly ringing the doorbell. "Hah, she probably fell asleep waitin' for us, I kinda drove a bit too slowly there..."

"Alright, alright! For heaven's sake...!" A familiar voice, slightly dull from sleep but still crispily sharp bursts from behind the door, and you hear multiple locks being quickly undone. A moment later, the door swings away to reveal Sayaka, wearing a slightly wrinkled white shirt with a pair of spats. She's frowning, as usual. "Christ, Kyoko, stop ringing the doorbell like a damn maniac---and what the hell is that stench?" She covers her nose and mouth with one hand, glaring at you for a moment, and then at Kyoko's headgear. "Ugh, it stinks!"

"Eh? What stinks?" Kyoko blinks, and you murmur something about the ushanka. She blinks at you, before reaching up and taking the ushanka off. "I...I guess it's sorta fragrant, but I didn't think it smells that bad, really..."

"I know. I asked her to." Sayaka gingerly takes the ushanka from Kyoko's hands, holding it between thumb and forefinger - the way you'd pick up a dead rat. "Christ, Murderface, couldn't you have bought her a new one? One that doesn't smell like a bear fucked in it?"

"Like I give a shit who you stole it from." Sayaka snaps, although you notice that she's holding it less gingerly. "Seriously, Murderface, has some fucking consideration when you're buying presents for people. That's just common courtesy - but I guess it's too much to expect that from you, huh?"

You stare at her for a few moments, before shrugging and giving her a tired smile. Yeah, sure, whatever. You're glad to see her, too.

"..." Sayaka narrows her eyes at you, as if taken slightly aback at this, before shaking her head. "Three rules, Murderface. No alcohol and no firearms in the apartment. This is our home, not yours." She reaches out and plucks the cigarette from your mouth, before throwing it over the railing of the apartment floor. "And no smoking. Ever. Got that?"

Right. Fine. No guns, no booze, no smoking. She's made her point. NOW can she let you in the fucking apartment already?

"Take your shoes off first before you do. And don't touch anything."

For fuck's sake, SHE wanted to talk to you!

"I know." Sayaka glares at you again, seemingly waiting for you to do something stupid, before heading off inside the apartment, the ushanka in her hands. Kyoko turns to you and smiles, clearly embarrassed.

"Sorry about that, Murderface. She's not exactly a morning person." Kyoko apologizes sheepishly. "...Well, she is, but not when you're around. She's not a Murderface person, that's probably more accurate."

That club's got a lot of members, you note, as you bend over to pull off your heels. But she didn't need to apologize. Sayaka's just one of those people you'll probably never get along with, and you're alright with that.

"...Man, that shouldn't really be that way, though..." Kyoko murmurs wistfully as she pulls her own boots off. "...Ah, just leave your shoes here on the rack next to mine, Murderface, it'll be fine there."

If it doesn't get in the way of being able to work together, then it shouldn't be a problem, you tell her as the both of you step into the apartment. She can get pissed at you all she wants, so long as work doesn't get involved.

"Guess so..." Kyoko says, rather gloomily. It seems the red-haired Eversor wanted you and her blue-haired partner to be friends.

You want to tell her to not hold her breath for that to happen, but you figure a puppy doesn't need dropkicking when it's already halfway into being roadkill.

The inside of Kyoko's apartment - or, it should be said, Kyoko's and Sayaka's apartment - is homey. Super homey. It's proper, not too cluttered, and has sensible modern furnishings - but at the same time, it feels less of a safehouse for a Magical Girl and more of a real lived-in home. It feels like where a normal person, unconcerned with Witches and Grief Seeds and Incubators, would spend their day after work. A civilian that didn't need to worry about killing other Magical Girls and eldritchian horrors borne from suffering and grief just to stay alive. There's even a large terrarium in the living room, with what looks to be a small tortoise placidly nibbling on a small tomato.

They even have framed pictures of each other, together. With Sayaka looking...well, happy, or at least bearing a facial expression appraching happiness. You also note, after a fashion, that none of the pictures of Kyoko has her with her eyepatch. All of them showed her still with two eyes, rather than just one.

The only thing that gave it away - that it was a Magical Girl's apartment - was the two weapons placed on the wall, upon a rack. The golden spear that Kyoko commissioned from Misaka, the one with the halberd tip and the underslung bolter attachment. The other was a strange...amalgamation between a traditional Japanese longsword and an AR-15 rifle.

"Sit anywhere you like," Kyoko murmurs. "Just gonna go get changed, and stuff." She leaves you there in the living room as she makes for one of the rooms inside the spacious apartment. Looking farther ahead, you see Sayaka grumbling as she bustles around the kitchen, her back turned to you.

Seems you have some time to look around.

As long as Sayaka doesn't openly question Chiaki's decisions in front of everyone else all the time and respects the Warmaster position, it may not be a big deal if she can't get over her strong dislike of Chiaki. Which actually may be part of the reason why it was considered making her an Equerry, since her lack of affection may help her to see things more objectively than Mami/Kyouko/Midori.

Of course, we may have to package it in the right way in case she takes the Equerry offer as an insult, given how disgruntled she was over Chiaki's appointment to the Warmaster position in the first place.

We should definitely approach the matter with some respect, maturity, and seriousness. Make her see that we actually want, and could probably use, her help.

We really do, considering that the Mami/Kyouko/Midori trio all have their own moments of profoundly bad judgment and also can be too forgiving/asskissing of us at times. Sayaka can even things out a little more there, plus it's always handy to have the magical girl equivalent of a goddamn Terminator on our good side.

It's simple. We flat out tell her "You don't like me, and thus have no potential to be any sort of yes-man. That makes you a very strong candidate for this position. I need someone there who isn't afraid to shank bitches right in the soul gem; myself included if that's what it takes. And another upshot is the fact that if something DOES go down you're right there for Warmaster."

But make it clear she's going to have to be a little more polite. Maybe a more.. Professional attitude would work out. I mean; they're both adults. Surely they can come to a Gentleman's(Ladies'?) Agreement on the subject. Plus the fact that it's understood that she and Kyouko come as a set.

Maybe something like "Sayaka, you hate me, and it seems that no matter what I do, you will continue to hold on to this grudge. While you don't let it interfere in the completion of your duties, openly displaying it is detrimental to the working environment of the other girls."

You decide to look around for a bit, while keeping in mind Sayaka's instruction to not touch anything. You remember why you're here, after all. If Sayaka still decides to be a bitch while you're going through all this effort, well, you'll just have to take it outside with her, but at least she won't be able to say that it was your fault.

You examine the weapons racked high up in the wall. Kyoko's spear you've already seen before, right before she was spooked out of her wits when you told her what Golden Weapons actually do. Of course, the spear itself was commissioned from Misaka herself, so there's no way that it could be one of those, right? Even if it does have the same shade and same...golden lustre as the others. Heck, it even sorta glows the same. Maybe if you could touch it for a bit, see if you hear anything...?

Nah. No point. You're just being paranoid. Besides, Sayaka said no touching.

The sword with the strange sheath is a bit more interesting, though. It's definitely a more modern design than the swords you've seen before, kinda industrial in the way the sheathe, the handle, and even the sword guard is completely unpainted gunmetal. The sheathe itself is a work of art, with an AR-15's receiver worked into the thing, complete with trigger and magazine. You're...not too sure how it works. Maybe it allows the wielder to shoot bullets after the blade is drawn, or something? Like a last resort sort of thing?

There's something tampoed on the gun part of the sheathe, too. Like the lettering stamped onto a gun's slide. You can just make it out.

'Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie'...? Huh. That's...well. Strange name to call a sword like this.

You study the weapons for a few moments longer, before moving onto the pictures.

They're...normal pictures. Happy pictures, the sort couples take whenever they go somewhere. You feel a small stab of jealousy as you look at them - finding yourself wishing that you could have the same thing with someone else, too. ...Hah, they've even got one in Disneyland, Kyoko still having some cotton candy around her mouth as she hugged the Donald Duck mascot. Sayaka stood beside her, holding Kyoko's cotton candy, studiously ignoring a Mickey Mouse mascot dude behind her as it waves at the camera.

That's right. Kyoko's favorite is Donald Duck. Mainly because she finds how disproportionately angry he gets hilarious.

Other than that, they're just pictures. Nothing too remarkable, but quite special to the people who had them taken.

You look at the tortoise last. It's a strange kind, nothing like you've seen before. Probably one of those wildly-expensive breeds. It certainly looks the bit, with awesomely-spiked legs, and a tan shell with dark brown segments. You're not a tortoise person, but if you're ever in the market to buy one, this probably would be it. ...The way it's eating the baby tomato looks pretty cute, too.

You tap at the glass of the terrarium carefully, trying to get its attention. The tortoise pauses in its meal, blinking, before turning its head to look up at you.

"Tonight I dine on turtle soup," you murmur with quiet menace. It blinks at you again, before yawning and resuming its meal.

Cute.

"Don't bother Taro while he's eating," snaps a voice behind you, and you turn around to see Sayaka setting down three mugs of steaming coffee on the living room's center table, along with three saucers of cake. One of the cake slices is much bigger than the other ones, and has more than two strawberries on the frosting. "...At least you didn't break anything." She huffs after a moment.

Taro? The turtle's name is--

"Tortoise," Sayaka grunts, cutting you off. "And we're just taking care of it for a friend while she's busy."

Thanking Sayaka for good work in regards to the Iori protection job is the only thing that might make her sink into her professional role.
Making us appear more human is a stupid thing to do, since that's not the reason that Sayaka hates us.
When working with someone you hate, its better to stick to business than to get into any personal details that will only remind you why you hate the other person and just want to slash their throat open with the scissors on your desk and stuff the stapler down their throat.

Well, that's...unexpected. You thought--

"Not tortoise people. I'm not good with pets, and Kyoko wants one of those dogs that grow to be huge, slobbering monsters that shed all over the place. I've convinced her that it's not a good idea, and she's gloomy about that. I'm waiting for her birthday to surprise her with one, so that'll shut her up." The blue-haired Eversor yawns, before plopping herself on the large, four-seater couch. "Go ahead and sit down. Coffee and cake if you want some, leave the biggest slice for Kyoko."

You take a seat at the single-seater sofa couch opposite, before leaning forward and taking one of the steaming mugs of coffee. You take a careful sip of the warmed beverage - and find that it's actually well-brewed. You figured that Kyoko was just as horrible in the kitchen as you were.

"It's not poisoned. I don't poison food." Sayaka remarks, apropos of...well, probably the surprised expression on your face. "For fuck's sake, Murderface."

It's not like she gives you any reason to think that, no sir.

"Fuck you."

How do you start the conversation? Remember, you're trying to broach the topic of her and Kyoko being your aides.

ease in to the discussion, start of with something vaguely related.

like that gun sword on the rack, if we get her started on what is hopefully her favorite weapon, the conversation will be much smoother (if only by a bit).

work our way up to the topic, touching the subject of Iori's protection and our thanks for doing a good job, see what she thinks of the current affairs within the officio and from there on to the possibility of Kyoko becoming our aide. when she starts to object get straight to the notion that she could become an Equerry to limit their time apart.

You ignore the half-hearted barb, and ask her what she wanted to talk to you about - as you place your mug of coffee back on the table, right on its coaster. You then lean back with your slice of cake, after making sure that it's not the one meant for Kyoko.

...The cake's good. It's obviously store-bought, but it's obviously expensive. Sayaka's made it painfully clear that she doesn't like you, but she went ahead and served you something that you'd have saved for yourself if you were in her place.

"...Yeah. About that." Sayaka takes a sip of coffee from her own mug - or rather, a deep slug from it - before exhaling and wiping her lips with her sleeve. "Two things. First, Minase Iori. Second, Kyoko." She takes another sip, before placing her mug down. "I've been spending some time with Iori, and while it's none of my fucking business, I think it's only my duty to remind you that she's a civilian. An important civilian client, and you should stop stringing her along." You open your mouth to protest this, but she holds up a hand to cut you off.

"I don't want to know, Murderface. From where I'm standing, it could be a misunderstanding, or you're giving her mixed signals, that's not the issue. What I do want you to know is that the girl has feelings for you, and if you don't cut it off with her, you're asking for trouble. You're..." Her face screws up in an expression reserved for someone talking about eating babies for lunch, "...Warmaster now. Don't be a second Kharn. Fuck around with Magical Girls all you like, but leave civilians out of it."

...Duly noted. And you were just about to thank her for taking care of Iori in your absence.

"Eh. It wasn't that much. Treated it as a sort of vacation. Got some shopping done, saw some neat stuff. Besides, Mami-san was pretty busy, and Kyoko was training the FNGs." Sayaka shrugs. "Nice kid, for an idol. She just has her heart set in the wrong place."

Right. Well. What about Kyoko, then?

"She told me about your offer of making her an aide." It's here that the atmosphere in the room suddenly becomes heavy, the blue-haired Eversor's eyes narrowing at yours. "She hasn't told me the complete specifics of it, but...just what the fuck are you planning, Murderface? Do you just want another gopher, like that broccolihead Kyuubey helped you pirate from the Tenth? Kyoko's in love with the idea, she won't shut up about it. Me, well, you can say I'm not so hot about it as she is. I think it's dangerous enough being a Magical Girl, but...being around you?" Sayaka scoffs as she reaches up to straighten her shirt's collar - the small shiver in her hand barely noticeable, but there. "She might as well wear a fucking bomb collar."

...And there it is. Beneath the layer of bitch, bared for all to see, is someone afraid that you'd take away everything they love just by existing.

How do you respond?

Here's the short of it. I am a terrible people person. If I tell the Officio to jump, it will, but I can't inspire or motivate people like Kyouko can. Furthermore, really, really serious shit is in the process of going down, so hiring just a pretty face won't just cut it. I need the best of the best backing me up, fighters and leaders both.

And I need someone who's going to tell me when i'm being a fucking moron. Which is why, Sayaka, in addition to having Kyouko as my aide, I want you as Equerry. The two of you together are far stronger than either one alone. No way you're going to lose Kyouko if you're both looking after each other.

And if you're worried about gopher work; don't be. I'm having Midori as my secretary. For you and Kyouko, it's all proper work taking names and kicking ass. Mine too, if necessary.

Because if it's the second then she's going to be LESS on the front lines than before and with better protection (though sent into dangerous missions).

I don't really know, you'd think people would realize her character development after LITERALLY HAVING A HOMU-CEPTION and merging.

I think a subtle,slight quick thing would be a good compromise, it'd be akin to clicking your tongue audibly when something you disprove of happens.

Murderface is still part of that, though.

Hell, Homura actually did really dislike Sayaka.

She blew up Witch Sayaka the first time round, with barely two thoughts about it, and it only got worse from there.

"Comrades, huh?" Sayaka replies after a while, gloomily staring into her cup of coffee. "I've talked it over with her. At length. We've fought twice over it, too. The cake you're eating is the one I baked the day before yesterday as an apology." She takes another sip of her coffee, draining the mug empty, before placing it back on the table. "Look, I know worrying about her safety is stupid, in...in our line of work. I'm not that optimistic or that deluded. I just..." She lets out a sigh as she leans back, hanging her head.

"I just wanted to see what kind of Warmaster you're going to be. If it was Mami in your place and she asked Kyoko to be her aide, she wouldn't have heard a peep from me. I...I just don't want Kyoko to die sacrificing herself for the second coming of Kharn. I don't want her dying pointlessly, sent to her death by another fucking maniac who thinks that 'tactical retreat' is a totally fucking alien concept." She mimes the quotation marks here.

Well, if she hadn't noticed, you're not Kharn--

"I'm getting to that. I know you're not." Sayaka laughs, this time, and you could tell that the tension here is slowly ebbing. Not too quickly, but enough that it's not so heavy now. "And I'm glad for that. You came here despite...well, despite how we usually are, with each other. You even gave the both of us the choice to refuse, even if it's well within your rights as Warmaster to just order her into the position. Of course, I'd have gutted you like a fish for it - no, I don't particularly care if that got me retired, it's the principle of the thing - but the point is, you didn't. Kharn would've. A lot of the other Warmasters would've." She breathes out slowly. "So, what I'm saying here, Murderface, is..."

She pauses here, looking down at her hands, before looking up at you. Her blue eyes, startlingly clear, piercing yours.

"...if Kyoko still wants to be your aide, you've got her. And...and I suppose you've got me, too. Either the both of us, or none at all." A moment of awkward silence. "But don't think I'm turning into one of your goddamn fans, or something. If I see that golden shit turning you into how Kirika was before you retired her, you're done."

...Huh. Well. That didn't turn out as nastily as you thought.

You sip your own coffee for a while, before moving to finish off your slice of cake. You mention that while you're glad that she agrees, there's just one thing you want to correct.

"Yeah? What's that?"

That Midori wasn't a gopher. Never was. You owe her more than she could ever know.

"...Right. I heard about something like that. Again, I don't care about the details, but sure. I won't make that mistake again."

Heh. Well, for being such a bitch, you're suprised that Sayaka is somewhat civil.

"I'm always civil. Just not to you." Sayaka makes to polish off her own slice of cake as well. "Along with a bunch of other folks, but we don't need to get into that."

The two of you share this...rare moment of comfortable silence, before Kyoko comes into the scene, wearing the casual stuff you've always seen her in while not on duty - that being the black sleeveless shirt under a teal hooded jacket and short denim cutoffs. She's forgoed the teal jacket, seeing as you're all indoors, and her hair is down. The wet sheen on her hair and the scent of vanilla soap marking her out as clearly fresh from the shower.

"Hah! And here I thought I'd find you guys trying to stab each other in the face with the dessert forks, an' stuff!" Kyoko grins as she sits beside Sayaka, throwing one arm around the blue-haired Eversor. It's here you feel another stab of jealousy. "So, uh, what did you guys talk about?"

"...Comrade stuff." Sayaka says after a moment. "Right, Murderface?"

"Yeah." You nod, spearing the lone strawberry on your cake.

Our barrier supposedly had all the golden weapons. Midori would probably recognize it if it was there and she sees the thing. Which she will, aides usually hang out with aides and go together on missions.

Do we have any memory of that battle ourselves? I wonder.

Well. You've gotten what you came for, at least. You have other questions to ask - the sword and the tortoise come at the forefront of that - but they can wait until tomorrow.

You stand up from your chair, thanking Sayaka for the coffee and the cake - but as it is, you have to go now. You'll see yourself out - and Kyoko doesn't need to chauffeur you to your next destination. You'll just catch a cab.

"Oh? Well. That's considerate." There's a smirk in the blue-haired Eversor's voice, but she's smiling genuinely for once, now, as she stands up. "Alright. Close the door on your way out. See you tomorrow back in the office, then, Murderface."

...It's Chiaki Matsuda. You're Warmaster now, and if she's going to be your aide, at the very least, she could call you by your proper name for once.

"What? No. That's way too girly--" Sayaka starts, but she grins as you glare at her. "Fine, geez. Matsuda. That's as far as I'm going."

...Good enough. You return her smirk, finally, before making to leave. You tell them not to fool around too much, since it's already morning and all, and they've got to be in the office in around seven hours or so.

"Go fuck yourself, Matsuda."

You close the door behind Kyoko sleepily bidding you goodbye. It's chilly outside, and quiet. Not at all like the warmth inside a home where...well, two people had each other, and actually worried about each other to the point of...well, this.

Your footsteps are cold and lonely in the dark, but for some reason, you're all right with that.

“Twins, Malal! It is twins! I love this country!” On any other day, when they had a little more dignity and a little less liquor, Annie and Mary would have been ashamed of the way they were hanging off the Ninth Warmaster, like a couple of cheap bar sluts. …Probably. They needed the break though; shit had been pretty heavy again lately. To be honest, we all did. Even Malal was leaving them alone, seemingly content to…well, I could never quite tell what Malal was doing. Messing with a tablet while her whiskey slowly disappeared whenever nobody was watching, I guess. Nice girl. Damn creepy.

The other member of the Ninth’s entourage kept to herself on the other side of the bar. From what I’d heard, she was a new addition to the Ninth Officio, a girl who appeared from nowhere and mowed down a bunch of the Third. …No big loss, the Third never stood out much, but it was enough to put the cats on full alert. Infighting was never good. Other cats always demanded reassurances and asspats afterward, Eightball included.

We were all happy to see Kharn and Malal again, but the fact that they’d come with the Butcher instead of Mickey or Miss Tomoe was…a shock. Seemed like a terrible fucking idea, by conventional standards, if they were trying to put everyone else at ease. It wasn’t like she was friendly or apologetic or anything. Didn’t like to talk. Didn’t like to be talked to. Seemed pretty content to focus on hating everyone around her to death.

Annie thought she was adorable, but Annie was fucked up in the head from the day I met her.

I wanna say I don’t know what possessed me to go and sit by her, but I honestly felt a little bad. It was hard doing this kind of thing if you didn’t really like hanging around noisy people like Annie and Kharn, and she probably didn’t get a choice. Been there a few times, myself. …More than a few. More like a few every week. She was nursing a bottle of whiskey, looking bitter and oblivious to the world around her. Probably lost in her thoughts.

It was nice whiskey. Kong. Fine icebreaker, good as any – I told her it was pretty rough stuff for a kid. Figured she was still a kid, anyway; I’d never seen someone shorter than Nakajima that wasn’t about ten years old.

“Fuck you.” Her response was brief, but deliberate, like it took her a few moments to find the perfect words. Her sheer eloquence astounded me. I pretty much had her pegged, though - she was too serious. …Same as me. Probably got a little lonely, too.

"Fuck off." That's about what I'd expected to get, too. …Trying to be friendly's such a pain. This is why I don't do recruiting. We sat in silence for a little while, though as the Warmaster, Annie, and Mary started to get rowdy, we both turned to watch. …Sort of wanted to put money on whether they'd start fucking or trying to kill each other, but it didn't seem right with the kid right there.

Malal threatened to get the hose, and I shook my head. Told the kid she probably shouldn't see this, only to get a small, frustrated noise out of her.

"I'm not a fucking kid." Came out as more of a hiss than speech. …Yeah, she was right. Nobody in our position gets to be a kid anymore.

I knew I made a mistake as I heard that noise again. …Sounded like 'home', damn strange thing to use as a curse. …That wasn't how I meant it. I tried to explain it to her. It was a compliment. Sort of. In the Eighth, that was just how it was. We were all sisters. You had big sisters above you and kids below you. I always figured it was that way everywhere, but I guess the Ninth ran more like an office, or something. Goddamn it, I was trying to be nice, and she was bitch-walling me here.

Home.

Fine. Jesus.

Kong. She was drinking it like a fucking fish. How about 'Kong'.

"I'm not a monkey, either." That was it. Fuck it. Her name was Kong now.

I took her bottle and used it to refill my glass. She gave me a soul-numbing glare, but I ignored it – waved the bartender off, said her drinks for the night were on me. Then, I smiled at her and told her straight up.

You're a pain in the ass, Kong.

She started to say something, but as another full bottle of whiskey was set in front of her, her mouth snapped shut, and she seemed content to go back to sulking at her glass.

Good kid. Didn't even try to kill me, better than half the people I work with. Still a pain in the ass. …Better than half the people I work with.

Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 1

One thousand five hundred feet above the ground, Odette stared out over the city. It constantly amazed her how beautiful the city was at night, like her own private light show. Yellows, reds, blues - all of it melding together to form one perfect work of art. She always tried to find time to look at it, her little notepad clutched to her less than outstanding chest. The nightlife of the city had always fuelled her poetry in the past, so why had it been over a month since she had written anything?

Still, the sight set her at ease. Odette never got enough of watching the window lights and cars whizzing to and fro; she couldn't help but wonder about the lives of all the people she was silently watching over. Every single little dot was a person with a life of their own. How wonderful it might have been if she could still be among them.

The girl watched quietly, her one eye darting back and forth as different lights caught her attention. Most of the time, she preferred to remove her eyepatch while she was busy city-gazing. It made her more comfortable for some reason. Odette brushed a strand of her short, messy silvery-white hair from her face and let out a soft sigh as her small body pressed up against the railing. If only the sight could last forever.

A soft hiss broke the silence in the small chamber as the elevator slid open. Odette quietly fastened her eyepatch back in place before moving back from the windows.

The person inside giggled softly as she stepped out of the elevator. “Good evening, madam.”

Odette snorted as she turned to face her new companion. The other girl was tall, womanly and elegant, everything that Odette wasn't. Her long, straight blonde hair ran down the length of her back while two bright blue eyes peered out from under parted bangs.

“Gerty,” the small one-eyed girl greeted her. “What brings you here?”

The blonde girl smiled gently as she produced a large manila envelope from her pocket, a small heart sticker sealing it. "You have a new assignment. I was told you would appreciate it."

Odette snickered to herself. "I'm supposed to appreciate being allowed to do my job these days?"

"N-no, madam, it's just," Gerty looked down, searching for just the right words to make the best impression, "I was told this was something you were lobbying quite hard for. I-I meant no disrespe-"

"It's fine, it's fine," Odette reassured, raising a hand to silence the taller girl. "Is it about the disappearances?"

"I believe so, yes," the blonde said, trying her best not to stumble over her words.

"Good. Good," Odette replied as she stepped back up to the windows and leaned on the railing. "Expect a text from me in a few hours. I'll have work for you."

"Y-yes, thank you, madam," Gertrude said, giving a small curtsy as the elevator slid open. "I'll leave you to your business."

Odette thought for a moment, glancing down at her notepad quickly before looking back out over the city. The night was alive and here she was, cloistered away in a tiny little pod at the highest point in the city. Since when had this become routine? Hiding away from everyone but those few who she allowed herself to become close with? Years ago, Odette would have dreaded such an experience; being far and away from anyone she could speak to wasn't always her way.

Quietly, Odette turned back just as the other girl placed her first foot in the elevator. For the first time in as long as she could remember, Odette didn't want to be alone.

"Hey. Gerty," the one-eyed girl called back, her eyes cast slightly downward while trying her best to sound less pleading and more as though she were giving permission. "You don't have to go yet, if you don't want to."

Gertrude pulled her foot back and turned to the smaller girl, blinking several times as the thought ran through her mind. "M-madam?"

"Just, y'know," Odette shrugged slightly, turning her head away ever so slightly, "you can stick around for a bit. I don't really mind..."

Gertrude blinked several times before her eyes shot open and her face coloured bright red. "I-I would love to! I-if you would allow me, that is."

Odette nodded wordlessly as she turned back to the windows. The tall blonde took a spot beside her, leaning out over the railing and gazing out over the night. The two stood in silence for several minutes before either of them bothered speaking up.

"You're beginning to a get a reputation, you know," Gertrude said as she stared at the lights. "The great Odette. The shadow that watches over the city. No one ever sees you anymore. You're practically a myth among the newer girls."

Odette let out a short chuckle. "Funny, because half the time I'm the one scouting them out."

Gertrude nodded to herself. "Anyone who knows you well knows where to find you, anyways. It's not exactly a secret amongst the veterans."

"What can I say?" Odette smiled as she spoke. "I'm a creature of habit."

"I must ask, though," the blonde queried, "why is it that you keep my sister and I so close? Neither of us are particularly skilled or experienced..."

"Can't say. Guess I just like have lackeys," the shorter girl laughed. "I've heard they've started calling the two of you 'Odette's Hounds'. That true?"

"I-I hadn't heard that one," Gertrude mumbled, blushing.

Odette shrugged. "Might have just been some bullshit Lotte made up. How is Freddy, anyways?"

"My sister is... Well," Gertrude sighed, rolling her eyes, "she's about the same as usual. I can't say there's been anything too extraordinary going on with her."

"No news is good news, if you ask me," Odette replied.

Gertrude and Fredrica. Vindicare and Eversor. A rarity in the world of magical girls in that they were twins who had contracted together. While Gertrude could be called the model of a young lady, Fredrica was something else entirely. She was brash, crude and loud. It was always easy to pick her out in a crowd because of her black and blue hair and several facial piercings. Odette may have lost an eye, but she still shuddered at the thought of getting her lip or nose pierced. Total opposites the twins were. A perfect fighting force, each making up for the other's weaknesses.

A whirring came off from Gertrude's pocket just as the pair settled into a still silence. She pulled out her cellphone and skimmed through it hastily, brow furrowed as she read. "I'm terribly sorry, madam, but it appears my time is up."

"Ah, yeah," Odette responded, a hint of disappointment in her voice. "That's fine. I'll text you once I look over this."

Gertrude nodded as she stepped back from the window and tapped the elevator button. She thought in silence for a few moments before smiling to herself. "It was nice to talk to you, madam. Perhaps we could do this more often?"

"Yeah," Odette grinned, not turning away from the impressive view. "Yeah, I think that'd be nice."

"Until then, madam," the blonde girl replied as the elevator slid open.

Odette nodded. "Later, Gerty."

In a moment, the elevator closed and Odette was alone once again. She couldn't shake that feeling of loneliness, despite having chosen this self-imposed exile. Few close friends managed to stay in contact with her and fewer still ever stuck around long enough to have a meaningful conversation. After a long while of silence broken only by the occasional soft sigh, Odette tapped the button to call the elevator.

Heidi Dalia. The Night Watcher of the Seventeenth. It was just past midnight as she stepped into the grimy, still alleyway. The pale girl let out a quiet breath as she leaned against a rough brick wall, pulling her long dark hair to her front. Heidi's pale skin practically glowed in the night light, tinted varying shades by the bright neon seeping into the corridor.

A second girl stood silently near the mouth of the alley. Freida Norton, a Callidus and well-known as one of the Officio's most beautiful, second only to one. Many had wondered if the beauty was faked, but one particular run-in with a Culexus proved that theory wrong. Her dirty blonde ponytail fluttered in the wind as cars soared down the busy street just outside the alley.

"You really want to take a break here?" Freida asked, holding herself as she shivered in the night air. "There's a Timmy's just down the street."

Heidi nodded, making a muffled noise of affirmation. The dark-haired girl fumbled around in the pockets of her black costume.

"Smells like hobo in here," the other girl commented, taking a few steps closer.

The quieter of the two searched her pockets for a few more moments before pulling out a small packaged wrapped in parchment paper.

"Is that- You made us lunch?" Freida asked incredulously.

Heidi nodded as she unravelled the package. A pair of plastic wrapped sandwiches. She wasn't terribly good at cooking, but sandwiches she could manage. Just as she removed the last of the paper, one of the two sandwiches fell from her grasp. With a quiet squeal of surprise, she bent down to pick it up amongst the dirty and grime of the alley floor. Dusting off the flecks of filth from the plastic, she held it a bit closer and handed the other to Freida.

But the other girl was nowhere to be found.

Heidi blinked several times before looking up and down the alley.

"F-Freida?" She asked the air.

Only the sound of traffic replied.

"A-are you there, Frieda?" She tried. "That's not funny!"

Nothing but the sound of cars and city life greeted her.

"Freida?"

Odette sauntered down the busy streets, scowling. On the one night she just wanted to go home and drown her sorrows in sweets, they had to call her into the office. Even if it did pertain to her assignment, that night wasn't one she wanted to spend at work. She'd barely gotten a chance to look over the contents of the envelope. Worse yet, she'd forgotten where she'd parked.

It wasn't as though her car was generic looking or blended in easily. It couldn't be that hard to miss. Dark blue with chrome trimmings. Vanity plates that said 'SLPY SUE'. Eight wheels. Turret. Ten millimetres of armour. Fifty millimetre cannon on top. Kind of stood out in the big city.

Five minutes into her search, an idea struck Odette. She knew she was close, it was only a matter of figuring out the exact position of the car. With a jingle and a jangle, she pulled her keys from her pocket and pressed the lock button.

Bleep-bleep

That high-pitched, delicate sound. Odette knew it well. It called to her. Sure enough, there it was, just as she rounded a street corner: ten tons of everything she loved about her job. Sleepy Sue, the Puma armoured car. Her pride and joy - and more often than not, her place to spend the night.

Odette hoisted herself up the metal bars running up to the turret and dropped down through the hatch. The inside of Sleepy Sue was always a surprise to those that had never been inside of her. The armoured car was entirely hollow, some might even say bigger on the inside than on the outside, and fairly well furnished to boot. On one end, near the back, was Odette's sleeping cot; the thin mattress seemed more suited to be a prison bed than anything permanent and some nights it sure felt like one. At the front end was her "desk", little more than a few planks of wood held up by some bricks, but it did its job.

In front of her desk, sitting on Odette's favourite beanbag chair, was an all-too-familiar young woman. Her hair was long, straight and blonde with uncut bangs framing her smiling face. Odette frowned at the other girl.

"Lotte," the one-eyed girl grumbled, "the hell are you doing in my car?"

"Just thought I'd stop by and visit my BFF!" The blonde grinned from ear to ear, face a bit red as she waved a bottle of Odette's good mead. "Saw ole Sue here and figured I'd invite myself in for a drink."

Odette scowled, taking a seat on her cot. "Not in the mood. Don't you have anything better to do? Politicians to assassinate? Candy to steal from babies?"

"Ah, come on, O!" Lotte laughed, slipping off the beanbag chair and crawling closer to Odette. "Why the grumps?"

"I don't have time to put up with your shit, Lotte," the one-eyed girl growled, her temper rising.

"Well that's just downright rude," Lotte said in mock offence, pushing herself up against Odette's side.

Odette bit her lip and closed her eyes, fists balling up as her anger simmered. Lotte had made sure all the right places were rubbing on her arm. The blonde wasn't entirely unappealing, Odette had to admit. Despite her forward personality, she had a body to die for; even Odette occasionally found herself staring with envy instead of... other emotions.

"You don't want me anymore?" Lotte whispered into Odette's ear, her breath slipping out like hot velvet. "After all the fun we had, you're just going to drop me like this?"

With a grunt, Odette got up and shoved the blonde off of her, moving to sit in her beanbag chair. She could never quite place her relationship with the other girl. Some nights she was a trusted confidante, the next a heated rival and a one-night fling the night after. Tonight, however, Odette simply wanted to finish her work and go home. She didn't like how her conversation with Gertrude had made her feel. It was alien and uncomfortable.

"Wha- Hey, O!" Lotte cried out. "I'm sorry, I'm sorry! I was just foolin' around. Everything okay?"

Odette nodded as she pulled out the thick envelope. "'s fine. Just have work to do."

Sleepy Sue's engines roared to life as the silvery-haired girl began to mull over the envelope's contents. Reports, interrogation logs, evidence files, the works. It seemed as though the incubator had been busy with this investigation behind the scenes. At least he wasn't entirely as incompetent as he seemed.

"That fat bastard has you back at it again, huh?" Lotte sneered. "You know, the offer is still open."

"Told you a hundred times, no," Odette grumbled, flipping through paperwork. "I already made one deal with those cunts and that's a mistake I don't intend on repeating."

"It's not that bad," the blonde grinned, leaning back as she swirled the bottle of mead around. "Become warmaster again," Lotte paused and narrowed her eyes. “Get everything you need to bring down the Seventeenth. You're going to tell me that that doesn't sound appealing? After all he's done to you?"

Sure, it sounded appealing, Odette had to admit. Being stripped of her position as warmaster and left out of combat missions for two months and counting wasn't exactly something she enjoyed. Odette snorted out a laugh. "Aggressive, confrontational and conflict-mongering personality". There may have been one or two occasions where she almost got into a full-out brawl, sure. Like that one time with the warmaster of Russia. Or was it Japan? Even then, the two ended up having drinks right after. For a brief moment, Odette toyed with the idea of getting back in touch, but it seemed as though work was finally starting to catch up.

"So you're just going to ignore me?" Lotte muttered as she took a swig from the bottle.

Odette nodded. "That was the plan, yeah."

"Cunt."

It didn't take long at all before Sleepy Sue pulled up in front of the headquarters of the Seventeenth Officio. The perks of your usual haunt being only a few blocks away from your workplace, Odette supposed. The building was fairly busy, as it was most times of the day. What was unusual, however, was the amount of young girls entering and exiting. Usually one would see a magical girl head in or out once every ten minutes or so, but right now there seemed to be a constant flow of them.

Odette skimmed through the reports one final time before stuffing the envelope in her pocket and heaving herself up the ladder and out onto the curb. Lotte shortly followed suit, deftly climbing the ladder with one hand while holding the bottle of mead in the other. The one-eyed girl didn't bother questioning it as the blonde appeared. Some things were best left unknown.

"So, what did they call you in for?" Lotte asked, staring up at the massive skyscraper.

"Interrogation," Odette groaned. "Another went missing just an hour or two ago. Apparently this girl was right beside her when she vanished. Name's Dalia."

"Dolly? Shit," Lotte sighed, shaking her head. "Heidi's a nice kid. Quiet, looks like she wants to tear out your guts, but that's just her natural face. Go easy on her."

The silver-haired girl nodded. "Yeah, I know her. Wouldn't hurt a fly."

Just as Lotte turned to leave, a thought crossed her mind. "Hey, O. You busy after this?"

"Why?" Odette asked, skeptical.

"You seem kinda down," the blonde shrugged, twirling the bottle around a bit. "Want me to stop by your apartment? Maybe I could cheer you up a bit."

Odette let out a long sigh. The offer was certainly better than what she had planned for the night. A warm bed was a few pegs above getting a cake and watching a movie alone.

The shorter girl shrugged in surrender. "Sure. Why not?"

Lotte returned a bright, sincere smile, beaming from ear to ear. She didn't look that genuinely pleased very often, but it was obvious when she did.

"Christ, you don't have to look so happy about it," Odette grumbled. "You perv."

"Whatever," Lotte waved Odette off as she turned to leave. "Spare key is taped above the hallway light, right?"

"I don't recall ever telling you that."

"Later, O! Have fun!" Lotte turned around to deliver a precision wink. "See you tonight!"

Odette muttered to herself as the blonde ran off. If only she didn't have to interrogate someone before she could go home. Especially someone who was likely terrified and traumatized by their ordeal. It wasn't often magical girls just went missing, if ever. As she wearily rubbed her eyes, Odette opened the doors to the First Canadian Place, headquarters of the Seventeenth Officio.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 05/05/13(Sun)05:50 No.24638901

You're a Magical Girl, and you're on your way to your new apartment. The previous one had to be abandoned due to a former colleague's forced retirment going somewhat awry. You still feel a bit bad about that, by the way - you think you could have handled it much better than how it panned out. Sure, Kirika was a crazy bitch and nearly hacked you to pieces, but you shouldn't have let her get to you so much that all you had to finish her off with was your combat knife.

...Well, there was the fact that you were still trying to get used to the idea of a crazed eldritchian nightmare in a pink dress trying to murder you every step of the way back then, but that's really no excuse.

Just as you told Kyoko - right before you left her in the care of Sayaka, back in their own apartment - you took a cab to your new place, after calling up Kyuubey and verifying the directions with him. The cab dropped you off right in front of the apartment building, which...looks a bit too posh for your taste, really. It's even got one of those fountains with the koi swimming around in it, that's how high-class it was. Your last apartment had nothing but a broken fire hydrant and a bike stand. It even had security milling around the entrance, two uniformed officers with a rather large dog wearing some sort of vest. They let you through after a cursory check of your Officio ID, the mutt growling at you the entire time.

Well, you've never really been good with animals, especially the furry sort. Most especially the huge furry sort that's five times your weight and could probably tear your throat out with a snap of its jaws.

It's a pity. A pet would be alright. Maybe a cat, but you never could stand cats.

After a brief detour to the convenience store for a carton of your favorite cigarettes - the entrance very conveniently placed inside the lobby, but you guess that's why they're called convenience stores - you take the elevator up to your floor. The ride is brief and quiet, no annoying elevator music that had you shooting out the speaker in your previous apartment's elevator that one time. The apartment administration always replaced it, and every time you shot it to pieces. They learned after the fifth time.

You come upon your door. 665. There's a small card tied to the door handle with a strip of yellow ribbon, next to the passcard slot. The card reads, in clean familiar handwriting, "Welcome home".

...You should probably tell Mami to stop being so kind to you, or you'll fall in love with her.

More than you already have, anyway.

What do you do?

You decide to put off meeting your new neighbors. It's really late, and you'd rather not wake them up this far into a normal person's sleep cycle. It's not like the ominous apartment number has any bearing or anything. If it turned out the opposite, well, then that's just really an unsubtle touch. ...Then again, the sort of people you're dealing with made golden superweapons that slowly turned the owner into a raving, black-eyed lunatic, so may it's just par for the course, here.

But really, that could wait till tomorrow. which coincidentally began a few hours ago, but still. You can get some sleep before that at least.

You slot in the passcard, and a green light switches on near the door handle, along with a brief chime and the sound of multiple mechanical locks disengaging. You pull out the card and place it back in your inventory, before turning the door handle and pushing the door open. You step over the treshhold and grope blindly for the lights. You flick on the first switch you feel, and illumination is quickly provided throughout the entire apartment.

This place is great.

Really comfortable.

The lighting is soft and not too harsh, diffused by clever placing of lightbulbs behind shades and wall gaps. The entire place is painted a soft warm cream color, bordering on amber, another reminder of the blonde who'd provided you with the only warmth in your life when all you had back then was a void where your memories should be. Tasteful paintings of...what looks like flowers and birds and stuff are hung on the walls where they'd be too bare. Another nice touch.

The furniture is...obviously modern, with black steel and clear beveled glass - another touch from Mami, something you've never really gotten but at least it's for the stuff that needs to be sturdy and functional, like the dining table in the kitchen area and the center table at the living room.

The three-seater sofa looks excessively soft and comfy, and you know that it's been chosen specifically because Mami had found you using the ratty old one in your former apartment as an impromptu sleeping surface when you still had the strength to crawl up onto it after a particularly strenuous mission. Otherwise, you made do with the floor, which earned you no small amount of lectures from the teary-eyed blonde.

...Speaking of chairs...

You shut the door behind you, ignoring the sound of the locks clicking automatically into place, and you drop the plastic bag containing the carton of cigarettes as you step forward into the apartment. Kicking off your heels as you do so, not caring where they ended up. Kyuubey told you they'd kept it, and Mami made sure to integrate it into the place - he wouldn't lie about that, would he? Mami would certainly do that for you, if she's gone this far, already?

The urgency in you carries you deeper into the apartment, to the living room proper - your stockinged feet making no noise on the wooden-tile floor - and it's then that you see it. In all its green, upholstered glory. Still sporting the small tag on its back that declared it as the property of a certain hotel you rescued a certain idol from being raped, a lifetime ago. Four lifetimes ago.

The most comfortable chair in the world.

You could almost cry.

You're...you can't help yourself. As much as you'd like to see the rest of the apartment first, to get a handle on where things were (especially the guns you've kept lying around your first apartment in the crates they came with) - the call of the chair was much too strong for you to resist. Kharn and Kyuubey had both confirmed that your time in Siberia had been no more than three weeks, tops, but it felt like months. It felt like years. It was simply much too long to be parted from the chair you'd stolen from that hotel suite that you left in a complete shambles, along with all the corpses of the people you killed inside of it.

You walk around the chair, one hand longingly brushing the edge of its green leather back rest, before stopping in front of it and carefully lowering yourself down onto the cushioned seat. There's the slightest creak of leather as the material and the foam inside offers the most pleasant bit of give - just soft enough to provide that cloud-like comfort and at the same time firm enough to offer support to your tired, exhausted frame. Your elbows resting on the armrests, placed high enough to allow you to rest your shoulders and lean back. Your feet able to stretch out now, getting the soles a rest from being on heels for far too long.

You're home. After everything, you're really home. Away from Siberia, from the Golden Weapons, from Kyuubey, from everything.

You let out a sigh, allowing yourself to smile and enjoy this one moment of peace you can steal from the universe that desperately wants to see you dead.

...Some sleep would be nice, you think. Maybe just a few minutes? After that, you can explore the rest of the apartment. For sure.

Your eyelids feel much too heavy at the moment to keep your eyes open, anyway.

Just...just a few minutes...

You open your eyes a split second later, and you're not in your new apartment anymore.

It's the bar, again. The dimly-lit bar that smelled of hate and fire and stale whiskey and death.

What light there was - flickering from above, somewhere - only serving to make the darkness filthy, giving the shadows in the corners a twitching, cackling life of their own.

You pointedly ignore what looks to be the corpse of a blonde Magical Girl, wearing a black-and-white costume patterned directly after the western idea of a cackling witch - frilly hat and all - having its intestines being noisily consumed by another Magical Girl who looks ten years her junior, her head and hair obscured by a white bloodstained hood with floppy bunny ears. A few feet beyond these scene is the silhouette of another Magical Girl, wearing the most frilly gothic lolita dress you've ever seen, hugging her knees to her chest and giggling. Giggling about how sorry she was, and how delicious the flesh of fallen angels really is.

You're already sitting at the bar, your hands empty, resting on the wooden countertop. Beside you is the girl from before - Wendy. The first time you met her, she sliced your throat open a moment before you could give her a Vindicare makeover. She's drinking whiskey - Kong, from the looks of it, and writing in what appears to be a pink diary of sorts.

Behind the bar, watching you with blazing crimson dots where its eyes should be, is the silhouette of a beaked...thing. It's human, but it's got a beak jutting out where its face should normally be.

It seems to blink before reverently placing an empty glass on the bar, right in front of you. ...Well, no, it's not empty.

It's got your Soul Gem in it. Gold casing and everything.

Except with the black spikes and all. That's new. Or maybe it's been there all along, and it's just your imagination.

Whatever. Dreams are fucked up.

Wendy doesn't seem to have noticed your presence at the moment.

What do you do?

You pick up the glass after a moment, peering at the Soul Gem inside of it, and give it a small shake. The bauble clinks softly as it bumps against the side of the crystal. Seems real enough, but you don't need to check more than that at the moment.

You place it back down, before reaching over and tapping Wendy on the shoulder. The girl makes a grunt that sounds the slightest bit annoyed, turning to you with a questioning look. At the same time, she places her pen down in between the pages of the diary she's writing on before closing it shut. Apparently not at all that amenable to letting you see what she's been writing, or at least you think so.

Well, whatever. You don't particularly care about what she's writing. You were just wondering, after all, if there's any chance that this meeting could turn out to be a nice one, or if it'll go the way the first did, with her having her skull hollowed out by a point-blank .50 Action Express round and you bleeding out to death with your throat sliced open all the way to the bone.

"...Depends." She says after a moment, looking at you with her sleepy eyes. Not much of a talker, this one, which...reminds you of yourself a lot.

Depends on what?

"On you, mostly." Wendy smiles at you, this time. It's a tired sort of smile, but one that at least doesn't feel like she's making a fool of yourself or something. It's the smile that someone makes when they're at that thin line between despair and resignation, but trying hard to avoid either one. An honest smile.

"A lot of things, if you haven't noticed, depends on you, Kong. A whole lot. ...I wish I could say I was jealous of you for that, but I'm not. No one in their right mand would want to be where you are now." She takes a sip from her glass before continuing, grimacing slightly as she swallows. "...Besides, not exactly main character material, here, if you haven't noticed." Wendy chuckles at this, enjoying her own self-deprecation.

You relax slightly at this. While you're not someone who just trusts someone else at their own word, she doesn't seem to be lying. You don't see the knife she used the last time in her hands, although you're pretty sure it's on her person somewhere.

Well, whatever, you'll cross that bridge when it comes to it. You're just glad you're not obligated at the moment to murder someone, even if it is just in your dreams. There's...something disturbing about killing someone you'll have to meet in your dreams again.

Behind you, the girl giggling and apologizing and murmuring something about the flesh of fallen angels suddenly lets out a blood-curdling scream, making you nearly jump out of your seat. It's not the scream, per se, but the surprise of it. You turn to look at Wendy, expecting her to be amused at your discomfiture - but she seems to be slightly annoyed, frowning at the silhouettes.

"Fucking things. You'd think they'd have the decency to stay quiet." She grumbles, shaking her head. You see her drink spilled on the bar, as if something had pushed her glass over. "Spilled my drink, even. Never can get used to the ones that talk, or make noise like that. Better if they just stay quiet and be creepy."

The beaked shadow makes a cackling noise before cleaning up the mess, and pouring Wendy another glassful of Kong. After a moment, you gesture at it with your own glass, and it obliges you with a barkeeper's indifference.

"You've got questions, so ask them," Wendy murmurs after a while of the both of you just nursing the alcohol like the losers you are. "...While you're still got time to, anyway."

What's that supposed to mean?

"...I mean, before you wake up, and stuff." The brown-haired girl turns slightly towards you, another smile curling her lips. "For fuck's sake, Kong. I forgot how paranoid you can be. I kind of miss it."

What do you ask?

"...I told you that already the last time," Wendy frowns at your question, seemingly annoyed. "This isn't just your dream, it's mine, too. I know I'm sleeping right now, or...at, at least, that's what I think." Uncertainty crosses her face for a brief moment, before she shakes her head. "I don't know if you're in my head, or if you're in mine, or why. Not sure why it's in a bar like this, either, although I've spent my share of time in some. Anyway, I have my own ideas, but...I don't particularly care." She shrugs. "It's more peaceful than the sort of dreams I usually have, anyway."

. . .This is more peaceful than the dreams she normally has? This kind of place, filled with shadows and strange things and silhouettes of magical girls eating corpses and crying about the flesh of fallen angels? This is preferable?

"Alright, alright. It's not the nicest kind of dream, but it beats..." The sentence hangs in the air as she seems to stop herself after a second thought. "...what I usually get, which you don't really need to know about. Of all people, you don't need to share that kinda burden, Kong." Wendy smiles into her drink. "You've got enough on your plate already, I think."

You let out an annoyed grunt. For someone supposed to be answering questions, she doesn't really have the knack for giving good answers.

"...Sorry." Her head bows low, and she seems to be genuinely apologetic, here. "Not...not really good with this sort of thing. I don't really have all the answers, myself. Some, I...I promised not tell before it's time to. And I don't break promises, not even if I want to."

...You decide to ask about something else. You're still not at all home with talking to her, but for some reason, you don't like to see her this way. The same kind of recoil you get when you think about...doing something to make Mami cry. It's just not something you'd want to do, not even at gunpoint. Even if you've managed to do the same thing a few times, already.

"...Oh, I know about your amnesia." Wendy nods after a moment. "Yeah, Malal filled us in, when Kharn paid us an unofficial visit. She brought you along that time - showed you off like a brand new toy. Couldn't shut up about how you knocked off three squads all on your own. The rest of the Officios were calling you The Butcher behind your back." She smirks. "We didn't really think much of it. I...think we found your name funny, too, until you showed us just how you did it. ...And we thought Mickey was bad."

Mickey?

"The blue one. Blueberry. The angry one, with the cape and the swords? Sort of a bitch?"

...Ah. Sayaka.

"That's her. Mickey. Piece of work, her."

Yeah. Piece of work.

"...Anyway, that's how we know each other. But I guess we would've known each other anyway, what with being chosen and all."

Chosen?

"Of the Blessed Lady." Wendy takes another sip from her glass. "...Like you, Kong, I died once before. Shattered soul gem and all that. Dead as a doornail." A sad, wry smile. "And then she brought me back. Sparkled me up a new soul gem. Didn't even feel dead afterwards. Just...hollow, I guess. Cold." The smile disappears. "Tried to hide it, but...yeah. Never worked out."

You take a sip from your own glass, the soul gem swimming in the alcohol, the bauble gently tinkling against the glass as you drink.

So she's met you before. Kharn must know who she is, then. And Sayaka. You make a note to ask either of the two about any Wendy that they know of. Kyuubey must know something too, at that.

"Prophet?" Wendy echoes after a moment, blinking. "...Hmm. Can't say I have. Heard about a High Priestess, but..." You see her eyes flick over to the shadows in the corner behind you, before she shrugs. "They're not the same, right? I mean, they're sort of similar, religion-wise, but they're not really that close when you consider it." It's then that her eyes narrow, and you feel a curious tension in the air. "What about this prophet, though? What'd you hear about it?"

...You tell her. You're not sure why you told her, but hell, if you want to get anywhere with this line of inquiry - and make sure Mami stays safe - then you might as well go full disclosure, at least where this prophet was concerned.

"...It's not her, then." The brown-haired girl seems to sag with relief, a sigh drooping her shoulders. "She wouldn't do anything to hurt Miss Tomoe. None of us would. It's..." her expression crinkles in disgust, as if you'd just told her to join the bunny-eared girl in her noisy, sticky meal in the corner. "...it's one of those things that you can't force yourself to do, even if you've got a gun to your head, you know?"

Well. You're glad she feels the same way as you do with Mami, then, despite the fact that this line of questioning just went dead once more.

"I'll...check with my own people. If it's Miss Tomoe on the line, then we want to help out, too." She nods to herself, as if to make a mental note. "Shouldn't be too hard, we still have some contacts."

You...well, you'll appreciate the help. It's strange, getting help from someone you'd just shot in the face a dream ago.

"...Heh. Anyway, you're going to wake up in a few seconds, so...I'll take this time to say something I should've said back then, Kong. At least, before you got your brains scrambled."

What's that?

"...I really liked being your friend." She glances down at her diary, placing one hand on it, as if to stop herself from opening it. "It sucks that you don't remember, but maybe it was meant to be that way."

You...have no reply to that.

Well, besides what happened the last time, she seems like someone you'd get along with just fine.

You raise your glass towards her, and after a moment, she raises hers. The both of you clink your glasses together. Silent in this exact moment, in this bar where broken dreams tinged the darkness inside.

...She doesn't read Miracle Midori x Murder Mayumi, does she?

"Huh? No, I don't." Wendy replies, just as the bar suddenly begins to fade.

That's a relief.

"...It's called The Steamy Adventures of Miracle Melanie and Murder Marjorie in America. It takes a bit longer for the translations to get here."

What. WHAT.

You scream out the word as you open your eyes in your new apartment. Cold sweat bedewing your forehead.

What...what the hell.

You'll have to talk to Midori real soon about her work. You just keep forgetting.

After she gets better, and everything.

You glance at the wall clock in the living room. From what you can tell, it's only been a few hours since you fell asleep.

Groaning in frustration, you lean back on your favorite chair. ...Even when you're trying to relax, this sort of thing happens.

What do you do now?

[]Get back to sleep until morning. Everything else can wait until then.

You steel yourself for a moment, before levering yourself up and off of your chair. One of the hardest things to do, at least for you - to get up after you've gotten comfortable. Not because you were lazy or anything - of course, you've been accused of that a few times, by Sayaka no less - it was simply because you don't really get comfortable all that often. Any bit of it you get, you find it quite difficult to let go.

Giving your chair one last longing glance, you proceed to explore your new apartment. Taking particular note of the windows and entryways, points of entry for anyone who might want to pop in unannounced.

some people may call that being paranoid, but you're just being meticulous, if not thorough. Warmaster assassination, if your half-baked memory serves you right, was still a thing. You don't have truck with being complacent and simply taking things at face value, is what you're getting at, here.

The place is really furnished. There's a bathroom with a shower, a toilet AND a bath. The bath can easily fit three people in it, the shower can fit four. Same with the bedroom - you're not sure what to do with so much bedspace. The mattress is even memory foam, the kind that you can place a full wine glass on and not have a single drop spilled no matter how much rolling and fidgeting you do. Silk sheets, too.

The kitchen is...well, it's a kitchen. You don't know how to cook all that much, but you think you have enough tools there to cook up a feast. The refrigerator's full of food that you're not even sure how to eat, much less prepare. Opening a few cupboards, you do notice that you have an inordinate amount of pancake flour. Boxes and boxes of them. There's even a few bottles of wine and champagne here - no whiskey, though. You had a suspicion there wouldn't be.

The armory is another matter. Accessed via a false wall in the bedroom - Mami had been considerate enough to point out where the camouflaged door was, and where to pull to get it to open - it's a narrow corridor with all the guns and weaponry you've collected or stolen or bought, stored in neat organized racks on either side. Each one forming the walls. The ammunition is stored at the farthest end, in a single crate, arranged by size and make. The blonde had even made sure to carefully label which is which. The rifles that had seen better days have been either repaired, refurbished or even full-out replaced.

Some people say some all-powerful being can be found in the details.

In your new apartment, that's true. Mami had left her mark here, for you, and you wouldn't have it any other way.

Other than the armory, though, it's just your typical apartment, although certainly dressed up to the nines. You pour yourself a nice, big glass of iced water, before walking back to your chair. No strange shadows or silhouettes, no strange mutant cats skulking in the corners, not even the remotest shade of a pink-haired goddess looking to tear your heart out. The balcony outside the bedroom, accessible via sliding glass door, could probably be a bit more secure, but it's not too much of a danger. You'll figure out something for that.

You'll like living here. ...It's just a bit lonely, you suppose.

You take a sip of the iced water, finding yourself remarkably thirsty. Must be all the drinking whiskey in your dreams, or something.

...Wendy. The Prophet. Magical Girls getting eaten - in the wrong way - by other Magical girls, giggling apologies and snickering about the flesh of fallen angels.

It's a lot to think about. You idly wonder if Kharn - or Malal - ever felt this way.

Thinking about how things are so frightfully simple, and then stumbling upon more and more details that lead to...things you'd rather not know about.

You decide to sleep in until it's morning. This is totally out of character for you - you're never one to punch in at the appointed time, which for Magical Girls in active duty such as yourself, is around 8 AM in the morning. For someone who's more or less selectively nocturnal such as yourself - nocturnal until the alcohol in your body's decided to put you to sleep - waking up at the crack of dawn is a physically impossible thing to do. And it's...it's just not cool to do so.

But you're Warmaster now. Not formally ratified yet, of course, but you already have the hat so that's pretty much official. You need to act the bit, whether you like it or not. You also don't want to disappoint Mami, even though that's pretty much inevitable considering you're the one she's expecting a lot out of.

...Funny. If someone had told you that you'd be leading an entire Officio, you'd have laughed and glassed them right in the face for cursing you to something you had absolutely no desire of doing.

You pull out your smartphone to set yourself an alarm, when something on the screen catches your attention.

It's your diary app. It's unlocked, with a "!" icon at the right-hand corner of it.

Asking you impatiently for a five-character password the moment you tap on it.

Password time? Password time.

What password do you use?

You try REMOV. It's the name of the skull servitor toy that Malal gave you via the package, disassembled and waiting to be put together by a Culexus you've yet to meet. The app chimes once, and then buzzes annoyingly. The sort of buzzer that tells you in a gameshow that you've just given the wrong answer.

[PASSWORD DENIED.]

[1 out of 2 attempts made.]

...Well, shit.

Thankfully, you've got another password in mind. You type it out, carefully this time.

W E N D Y

[PASSWORD ACCEPTED.]

[UNLOCKING ENTRY #8]

[You're not the most social type around, and Wendy isn't either, so it was hilarious to find out that both of you clicked just like that. I thought you'd never give anyone else except Mami the time of day, but you did, and her, of all people. Arguably the most haunted, the most broken soul in all of the Eighth, the White Rabbit. Kindred spirits? Probably. Even Kyoko got jealous when we told her about it.]

[...Just be careful around her, that's all I'm asking. I tried to find out just what she's about, but...there's just some people you can't read no matter what you do. She seems to really like you, though, for what it's worth, and the same could easily said vice versa. But Santa Destroy breeds broken souls - and we're not sure if they're worthy of being trusted just yet.]

[Her friends are insane. Watch out for them. Easy enough to do so. They leave half-eaten bodies in their wake. Nice girls, though.]

The application switches itself off yet again after that, and you find yourself frowning at it, before grumbling and setting up your alarm.

At least it wasn't disturbingly cryptic this time. It was just vanilla disturbing.

Cannibal magical girls? Somewhat new, you suppose. Something new to worry about.

You place your smartphone on the table beside you, so the alarm'll be loud and clear.

You close your eyes, finally, and settle into a dark, dreamless sleep.

The alarm wakes you up hours later, and...surprisingly, you don't feel all that terrible. Sure, you'd much rather like to stay in your chair and sleep longer, but getting up doesn't take the insurmountable amount of effort you were expecting. You even decide to take a long shower and brushing your teeth before stepping out and heading towards the Officio - but if you'll be honest with yourself, it was simply because you woke up with your hair all over the place rather than any newfound love for hygiene.

Long hair is starting to get to be a pain in the ass, seriously. You should look into getting a haircut soon.

The cab you took to the Officio stops right in front of the building. Some of the usual morning crowd - Magical Girls and the other mundane employees Kyuubey has in his payroll - is walking up the steps, chatting with each other. They'll see you for sure.

[]Wear the Warmaster Cap and make your way to Kyuubey's Office. Time to take this role seriously.
[]Go as you are, try not to make too much of a commotion. You're not ratified yet anyway, and you'd like to avoid being accosted.

You take out the Warmaster Cap from your inventory and turn it over in your hands. ...You're really not all that eager to wear it again. Sure, you're not superstitious or anything, but you're positive that it's got some bad juju in it. You still remember what it made you say back there on the plane ride back here.

Still, you were...pretty tired back then, you suppose. And that was after talking to Pinky, who had been nice enough to give you the hint about the prophet. So maybe it was all of those things, compounded together. And you're well-rested at the moment, so it probably won't happen again.

Probably.

Letting out a sigh, you carefully place the Warmaster Cap onto your head, pinching the brim to tug it down a bit more firmly, so that it's seated nice and well and won't be blown off by a stiff breeze. You do this just as you step out of the cab, pushing the door shut, the driver already paid well before you arrived.

...Nobody seems to have noticed you just yet, from the way the employees - and the Magical Girls among them, brightly-costumed dots in a sea of white and navy blue - continue to mill and chatter about. That suits you just fine, really, except a part of you suddenly wants to get noticed. To arrive with an impact, to have everyone's eyes on you and you alone.

Shit, was this how Kharn really behaved back then? This is horrible. Just horrible. Kharn should be arrested for her crimes.

It's with a cold start that you realize your hand is straying a nearby Magical Girl's skirt, as if just about to grab hold of the material and pull it upwards cheekily - and you grab that hand and clasp it behind your back with your other, just as the Magical Girl herself turned around.

Goddammit Kharn what the fuck did you do to this hat--

You're already making to dash forward, to make your way up the stairs in a horrible rush - when you hear your rank being whispered in awe. Then stuttered. And then, greeted loudly and crisply, loud enough that it even seemed to echo from the nearby buildings.

"G-GOOD MORNING, WARMASTER!"

Your eyes go wide at this, and you turn around quickly to hush the girl - when you hear the cry being taken up by others. Not just Magical Girls, but the employees as well. All of them stopping in their tracks and bowing deeply in your direction. They've also created a wide path for you to take the rest of the way up the stairs.

"GOOD MORNING, WARMASTER!"

You look back at the girl you've very nearly molested. she's bowing too, but even then you could tell that she's blushing furiously.

"W-Warmaster, I...I noticed you reaching out for me, earlier. I..." She swallows audibly, before continuing. "Would...would you like me to visit your quarters later tonight?" She blushes even redder. "I...I would very much like to receive a blue rose from the Warmaster, i-if it's not too much."

You freeze for a second as the words the Magical Girl - one of the latest recruits, judging from the green-and-yellow pin on her lapel - finally and painfully sink in. Did...did she just offer you her body for the night? Just how far did Kharn's hedonism go? Just what kind of appetite did she actually have? Did she really use her tongue for...you know, THAT kind of stuff?

...And she even wants a blue rose. Now you're pretty sure just what she meant, if her blushing and fidgeting that way didn't make it so obvious.

You blink as you find yourself once more doing something when you shouldn't be - your hand reaching out to carefully take the girl by her chin, gently raising her face to make her look up at you. Her eyes are glistening with unshed tears, her lips half-open in the way that a flower's petals are just about ready to bloom with a single touch.

"...W-Warmaster?" She gasps breathlessly, and you find yourself breaking out into a cold sweat in such a chilly morning.

You manage to force out a reply, your voice sounding measured and cold. You say this just as you stare at her from under the wide brim of the Warmaster's cap.

"That won't be necessary."

Carefully, you let go of her, before pulling your hand back. With no small amount of effort, you divert its course up to your hair - raking your fingers down a lock before flipping it back over your shoulder. Hiding your awkward retreat with a gesture that looks stylish and irritated at the same time.

You pointedly ignore the sound of the girl fainting into a boneless heap on the ground behind you as you make your way up the stairs as fast as you can, your heeled feet pounding the cement stairs hard. You don't care if it'll hurt like a bitch later, you just need to get back inside. Away from this...insanity.

Security lets you in without a word. Normally, they'd be pissing you off right now, chuckling about something like baggage checks or something like that - but they're quiet and rigid this time, avoiding your gaze. That's fine. Disturbing, but fine.

You make your way to the Elevator, gritting your teeth as more and more people greet you. Dropping whatever they were doing earlier and bowing at your arrival. Even at the Elevator, where it seems you were just a few moments too late, with the doors already closing on a full load - the hat makes its powers felt, the doors sliding open once more and the people inside filing out. Offering you the entire lift, to use as your own.

For fuck's sake, people. It's just a fucking hat.

You nearly shout this out as the doors close again on the scene of a hundred people bowing stiffly at you.

Well, you're here now. Thanks to the Hat.

You quickly jab at the button that would take you to the floor where Midori is laid up in. As the elevator itself starts to move, it's then that you reach up to take the accursed hat off. You half-expect it to shriek or something, to try and stop you by burying hooks into your scalp, digging right through your skull for a permanent fit - but you manage to remove it just as easily as you've put it on. Just like any other hat.

Something's up with this thing, that's for sure. You'll find out just what, soon enough. Maybe it needs to be exorcised, or purified. There are still shrine maidens around, right?

The elevator stops at Midori's floor, and you quickly make your way to her room, the damnable Warmaster Cap tucked in underneath your arm. Carrying it like this, with most of its regalia hidden, it doesn't seem to have the effect it did earlier - and some of the girls you meet along the way barely give you a glance as you hurry past. Some of them seem to know you, and greet you in the normal way normal people greet each other good morning - and you hastily return them with a wave or a nod or really not at all. Less time for them to notice what you're really carrying around.

You reach the door to Midori's room finally, and you stop for a moment to compose yourself before stepping in. One of the nurses are inside, presumably checking on her vitals. Midori herself seems to still be asleep, and the nurse blinks at your presence.

"Just visiting," You murmur, and she nods after a moment, smiling, as if that explained everything. The nurse quickly excuses herself, leaving you alone with Midori.

...It's then that you notice that she's holding the blue rose you gave her. Or rather, the one you placed on her pillow.

You allow yourself to smile at this, before indulging yourself by taking a picture of the sleeping Callidus. Taking your time to frame her correctly on your smartphone camera.

The prerecorded shutter snap is quiet, but it's loud enough to wake her. Midori stirs slowly, both eyes slowly opening - and she smiles at you sleepily, nothing but warmth in her gaze.

"S-sempai...? I'm...I'm dreaming again, aren't I...?"

How do you respond?

Odette pushed open the revolving doors and stepped into the busy, white marble halls of the First Canadian place, headquarters of the Seventeenth Officio. Or at least, the operation's front. The first three floors of the towering office building were more like a small shopping mall than anything business-like. It was the perfect disguise, Odette thought. No one would think it strange for large numbers of teenage girls to be wandering around a shopping centre. There were even a handful of cake and pastry shops that Odette had a habit of frequenting.

The girl glanced up and grumbled to herself as she made her way to the elevator. Did they really have to put it right in middle of a cluster of women's clothing stores? The incubator probably thought he was being real clever with it, but the sights only made Odette more conscious of her rather plain clothing. A black jacket, plain white t-shirt and a scuffed pair of jeans wasn't exactly the pinnacle of fashion, but she rarely put any thought into her wardrobe these days. Seeing the pink and pastel coloured girly clothing, though, that made her wonder.

Odette sighed and jabbed a finger at the down button. Within seconds, the doors slid open with a hiss and the one-eyed girl stepped inside. With one hand, she held down the 'close doors' button, while the other punched in her destination. Two, nine, six, eighteen, fifteen, nineteen, twenty; it had taken her months to remember without having to write it down somewhere. With a clunk of pulleys and machinery, she felt the elevator begin its descent. Exactly nine floors below ground. Odette could still remember when the underground section of the tower was built, green as she was at the time. For the time, it was fun to figure out secret codes and security measures to keep outsiders on the outside. These days, it just seemed to be more trouble than it was worth.

The doors slid open as they reached the lowest floor and revealed a barren, concrete room lined with yet more elevators. Each flank was occupied by three sets while another stood alone at the far end of the square room. Seven elevators, each for a colour of the rainbow. Odette watched the security camera in the corner of the room track her as she strode confidently up to the furthest elevator, coloured with a bright violet.

The girl waited for a few moments before casting a glare at the camera. "Seriously?" She muttered.

"You know the rules, Odette," a cheerful girl's voice called out over the intercom. "You need to identify yourself just like the rest of us schmucks. No hat, no free pass!"

"Oh my g- Fine," Odette grumbled. "Odette Brighton. Clearance level violet. Now open the damn door, Holly."

"Was that really so hard?" The voice replied as the purple doors on the far side of the room slid open.

Odette scowled and stepped in. Her only reply was to flip off the camera just as the elevator closed again.

Holly Corbin. One of the twin Vanus rank magical girls in charge of running the technical and intelligence aspect of the entire Officio. Holly kept track of internal affairs while Molly watched the other Officios. Dozens of rumours circulated about them - very few had ever actually seen one of them in person, fewer still claimed to have met both. Even Odette hadn't actually met either of them in person, despite having worked with them for years.

The interior of the violet lift wasn't any different from the previous, save for the arrangement of the buttons. Seven rows of three buttons, each row a different colour of the rainbow. Odette flipped out her cellphone to double-check her destination before hitting the middle green button. The tired girl took a deep sigh and leaned back against the far wall just as the elevator began to descend.

The elevators in the sub-levels of the building had always baffled Odette. There was a distinct sense of movement, but she could never tell exactly what direction it was headed. Maybe left or right, forward or back - sometimes it even felt like the elevator was going up when it was supposed to be going down. Stranger yet, it always seemed as though no matter which floor was chosen, the ride always took exactly one minute and thirty-nine seconds and never a moment off. The compartment itself was no different than a standard elevator, save the fact it was missing any sort of maintenance hatch. On no small amount of occasions had Odette been tempted to simply break through the ceiling and see what was outside. It never worked.

Exactly one minute and thirty-nine seconds after the doors had closed, they slid open again, revealing a sterile white corridor with a green stripe racing down the centre of the walls. Directly in front of Odette stood a rather peeved looking girl with short brown hair, parted directly in the middle and held in place by a pair of hair-clips on either side.

Odette cringed and put up a pained grin. "Heeeey, Tyler. How's it goin'? Love to chat, but I've got a thing I need to do," Odette forced a laugh and turned to leave, only to feel a hand on the back of her collar. The silver-haired girl slowly turned her head to stare into the other's eyes. "I'd suggest you take your mitts off me. Or do I need to remind you what happened the last time you got a bit too physical?"

"I've been asked to escort you to the interrogation room and observe," Tyler said, voice stoic and professional. "Believe me, Brighton, I have much better things to do than babysit your washed-up ass, but orders are orders."

"Great," Odette grumbled. "Now take your hand off me or you'll be cleaning it off the walls."

"That's no way to talk to a warmaster's aide, Brighton," Tyler growled, tightening her grip.

In an instant, Odette ducked and grabbed the other girl by the arm, sending her careening over the one-eyed girl's shoulder and into the ground, landing flat on her back. The adjutant barely had a chance to blink before she felt a boot on her chest and the razor-sharp point of a spear under her chin.

"And that's no way to talk to a former warmaster, Argente," Odette spat, watching with no small amount of amusement as a thin crimson stream trickled down the dark-haired girl's neck. With a smirk, the spear dissolved into thin air as Odette removed her foot and held out a hand to help the fallen girl up.

"Things like that only prove him right," Tyler snarled, pulling herself to her feet without assistance. "Still don't know why he doesn't have you terminated."

Odette smirked. "Neither do I."

Mumbling all the while, the dark-haired vindicare pulled out a rather brightly coloured band-aid from her many pockets and applied it to the small wound. Though the cut was little bigger than a paper cut, she still found it prudent to prevent infection.

"Winnie the Pooh?" Odette asked, snickering at the bandage.

"Don't even go the-"

"I've got Disney Princess ones," The silver-haired girl said as she turned down the hallway.

"O-oh," Tyler mumbled. Head hanging low in a mixture of disappointment and embarrassment, she followed after Odette, making sure to keep a good distance behind.

Tyler Argente. Aide to the Seventeenth Warmaster, former Vindicare rank leader. For months, she had found herself in a one-sided rivalry with Odette. Somehow she just couldn't bring herself to respect the former warmaster, never mind like her. She couldn't even remember how or why the bad blood started, only that it had been there for quite some time. Tyler had always been someone who had to work for her position - the total opposite of Odette, who seemed to be naturally talented in every way. At the same time, Tyler had always managed to keep a level head despite all of Odette's provocations.

"So seriously," The one-eyed girl piped up as the two made their way through the quiet halls, "where's Terry? Was hoping to see her."

"The warmaster is busy at the moment. Fubey requested her presence for an urgent meeting," Tyler sighed quietly. "I was not informed of the details, nor permitted to attend."

Odette responded with little more than a muffled 'hmph'.

"And," the dark-haired girl added, "for what it's worth, Therese seemed rather excited to see you again."

Odette nodded to herself. " 's been a while."

"Two weeks by our count. She couldn't stop talking about you," Tyler let out another sigh, although more drawn out and exasperated the second time around. "Every time she gets a compliment, she can't help but mention how she's nowhere near your level. 'It's not talent, it's just hard work and luck!' she says. 'I still can't match Odette!'"

"Damn straight," Odette replied.

>> ☐ archivalfag 05/05/13(Sun)16:13 No.24646208

The pair continued to walk down the barren halls for several minutes, passing the odd occupied break room or interrogation chamber. Green level had traditionally been used for keeping less dangerous persons of interest, such as normal, non-magical humans and non-hostile witnesses.

"Sure is empty," Odette observed.

Tyler nodded, making a small grunt of acknowledgement. "Therese had traffic moved to Green One and Three. She didn't want you to be forced to deal with your... 'fans'."

"How considerate."

Being so well known had its downsides, as Odette had learned. She spent so little time in the building that most of the junior girls clamoured for a picture or an autograph every time she actually showed up. Odette had long gotten used it to it, though it was most certainly an unnecessary hassle.

>> ☐ archivalfag 05/05/13(Sun)16:13 No.24646227

After several minutes of navigating the halls, the two finally came upon the interrogation chamber, guarded by a pair of eversors. One was shorter, with messy black hair and an enormous battle axe held firm to her shoulder, while the second was tall and thin, her hair tied back into a tight ponytail and a rapier sheathed at her side. Both of their faces seemed to contort into a mixture of shock, fear and reverence at the sight of Odette.

"Mi-mi-mi-miss Odette!" the shorter one yelped as she snapped to attention. "Vindicare Heidi Dalia is waiting for you inside."

"Don't recognize them," Odette whispered, leaning over to Tyler. "Therese's recruits?"

The warmaster's aide nodded silently and stepped off to the side. "I'll let you handle this alone. Don't screw it up."

Odette rolled her eye and shook her head as she stepped toward the solid white door. As her hand landed on the knob, the taller of the two guards turned to her and held out an old picture of Odette in her warmaster's uniform and cap. Back when she still had both eyes, the silver-haired girl noted.

"Tiny wanted an autograph, but she's too afraid to ask. You mind?" she asked, pulling a pen from her pocket.

"M-Mona!" the shorter girl wailed. "Miss Odette, it's fine, really, you don't ha-"

Odette held up a hand, silencing the guard in an instant. With a gentle, practised smile, she took the picture, signed it, and handed it to the shorter of the two. "It's fine. It's my pleasure."

The smaller guard gently took the picture with shaking hands, nearly dropping it several times as she did so. Her bright eyes glistened as she stared at it, as if stuck in some sort of trance.

"Manners, Meg," the taller guard chided.

Her partner fumbled with the picture, trying to put it away when she desperately wanted to keep her eyes on it. "Th-th-thank you! Thank you very much, ma'am!"

Odette winced. "Anything but 'ma'am', please. Just... not that."

"Ah, oh," the shorter girl mumbled. "Um, madam? I-I've heard some others call you that, b-but if it-"

"It's fine. Listen, I gotta get going," Odette smiled gently and lightly ruffled the girl's hair. "Take good care of that. I don't do that kind of thing very often these days."

"Y-yes, of course!"

Odette nodded and stepped into the other room, the door closing with a click behind her. The taller of the two guards looked down at the other, smiling brightly.

"See, Meg?" she said, watching the girl stare transfixed at the autograph. "Just gotta ask. She wasn't nearly as scary as they say."

Tyler absent-mindedly rubbed the bandage on her neck as she leaned against the corridor wall. "I wouldn't be so sure."

>> ☐ archivalfag 05/05/13(Sun)16:15 No.24646253

"Mornin', Heidi," Odette greeted the sole occupant of the cramped, dimly lit room. Keeping the same practised smile she had used earlier, the one-eyed girl took a seat across from the detainee. "Long time no see."

The vindicare quietly lifted her head, her long, dark hair nearly entirely obscuring her weary face and looked into Odette's eye. "I-it has been a long time. And I... I don't think it's morning anymore."

Odette glanced at her watch and tilted her head from side to side a few times. "It's about one o'clock. Past midnight counts as morning in my books." With a yawn, she pulled the case documents from her jacket pocket and slapped them on the table. "I'm assuming you're a bit fed up with waiting around here."

The dark-haired girl nodded silently.

"Then let's try and make this quick and painless," Odette said, shuffling through the papers. "First things first, can you describe what happened?"

"It was r-right around midnight, I think, maybe a little earlier," the girl mumbled. "We went into an alley for a break-"

"-you just went into a random alley?"

"It was a dumb idea, but I thought it'd be nice to have lunch there," Heidi mumbled bashfully. "I... I made us sandwiches."

Odette nodded as she jotted down a few notes in a small memo pad, then waved her pen at the other girl when she had stopped talking. "Go on."

"I, um, I dropped one of the sandwiches by mistake and," the dark-haired girl's gaze bored a hole through the table as her eyes began to sting, "I bent down to pick it up and when I looked up she was gone."

"Just... vanished?" Odette asked, cocking an eyebrow. "No noise? No... anything?"

Heidi shook her head. "Just gone. She was further down a-and there were a lot of cars outside," she fiddled with a strand of hair as she spoke, frantically replaying the events in her head. "N-now that I think about it, if she made any noise, I probably wouldn't have heard it."

"And then you came here?"

Heidi shook her head once more. "I looked through the alleys and climbed to the rooves. I called it in maybe... twenty minutes later?"

"And there was nothing unusual at all?" Odette asked. "Nothing that stood out?"

"There was one thing," Heidi said, finally looking Odette in the eye, "a weird smell. I don't really know how to describe it. It was sweet, but repulsive. Like flowers at a funeral. Like... death in disguise."

Odette scribbled down the description. She found it hard to believe something sweet could also be so sinister. "I'll keep it in mind. Now, uh, your relationship with Freida Goldman. Were you two close at all?"

"N-no," the girl replied, "we had only met recently. We were assigned to hunt a witch together. All I know about her what others say."

"Yet you made lunch for the two of you and took her into a dark alley alone?"

By that point Heidi was visibly shaking as tears glistened on her pale cheeks. "I-I j-just thought that i-if I could make something f-for us, we could g-get closer."

Odette made a shallow nod as she wrote more. "Not good with people, I take it?"

Heidi shook her head without a word.

"I can relate," the one-eyed girl sighed. "I can't guarantee that we'll find her, but I'll do my best. Is there anything else you feel I should know? Any irregularities in her behaviour or people she seemed less than friendly with?"

"Sh-she mentioned th-that she felt like she was being w-watched the past few nights," Heidi stuttered out between hiccups, "but nothing else. I didn't re-really get to know her we-well."

Odette nodded. "Alright. I think we're done here. Go home and get some rest. Take a few days off."

"U-um," the vindicare stammered, teary, blood-shot eyes staring up at Odette, "i-if you see Fubey, tell him I'd li-like a transfer. I don't... I don't thi-think I'm suited for this ki-kind of wo-work."

"I'll keep it in mind," Odette said, snapping her memo pad shut and rising from her seat. "See you 'round. You're free to leave whenever you're ready. Talk to one of the girls outside if there's anything else you need."

“Th-thank you,” Heidi mumbled.

Odette put her hand on the doorknob, but pulled back after a moment's thought and reopened her memo pad. “Uh, h-here's my number. Just in case you remember anything. Or something,” Odette stuttered as she scribbled down her cell number and tore out the page, leaving it on the table.

With a curt nod, the one-eyed girl stepped out of the room and leaned against the corridor wall, letting out a long sigh. It had been a while since she had to be so professional. She was out of practice. There was once a time when being polite and sympathetic came second-nature to her; some people may have once even called her lady-like. Now she had to force it. Odette let out another sigh, managing to sound even more tired. She asked herself how it had all gone wrong, how the elegant and charismatic Odette Brighton had been reduced to... this. The only answer was the sound of her hard-soled shoes against the marble floor.

Woooo. Actually got to post myself this time.

It depends, really, on the Incubator. Kyuubey may not do it, but the others may.

She'd probably be more resistant to despair, but at the same time when it finally breaks her down, it'll be that much more stronger, and create a very strong witch. Bigger risk with a bigger payoff!

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 05/12/13(Sun)07:23 No.24781997

You are a Magical Girl, and you're visiting a special someone in the sick bay floor of your Officio's main headquarters. That someone being none other than Hanegawa Midori herself, former Callidus of the Tenth and author of the Miracle Midori x Murder Mayumi series (The Steamy Adventures of Miracle Melanie and Murder Marjorie in America).

She's confessed her feelings to you twice - the first, right before a murderous, insane Goddess in Pink interrogated you before a flight. The second time was right before you and Kharn killed her best friend and her party of rabid, man-eating bears.

It's an understatement to say that she likes you. It's not quite hero worship - you're the farthest thing from that - but something approaching it. From what she writes and draws about you, it could very well be defined as some sort of objectified lust, like how idols get yearned for by every male-shut in. Worshipped from a glowing LCD screen in the musty gloom of cavernous rooms, lotion and kleenex in hand.

Yes, it could be defined as crassly as that, this...thing she has for you. This infatuation. This fetish.

If not for the fact that she saved you from a nightmare she died in.

>>24781997

If not for the fact that she jumped in, without a second thought, into an overlapping witch barrier that she had no hope of coming back from. Without being asked to. Without even considering what would happen if things went wrong, and they quite literally did.

For all your faults, for all your complaints and whining and wallowing in self-pity - Midori loved you enough that she, quite willingly and without pause, traded in her life for yours. Never mind the fact that she came back, although you're not yet sure how she did. You saw her die, saw her corpse cradled by Tiny Pete, the grievous wounds she'd suffered. Heard her last words whispered through bleeding lips, asking if you were safe.

Such a stupid girl, you think, as she smiles up at you from underneath the thick, comfortable blankets of her sickbed. You return her smile with a faint one of your own, and reach out to place a hand on hers.

Stupid girl.

"It depends," you murmur after a moment, breaking the brief silence between the both of you. "...Does your dream involve 'The Steamy Adventures of Miracle Melanie and Murder Marjorie' in America being translated in a timely manner?"

Midori's smile freezes momentarily at this, before her eyes slowly and quietly close. A quivering sigh escaping her lips.

"A-ahh...sempai, I, I think I'm still feeling a bit woozy from everything...I don't think I can answer your questions right now..." She says in an airy, breathy voice, as if mere moments from swooning.

How do you respond?

Her trying to get out of this talk about her creative pursuits aside, you're...well, you're glad she's doing alright, and you say so quietly while patting her hand. This gentleness coming from you must have surprised her quite a bit, what with her eyes snapping open and her cheeks reddening. An almost alarmed look taking hold of her features, one she tries to hide by pulling her bedcovers nearly up to her eyes.

"I...I was just kidding, sempai. I wasn't really feeling all that faint earlier." Midori sheepishly says after a while, seemingly having composed herself. "The...the nurse says I just need to stay under observation until tomorrow morning, so I'll be discharged by then." She smiles at this, but falters a bit. "Um, about the translation--"

You shake your head slightly. It's fine, you tell her. You did say you'd overlook it, back at the plane ride to Siberia. You were...just surprised about it having reached America, of all places.

"W-well, um. The publishing firm asked me if I was okay with them putting out official translated versions." Midori volunteers, worrying the hem of her bedcovers with fidgeting fingers. "It isn't just me, though. They're translating a lot of doujin series and bringing it over other countries. Mine was just one of the many." A pause in the lecture about porn comic intercontinental publishing, as she looks up at you. "...How did you find out about that, though, sempai?"

...You tell her that a friend told you about it. Nothing more than that.

You don't need to worry her about having strange dreams with sullen brown-haired girls who look like they need sleep badly. Not right now, anyway.

"Al...alright, sempai. If you say so." She nods. "U-um. I know it's really embarrassing for you, sempai. I really am sorry about it."

You shake your head again, letting yourself smile again this time. ...Twice in one morning. Strange.

You hesitate for just a brieef second, before you lean down to place a small kiss on Midori's forehead. the gesture, one you're not used to giving at all, seems to surprise her yet again, making her squeak and go completely red at the same time.

"S-sempai..." She murmurs at this, sounding horribly vulnerable and scared. You try to ignore this, and tell her to get some rest. You'll pick her up tomorrow when she's discharged and everything.

Midori could only nod in response, and you leave the room as quietly as you've entered it. Giving Midori a small wave as you do so, the Warmaster Cap still underneath your arm.

It's probably a good thing you took it off before meeting Midori.

You're not too sure what would've happened if you did.

Well, anyway. You need to get to Kyuubey's Office. Report in for the day and all that, see what kind of Warmastering's in store for you.

You hope it's not about paperwork.

You could do without it, thank you very much.

[]Proceed as you are to Kyuubey's Office.

...It's just a hat. That's all it is. A symbol of rank and office. Nothing but cloth and whatever the stiff brim is made out of. Maybe some shiny metal bits here and there. But it's just a hat, nothing more and nothing less. Whatever happened earlier, it was just a fluke and nothing more.

You briefly run a palm over your scalp to smooth out your hair, before equipping the Warmaster's Cap once more. Tugging down at the sides to ensure a firm fit. Yes, you were never really much for headgear, but you're Warmaster, now. Wearing this is probably in the rules about being a Warmaster, somewhere, and you'd like to appear to be a proper one, at least for now. Not because of any misplaced zeal on following the rules now that you're elevated to such a rank, of course - but because you just don't want to disappoint the one person who wanted you to be Warmaster. You didn't want to let the one person whose wish was for you to have authority over more than a thousand Magical Girls.

Disappointing Tomoe Mami has never been an option. Even if the number of times you've done so in the past is on the wrong side of hilarious.

You make your way back to the elevator without any other incident. ...The sick bay's medical staff doesn't seem to be affected by the hat any, which is somewhat of a relief. Of course, they could just be much too busy to take notice. Yes, that's the reason why they're not noticing you at the moment.

...Wait, why are you trying to make yourself feel better? You're supposed to be relieved that you're not getting attention. What the hell is wrong with you?

Before you could answer that, however, the elevator doors open just as you come to it - and after the medical staff pour out of it, you see no one else but the two people you've spent a bit of this morning talking to. None other than Eversors Miki Sayaka and Sakura Kyoko, both of them already transformed.

"Oh, hey, look who's here early!" Kyoko is the first to greet you, all smiles and energy, showing you just how much of a morning person she is. Sayaka seems to be surprised as well, blinking a few times, as if unable to believe what she's seeing. "Man, it's strange to see you in the office at this time, Murderface! We usually see you, like, three hours later or something!"

You mumble your morning greetings to the both of them as you step into the elevator, making you and the couple the only ones occupying the lift. Awkward elevator rides, nice. You turn to the floor buttons, and it's then that you notice that they're going up to the Incubator's Sanctum, just like you are.

"...Someetimes not at all, really," Sayaka says finally, and this time you're surprised to hear the same weary, tired loathing in her tone that you hear in yours whenever it's morning. "I guess that also explains why everyone was murmuring something about the Ninth finally having another Warmaster." A pause. "...Is that allowed, Matsuda? You're not ratified yet, aren't you? How come you're wearing that stupid hat?"

"Aw, she's pretty much warmaster now, isn't she? Murderface can do what she likes, she's the boss now. Right, Murderface?" You didn't need to turn around to see Kyoko's grin as she nudged you with an elbow.

How do you respond?

[]Yeah. I do what I like.
[]It's just a hat. Just seeing how it is.

You shrug at this. You tell them that it's really just a hat, nothing more. You're just seeing how it's like to wear it. If it's against the rules somehow, you'll stop wearing it, but no one's reported you so far, so you're just going to coast along and see where it takes you. ...Not that you're expecting it to take you anywhere, it's just a goddamn hat, after all. Just. A normal. Fucking. Hat.

"Alright, alright. Christ. Calm down." Sayaka snaps, but her heart's not really in it. "...I'll say, though, and don't take this the wrong way, but you pull it off better than Kharn did. Fits you better. Although, it'd probably look a whole lot better if you took care of your hair length, because that's just really unreasonable long..."

This time, you turned around. ...Did she just give you a compliment?

"I-I told you not to take it the wrong way, didn't I? Fuck's sake, Matsuda, can't you listen for a--" Blueberry snaps again, this time with more vigor, and just a bit of red tingeing her cheeks. She cuts herself off before she can continue, though, seemingly remembering that Kyoko's in the elevator with you. "...Sorry." She finally says, letting her breath out in a hiss. "Not really fond of...mornings."

"Yeah, she's not fond of them at all," Kyoko grins, looping an arm around Mickey Blueberry's waist. "So she's gonna be a bit bitchier, Murderface, until she's had her coffee milkshake or somethin', that kinda coffee you order from that posh coffee place downstairs. After a couple of those, she's only gonna worry at your neck instead of biting your head off right through."

"Shut up. I just like good coffee." Sayaka grumbles, seemingly trying to push Kyoko off but not exactly. As far as you can tell, it's just that she's only trying to make it look like it.

Couples, you murmur underneath your breath. You make to turn back around as the elevator ride continues - but you stop as a sudden idea hits you. You pull off the Warmaster Cap with one hand, and then hold it out to Kyoko. She blinks her one good eye at you, then at the hat, and then back to you again.

"Eh? What's up, Murderface? Yeah, I know, it's a pretty cool hat."

Yeah. You want to see how she looks like wearing it.

"Huh? what for?"

...Science.

Sayaka narrows her eyes at you for a second, as if trying to figure out just what exactly you're planning, but she seems to capitulate, shrugging. "...Yeah, you know what? I'd like to see how you look like with it, too. Red and black's pretty stylish."

"Ehh. But...well, I dunno," Kyoko seems to hesitate here. "It doesn't feel right. Only Warmasters are supposed to wear it, right? Kinda wrong for me to try it on like I'm gonna buy it or something."

She doesn't need to worry, you tell her. You're here, and you allow it. Sayaka allows it.

"Eh. Well. If you say so." The Eversor takes the hat with one hand, and then reaching up with the other to pull off her ribbon. Her long red hair, now free, cascades down her back in scarlet ripples, easily longer than yours. "Gah, now I gotta tie it back again later, that's such a drag..."

"I'll help you with that," Sayaka urges her on, suddenly as eager as you are. "Just put the damn thing on already!"

"Okay, okay! Jeez, what's gotten into you both..." There's a moment as she fumbles with the hat, before managing to finally put it on.

There's a full second of motionless silence before you have to avert your eyes at the sight of two Eversors doing something at the corner of the elevator that should really be done behind closed doors. Or at least, somewhere private.

"S-Sayaka...! W-what's going on--mmph!" Kyoko barely manages to gasp, before her blue-haired life partner attacks her again.

You step forward and all but tear off the hat from Kyoko's head before the scene could get any more compromising. While you still don't exactly care for Sayaka - and the feeling is indeed mutual, even if you've come to an agreement of sorts earlier - you do care what happens to Kyoko, and other people seeing her playing tongue hockey with Blueberry isn't something she needs at the moment.

...Even without the hat, Sayaka is still on the offensive. It's only after a few more moments - a few more floors - that she seems to finally come to her senses, disengaging from a tearful, weak-kneed Kyoko who looked as if she'd been the unfortunate victim of something dreadful involving faceless men and rampant mosaics. She seems to be winded, even, trying to catch her breath while Sayaka isn't even breathing hard.

"I...S-sorry, Kyoko, I..." the blue-haired Eversor begins to stammer, as if only just now realizing what she'd done. Her own hair in disarray, and what appears to be lip gloss smeared all over her mouth."I...I saw you with the hat on, and I couldn't help myself, and--" It's then that she rounds on you just as you're putting the damnable headgear back onto yourself. "--You! What the hell did you do with that hat? That's some sort of prank, isn't it? You did something to it, right?"

...You didn't do a damn thing to the hat. You just got it from Kharn.

You are, however, pleased to report that the hypothesis continues to be supported by evidence.

"...What hypothesis? What evidence? The hell are you doing, Matsuda?!" Both Sayaka's hands come up to grab fistfuls of your collar - but she's suddenly pulled back by her own cape, right back into Kyoko's arms, which are then used to pin her to the wall of the elevator. She has a moment to squeak, before the red-haired Eversor's retaliation occurs.

"N-no, Kyoko, come on...! Matsuda's right there-mmph...!"

You pull out your smartphone and take a picture here. And another. And another.

At least being Warmaster doesn't seem like it'll be boring.

A bit more time later, you find yourself standing in the Incubator's Sanctum. The floor, wall and ceiling panels displaying what looks like a bird's eye view of an ocean, centered on what looks like some sort of oil drilling platform or something. You're not sure what it is, but it's a series of huge metal platforms interconnected to each other. Some sort of above-sea military installation?

Kyuubey is there, sitting on his chair as usual. Mami, in her office lady trappings - looking quite the part of a very rich CEO's secretary - stands beside the mutant cat's desk, three envelopes in her hands.

"Ah, Matsuda. Miki. Sakura. Very nice of you to finally come." You cough discreetly at this, and both Sayaka and Kyoko shoot you a look, miffed and embarrassed, respectively. "While I'm pleased that Matsuda is making an effort to show up on time, I'll have to remind you both, Miki, Sakura, that as my two top Eversors, you have an image to uphold. Please, no more public displays of affection in the office premises. I will have to dock your pay if I'm informed of this again."

Both Sayaka and Kyoko look at each other, before nodding at Kyuubey. "Y-yes, sir."

"Good. Now, Matsuda." Kyuubey turns toward you, and you feel those unnerving crimson eyes looking you up and down. Focusing on the hat on your head before moving somewhere else. "As Warmaster, you're now permanently on the active roster. This means, of course, that you will be required to take a certain number of missions every month, but you can also delegate these missions to other squads of your choosing. Some missions will be for you alone, and I will make sure that these are brought to your attention." He pauses after a moment. "This also means that you will have access to our stock of Grief Seeds. You can requisition up to three per mission. Any additional ones will have to be approved."

Given jyuubey's general treatment of her I think she would have moved herself out to avoid the repercussions to her family.

The little shit seemed happy enough to toss her to the wolves and only started caring once she turned up alive and on another incubators payroll

Also the flashbacks may have just been to before she was a magical girl because that was both relevant (her seeing Malal) and a memory of a safer time which was something that the ramen shop seemed to be made for Actually I think they should know about some things ASAP.

Mainly:

- Pinky is probably our fault and we will need to deal with her, one way or another. We should only reveal it though, if we think we have better chances of dealing with her with their help. Also, Pinky`s true name is Kaname Madoka. Ask Kyubey why he lied.

- Jyubey can use his girls as suicide bombers. We killed one of the Saints and there is a fat chance that there is some shit brewing and the rest of the Saints will come after us.

- Jyubes uncanny Interest in Midori

- The dead Meguca/Witch in Mami`s Aparment.

- Talk to Midori about stuff that happened in the Barrier. We need Chiaki to be on the same level of knowledge about the things that happened in the barrier as Midori. Without that we cannot enter the "Help Pinky"-Route.

So by the evidence we've collected, Sayaka was completely under the hat's control.

Strangely enough, Kyoko was NOT affected. I can attribute her attacking Sayaka as due to being turned on after Blueberry put the moves on her.

God Damn, this is a mind control hat and seems to appears that only culexus and those who can do the soul gem communication thingie are immune to it, since this appears to be the only real quality that separates Kyoko from other magical girls. This means the hat will also not work on QB.

Furthermore if we extrapolate to the max with the added side info we obtained from the Christmas Special and Kharn's side story and that Malal made this hat... theres a possibility we might have Culexus soul hiding in that damn thing.

You think for a second, before shaking your head. You have questions of your own, yes, but nothing that can't wait until later. Just some things about Siberia that you'd like clarified, but you'll just wait until there's a more convenient time to.

"...Yes. I understand. Perhaps later." Kyuubey nods, seemingly getting what you meant. At least, he looked like he did, despite his feline countenance not really changing at all.

You'd also like to inform him that the...display involving Miki Sayaka and Sakura Kyoko was your fault, so you'll be taking responsibility for this particular instance.

"Well. This is another surprise." The Incubator blinks, turning to look at Mami, who simply smiles and covers her mouth with the envelopes. "Punctuality and accountability in the same day. I admit, I was waiting for you to turn your promotion into an international diplomatic disaster, Matsuda, but I'm impressed so far." He swivels his gaze towards Sayaka and Kyoko. "Your Warmaster has decided to excuse you this one time, and I thus retract my warning. Just please, try to behave when you're at work."

Kyoko seems to be relieved at this, while Sayaka seems to be internally struggling whether to be grateful or angry.

"Right. Now that's all settled. Tomoe Mami, please give the Warmaster this week's mission lineup." Kyuubey's chair swivels around to face the giant screens at the far end of the room, and Mami steps forward to give you the envelopes she'd been holding earlier. All three of them are standard Officio dossier envelopes - the sort secured closed with looped string. As you receive the envelopes, your fingers touch for the briefest moment - and it's then that Mami leans close to you, close enough that you can smell the honey-scent of her hair, the milk-scent of her skin...

"...You look very dashing with the hat on, Chiaki-san."

She whispers this into your ear, her warm silken breath tickling your earlobe.

You're not given to displays of embarrassment at all, but you're sure that your cheeks are burning red at the moment. It...it feels like you've tied the ribbon securing your collar together a bit too tightly at that.

Mami leans back and winks at you, as if she'd done nothing out of the ordinary, before walking smoothly back to Kyuubey's side. You...couldn't help but notice how the back of her pencil skirt shifted interestingly as she returned to her place beside the Incubator's desk.

"Three missions for this week, Matsuda." Kyuubey's chair swivels again, this time to face you. "Two of them you can delegate to any active squad in any rank, one of them you'll have to carry out yourself. One in particular is an off-shore assignment, but the projected operation time is a day at the most, and six hours at the minimum."

Huh. Well. That's interesting.

Can you open and read them before you pick, anyway?

"Of course. Go ahead."

You do so, and you read through each of them in turn.

First Envelope: Smash and Grab. Off-shore. A small kill-team of three Magical Girls is to be sent into a remote over-sea laboratory and research facility near Singapore. The client wishes that certain items from the facility be retrieved. Leaving the facility intact is not required.

Second Envelope: Escort Mission. One of the most popular idols currently in circulation today, Kirishima Ruri, requires a Magical Girl escort for her weekend concert in Mitakihara. No danger seems imminent, but she is specifically asking to 'have a good time' with the Warmaster of the Ninth.

Third Envelope: Search and Recover. An important client's daughter has been missing, suspected kidnapped. He's requesting that she be found as soon as possible. Last sighting was in Mitakihara Mall, three weeks ago.

"Well? Which one do you undertake, and which do you delegate to the squads of your choosing?"

How do you respond?

This seems to be asking specifically for us, so I'm not sure we should leave it to other people. On the other hand, it could be some famous girl trying to get a magical booty call, and we don't need more idol trouble.

Third envelope should probably be left to Callidus, first we could probably send a small, skilled Eversor squad and get good results.

I would say delegate the third mission to the most discreet squad we have, the first should probably be given over to any stealth specialists, leaving a wreck where a facility was seems too much of a flag and take the second job but keep wide eyes during it

Smash and Grab is pretty much what we're best at, but Kyoko or Sayaka would be good at it. Possibly good as a mission for some of the less-experienced Girls to tag-along; will need more intel before classifying this as easy or difficult.

Escort Mission; blah, but the principal IS asking for the Warmaster, though we're not really about having a good time.

Search and Rescue; Kyoko might be the best fit for this.

The first Job is killing. We are good at killing.

The second and third job involves loads of talking and diplomacy, both are not our forte, so I say we choose someone for it we know is good at. I remember Sayaka being very popular by our clients since for some unknown reason, she seems to be nice to her proteges.
For the third job that involves investigation, loads of talking and thinking that should go either to Midori or Kyoko. Maybe even a Midori/Kyoko -Combo since Midori is pretty sharp and Kyoko, while not the sharpest knife, seems to shit charisma.

"The hell're you sneakin' off to?" A voice cut through the afternoon air as I tried to slip out of the Rabbits' quarters. …Probably would have written it off as something over the intercom at first, if there weren't a familiar form in a motorcycle helmet slumped on the couch. Wasn't the worst person to find just loitering around, but it was pretty close. Blackburn, the second-least-likely person to ever stop giving me shit for this, next to V.

Fuck.

"You goin' on a date?" Least she had the dignity to sit up when she started to pry. Sort of. Much as Blackburn ever bothered to. "You're just about showin' off your tits, Cooldown."

…Fucking hot today. Not all of us get to walk around in freak suits with air conditioning. Not usually jealous of Sab, but…

"Don't give me that shit, man. It's about the Ninth, ain't it? Mal's busy doin' aide shit with Annie, 'n the Warmasters are showin' Mary the ropes. So you're doin' diplomat shit too, right?" ...Sounded like she was bored. But I didn't want to get shit all day for going out on a date, or whatever. She'd just give Kong the wrong idea.

"Sounds like a date." A hiss of static – a snicker, run through the speaker in her helmet.

It was her first time in the U.S. Wanted to give her the tour. Baseball game isn't a date. It's not even worth sitting through.

"Gay." I gritted my teeth and resisted the urge to try and punch her stupid fucking helmet inside-out. Probably would have tried anyway, but the last time I broke my fucking hand. And that's really hard to do.

…Yeah. I realized later it probably sounded like a date to her. She and her girlfriend didn't usually miss a Warriors game. Had to call it on account of the Ninth visiting, she was probably pretty pissed off. Just kinda hoped Kong didn’t get that idea.

I think the bare minimum we could trust Midori with is Kumatora and her team since we trained her so she should be good

Call me paranoid but I get the feeling letting Midori out of our sight is going to be a very bad idea given the lengths jyuubey went to try and get her back from a supposedly secret Siberian installation

“…Hole. You live in a hole. That’s the most charitable way I can describe it.” I looked over long enough to give her a dirty look, but…shit. She was smiling, just a little. Bit back what I was going to say, and gave hime-sama my sincerest apologies for the state of our living quarters. It was, after all, a Rabbit hole.

There went the smile, as she looked like she was trying to wish me dead. …Worth it. We made dumb small talk to break up the monotony of the trip. Burger Suplex wasn’t too far away from HQ – we were pretty sure Eightball owned the place. It was right next to most of the Eighth’s auxiliary housing and offered discounts for magical girls.

Pretty much lived there, most of the time - at least, when I was green. Most nights anymore, Nakajima or Wright cooked. Or me. Burger Suplex had the best fucking food in Santa Destroy, though. Fresh beef, no processed meat slurry bullshit. They had a guy in the back that powerbombed the cows to death every morning. …Kong seemed much less impressed by that fact than I was, but fuck her.

Fuck did she know about burgers, anyway?

Knew what I wanted right away when we got inside, but it was harder to tell what she wanted. All I’d heard was that she really liked pancakes, or something. …Thought about making those for her instead of taking her out, but she’d be missing out. Didn’t need to get any weirder, anyway. Ended up throwing out suggestions until somethin’ clicked. Really seemed sad the breakfast menu wasn’t available, though. …I’d remember that for next time.

Got a large Hurricanrana Combo and a Hassy. She got a Half-Nelson and some iced tea. …Tea tasted like shit, we ended up splitting the Hassy. Coulda told her that was coming. Ended up splitting the fries, too. …Things got a little weird a couple of times, when we reached for the same one. First time we both just grabbed it and ripped the thing in half. I just let her have the rest. She didn't even seem to notice, but I dunno if I normally would've, either.

This whole fucking thing really put me on edge. This host shit wasn't me. This was stuff Annie usually did, but she'd just gotten promoted to Equerry. Had a job to do now.

So much easier when I could just stab people.

Home. She made that noise again when I brought up the baseball game. Didn't seem to be a fan. …Neither was I, but Mary had tickets. Good tickets she couldn't use, right up front. And I sure as hell wasn't going to take Kong to a movie. Tried to tell her the riots were usually worth hanging around for, and reassured her that there were always riots.

Annie told me once that the Warriors were a lot like the, uh…Henshin Tigers or something, over in Japan. Osaka. Shitty team with obsessive, violent fans. Every time I'd been to a Warriors game, they'd lost, and people started tilting cars and beating each other with pipes. We started using the riots to train new girls. The ones that got through it conscious and mostly not on fucking fire usually went on to become Eversors, and a couple of those Eversors eventually became Rabbits.

Wasn't me. We didn't get off that easy. But I wasn't going to take her to the fucking gardening section in Black Market. Wouldn't inflict that on anyone else, not as long as I lived.

…She didn't really understand the Henshin Tigers thing. Guess it wasn't that big a deal over there, either – just Annie being Annie.

Most of the conversation as the game started was about how it was way too fucking hot out to be sitting in the stands. Kind of glad it wasn't just me, but I guess she didn't bring lighter clothes. Definitely her first time in California. Wish I could've lent her a lighter shirt or something.

Things quieted down after the first pitch was thrown, and I was pretty sure that was that. This whole thing was probably a bust. Should have just taken her out to a bar or something. Nothing to see in this city unless you want to see broken people kill each other. …At least, that's what I got stuck on. Barely paid attention to the game, up until she nudged me in the side.

"I think I could kill the batter from here." When I looked over, she had that small smile again. …Barely more than a tug on the corner of her mouth. I couldn't tell if she was really thinking about doing it, but god knows I usually did. It…probably wasn't right, that once we started talking about killing, it all spilled out. Conversation came…easy. We both liked our work. The people we worked with. Our roles in this fucked-up world. We told stories. Laughed a little. Could barely hear each other over the game we were ignoring.

After it was over, we sat in a parking lot on the hood of my shitty old Crown Victoria a few blocks away, watching the fireworks. And the fires. There was always a riot after a Warriors game, but for a change, this one was a celebration riot. The Warriors won their first game of the season. Some new guy they picked up in Alabama hit a grand slam his first time up at bat. …Mary was going to be pissed she missed it.

…Wouldn't have minded if it lasted a little longer. Even though police sirens wailed in the distance, it was…peaceful. Kong reminded me of a battlefield, after the dust had settled. She had a grim serenity to her, even if she was probably even more awkward than I was.

…Made her pancakes before she headed back. Just once. …Didn't really mean anything.

Just wanted her to know...we were friends.

Prose Magica
The Ballad of the Seventeenth

Therese Witton snoozed soundly, hugging her bedsheets tight to her chest. With a slight, cat-like grin, she licked her lips and turned over, mumbling and grumbling contentedly. Her long, fluffy auburn hair was splayed out across the pink and white sheets, making her look quite the opposite of what one would expect from a warmaster.

Bree-dee-deep.

Therese's brow furrowed at the noise as she shoved her face further into her pillow.

Bree-dee-deep. Bree-dee-deep.

Therese's eyes squeezed shut. Her mouth flattened and the edges of her lips tightened.

Bree-dee-dee-

In one single swift motion, Therese cupped a hand around the back of her alarm clock and heaved it across the room, tearing the plug out of the socket as it flew straight into the far wall. The poor clock shattered on impact, sending glass and plastic flying outward in a hail of shrapnel. The warmaster sat up in bed , a groggy, grumpy frown on her face, and turned off her beeping cellphone.

Therese Witton. Warmaster of the Seventeenth. At first glance, she'd look to be the paragon of everything it meant to be a magical girl. Kind, gentle, a peach-pastel coloured costume with an awful abundance of frills. But as anyone in the Seventeenth Officio could tell you, the girl had a temper like thermite and the power to back it up. There were dozens of rumours floating around concerning incidents where she flew off the handle over something minor. Most had at least a grain of truth to them.

A light knock sounded on her bedroom door before it slowly creaked open, revealing Tyler's cautious face.

"W-warmaster?" She asked.

"Mornin', Tyyy," the warmaster drawled sleepily, looking at the dark-haired aide through half-lidded eyes.

Tyler shook her head as she stepped into the room carrying a tray, topped with a bowl of cereal and juice. "You're still half-asleep," the aide groaned, setting the tray down next to Therese. "Drink your orange juice, warmaster."

The warmaster's aide cupped a hand on her cheek as she watched the other girl happily sip her juice through a straw, not doing a terribly good job of hiding how dearly she adored the warmaster when she was sleepy. Slowly but surely, Therese's eyes opened wider and grew more alert as the juice emptied.

As the last of the orange liquid emptied, the warmaster let out a satisfied sigh and looked up at her aide. "That's some good stuff. Mornin' Tyler. What's on the agenda today?"

"Good morning, warmaster," Tyler replied, giving a gentle nod. "It seems we'll be having another easy day today. Fubey wished to speak with you when you woke up. You'll be addressing Valkyrie Squad at ten. They're all a bit... you know."

Therese made a shallow nod, her mouth still on her straw. "Any sign of Frieda?"

"Not yet," the short-haired girl mumbled. "Brighton's on the case, but," Tyler glanced off to the side, embarrassment colouring her face, "you know how I feel about her."

The warmaster rolled her eyes just as something caught her attention. She blinked several times before asking, "Tyler, what happened to your neck?"

"Ah! Uh," the other girl reached up to the Winnie the Pooh band-aid and held her hand over it. "I, uh, I fell. You know. Getting out of the elevator. There's that litt-"

"You were with Odette last night, weren't you?" Therese asked, her voice growing stern.

"I-"

"You provoked her," she continued as her eyes narrowed, "didn't you?"

"I- No- I didn't-"

"Toooootally provoked," called a sing-song voice from Therese's cell, somehow switching itself to speaker-phone.

"Good morning to you too, Holly," the warmaster answered. "Exactly how long have you been eaves-dropping?"

"Mornin' boss. Just doin' my job, ma'am," the vanus replied, the distinct sound of furious typing coming through the phone. "You should have seen it. Tyler grabbed Odette, and then Odette was all like 'Getcher mitts off me, punk.' and then Tyler was like 'That's no way to talk to a warmaster's aide, Brighton.' and, and-" Holly took took a deep breath, clearly having run out of oxygen. "Long story short, Patchy handed Ty her ass on a platter. It was awesome."

Therese pinched her brow and grimaced, letting out an exasperated sigh. "Tyler..."

"I- That wasn-"

"Please stop talking," Therese growled, turning her head up just enough to look her aide in the eye. "I've been awake for all of ten minutes and I'm already upset with you. If you continue to pick fights with Odette, I'll have no choice but to demote you. Am I understood?"

"But-"

"Am. I. Understood?"

Tyler simply gulped and stared down, a mixture of shame and anger running through her. "Yes, ma'am."

"Good. You're already on your second chance. I'd rather not have to repeat myself," the warmaster shook her head before taking a deep breath and regaining her composure. "Holly, do you have anything else to report?"

"Uh, lemme see," Holly went quiet for a few moments; only the sound of fingers on keys signalled that the line hadn't gone dead. "May reports that West HQ has had an above average number of witches in the past two weeks, but nothing to be concerned about yet. All quiet in Montreal and Calgary. Maritime HQ fought a witch that looked like a giant lobster girl, but that's neither here nor there-"

"Thank you, Holly. I believe that will be all," Therese interrupted as she heaved herself out of bed. "Can you put Molly on? I'd like an update from her."

"Oh! Yeah yeah! Right away, boss!"

There was a distinct click as the line went dead for a few moments, leaving the warmaster and her second in a rather awkward silence.

"Warmaster." Asked a rather dry voice from the phone as the sound of typing resumed. The voice was nearly identical to Holly's, save how dead-pan and tired the new girl sounded. If they actually put the effort into it, the two could easily pose as each other - some even thought they did on occasion.

"Good morning, Molly," Therese greeted the new voice, picking up her clothes from around the room. Tyler took that as her cue to step out for the time being. "Anything to report?"

"Oh. Oh yeah," the vanus answered, sounding slightly off guard. "Those attacks on our database? The ones I've been working my ass off to fight? They stopped last night."

The auburn-haired girl glanced at the phone as she buttoned up her shirt. "They... what?"

"Totally ceased. A little after midnight, I'd say. Dunno why considering they can't have gotten anything. They clearly had the resources to keep it up if they wanted to, but whatever. I'm not complaining," Therese could almost HEAR the shrug on the other end. "Oh and, uh, there've been a few more reports from the other officios. More of those golden weapons popping up. Maybe we should look into them, just in case."

Therese shook her head. "You know it's not our way to go looking for trouble. Fubey has always said as much."

"Sorry, let me rephrase that," Molly said, managing to sound even more dead-pan than before, "we REALLY need to look into this. Big things are in motion and we're gonna be stuck in the middle of it if we don't act."

"I'll see what I can do, but no promises," Therese replied as she held up different kinds of legwear, then glanced at her phone. "Skirt or pants?"

"Skirt, I guess. But, hotpants and thighhighs would look great with that outfit. You've definitely got the legs for it. Just sayin'."

"Skirt it is then," the warmaster decided, turning slightly pink at the vanus' comment.

"A storm's coming, Terry," Holly's voice changed as she spoke, becoming more clear and stern to the point that Therese almost thought she was a different person altogether. "I don't know about you, but I don't want to get caught without an umbrella. Don't say I didn't warn you."

Therese made a shallow nod, barely noticeable to the inattentive. With another long sigh, she fastened her cap, threw on her coat in a dramatic flourish and stepped out into the hall.

Odette cracked open a tired eye and looked up at her clock. It was already eleven in the morning. With a disgruntled huff, she made to get out of bed... but only succeeded in vainly squirming against the arms holding her back. The smaller girl groaned as she tried to pull out of Lotte's vice grip around her waist. The perennial little spoon. Odette knew that she would be lucky if the other girl woke up before noon.

With no small amount of effort, Odette managed wriggle her way lower and lower until Lotte's arms were around her head. The fact that she could manage such a feat came as bittersweet to the smaller, silvery-haired girl. Just as she was about to free herself, the larger girl pulled Odette in tightly, mashing the back of her head into her sizable breasts.

"Grk-"

After a few long, agonizing moments, Lotte's grip loosened and Odette managed to liberate herself, jamming a pillow in the other girl's arms to take her place. It took several minutes for Odette to find her underwear again; somehow her panties had ended up inside of the bedside lamp. She made a muted sigh as she pulled on her bra, always feeling as though the nearly-flat piece of spongy fabric was somehow mocking her.

Her jeans and usual white t-shirt, however, were found in a neat pile at the foot of the bed. It had been quite some time since Odette had actually bothered to clothe herself while in the comfort of her own home.

Thankfully, she hadn't been careless enough to remove her eyepatch in the heat of the moment. Odette hated showing others what was under it; it made her feel vulnerable, as though someone knew her darkest secret.

Having gotten dressed, Odette left the bedroom behind and made her way to the little nook that passed for a kitchen. Opening the dirty and scuffed fridge, Odette scanned her collection of various juices, having a bottle of nearly every flavour. She had never liked coffee and drinking in the morning ... Well, she had finally gotten her assignment. It was about time she tried turning over a new leaf. Maybe this one wouldn't shrivel up and fall off the tree. With a nod, she decided that a good day had to start just right. Peach juice. Her very favourite.

Despite not having been home in over a week, everything seemed rather clean, Odette noted as popped a slice of bread in the toaster. Lotte or Therese must have made sure to come by and tidy up while she was out. Everyone always seemed so concerned about her well-being ever since her demotion. She didn't need to be babied just because she had lost her rank, she told herself. After two months of peace and quiet, she was finally getting used to it. Of course, it had to be just then that work fell into her lap.

As she waited for her toast to toast, Odette took up her notepad from the counter and took a seat at the tiny kitchen table. However, upon seeing the lacy, pink, t-shaped piece of fabric hanging off the edge, she quickly changed her mind and moved to the window sill. The sky was growing darker, she noted. She'd have to make it to the scene of Frieda's disappearance before the rain washed any evidence away.

Her poetry absorbed her, despite not managing to write a single word. She didn't pay attention to how long she stared at that blank page, wishing she could come up with SOMETHING just to let everything out. Depression, anger, frustration, all of it had been balled up inside of her for two months now. The world around her dissolved as she stared at the words she never wrote. She stared down from her checker-board tower as a field stretched out before her, measuring a hundred miles in every direction. Odette turned as she heard footsteps approaching from the void behind her.

She made a bemused snort as the figure took its place beside her. "Haven't seen you in a while."

The figure nodded. "Two months, was it?"

Odette chuckled to herself and focused down on the field below them. "Something like that."

The figure took a seat on the windowsill across from Odette, the pair formed a perfect symmetry as she pulled her knee up to her chin. Odette spared her a glance. Silvery-white hair, beautiful blue eyes shimmering like twin oceans, all topped off with a black baseball cap.

"Thought you were dead," Odette stated, smirking at the other girl.

"As did I, but apparently not," the white-haired girl shifted her eyes down to the pad of paper in Odette's hands, then back to the one-eyed girl herself. "Still writing, are you?"

"I try, but my brain seems to disapprove."

Odette looked back down, just as the field shifted for a moment. A brief flash that disappeared as quickly as it came. A battle raged. Magical girl against magical girl, sister against sister.

"What is all that?" Odette asked, gesturing down at the field.

That which has not yet come to be. It might, it might not. Maybe," the other girl twirled a strand of her flowing hair as she smiled ever so gently. "Either way, we'll see soon enough. It looks like something you'd enjoy, though, doesn't it? Getting to loose that fury and savagery upon whoever you so desire. That's what they called you, isn't? After... you know. Odette the Furious, was it?"

"Was one of my titles, yeah," Odette laughed. "I always liked Odette the Wanderer better. Had a certain ring to it."

The other girl giggled softly to herself. "It does suit you, I must say. Tell me, do you still like sweet things?"

"Love 'em."

"Good, good. At least you still have pieces of your old self. You were so pretty back the-"

"Let's not," Odette cut in, glaring at her conversation partner.

The white-haired girl grinned devilishly. "Touchy, touchy. Did I hit a sore spot?"

"So this is why you showed up," the short-haired girl snarled.

"Honestly, Odette. Look at what you've done with yourself," the other girl chided, her grin growing. "I'd give you my help if you only ask-"

"You're the last person I want help from," Odette growled, punctuating her statement by snapping her notepad shut. "Who are you? My mom?"

"Oh, so you won't accept MY help but you're all buddy-buddy with that- that WHORE. Anyone with eyes could tell how much she's playing the field-"

In a blur of motion, Odette grabbed the other girl by the frilly shoulder-straps of her costume and shoved her against the window frame. "Don't talk about Lotte that way."

"You're really going to stand up for her?" The white-haired girl spat, her beautiful face contorted into an ugly grimace. "After all she did to you, you're still going to defend her?"

"I-"

"Come on, Odette!" She growled, gritting her teeth. "You remember, don't you?"

Odette tightened her fingers around the other girl's shoulder straps and screamed, "LOTTE DIDN'T MEAN TO KILL HER!"

Her apartment snapped back into place around her just as the sound left her lips, while a quite whisper found it's way into her ear.

"Don't say I didn't warn you."

Odette's hands were shaking, her breath was ragged and, strangely enough, the open page in her notepad - which she swore she had closed - was filled. Lotte poked her head in from the bedroom and blinked several times before speaking up.

"Uh, y-you okay, O?" The blonde asked. "Heard you talking and then you yelled my name, and not in the good way."

"'m good." The shorter girl mumbled, hopping down from the windowsill and gulping down what was left of her juice.

"O-oh, alright," Lotte peeked back into the bedroom for a moment before returning to Odette. "Hey, you seen my-"

Odette simply picked up the pair of panties clinging to the edge of the kitchen table and tossed them at the blonde's face.

"Thanks, O," Lotte groaned before disappearing back into the bedroom.

After taking a few half-hearted bites of her lukewarm toast, Odette stared into her empty glass and sighed. Screw the time, she thought, she needed a real drink and a grief seed. Or three.

Thanks for reading!

The swearing...I do get what you mean, but I think of it as a speech style. The kind you'd especially see in a grumpy teenager. Punctuating stuff with swear words isn't very graceful, though, no.

I really feel that the second choice is a bad Idea on several levels.
1.sets a bad precedent.
2.Iori WILL find out, and I really want to just close that chapter of the story off for good.
I think we should take the first job, bringing along Sayaka & Kyoko to try to get Sayaka to not hate us quite as much/team-building exersize.
Also, maybe we should just ask Kharn about the god-damned hat?

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 05/19/13(Sun)06:48 No.24917371

You are a Magical Girl, and this is your first day as Warmaster. It's a position you weren't exactly expecting to get promoted to in the course of your career as a Magical girl who liked whiskey a bit too much, and her cigarettes a whole lot more. You weren't even expecting to make it to Rank Leader before you died or Witched Out, for fuck's sake. All you were good at, simply put, is killing people. Lots and lots of people. If someone had told you that you'd be the direct superior of more than a thousand Magical Girls today, you'd have shot their kneecaps out on principle alone.

But you're Warmaster now. You've even got the hat to show for it. A hat that, you've discovered after a bit of experimentation, has a disturbing effect on whoever's wearing it, and whoever's in the vicinity of the former.

...Somehow, you can't help but feel that somewhere, an insane goddess in a pink dress is laughing at you.

It'd be just like her, anyway.

>> ☐ Deculture 05/19/13(Sun)06:49 No.24917379

You're currently inside the Inner Sanctum of the Ninth Incubator, Kyuubey, himself. Sakura Kyoko and Miki Sayaka are in there with you, along with Tomoe Mami who seems to be serving as the mutant cat's secretary for now. You've just been handed three envelopes - three high-priority missions that you need to choose at least one to carry out on your own, and the rest to be delegated to the thousand or so Magical Girls now directly underneath you. It seems a lifetime away - four lifetimes away - that you once got your missions either hand-delivered by Mami, or through a local courier service. Being able to pick was a rare treat - you usually got just one, and it was that or go into voluntary unpaid leave until you got back into the active rotation.

Three missions. The first was a typical smash and grab mission, a type of mission that, if you'll be honest, you were never really that good at. Simply for the reason that you tended to leave whatever you're breaking into a burning, smoldering wreck. You always got whatever the objective was, of course, that was no question - but for assignments that specifically asked for the location to be left as it was before you arrived, you didn't score all that well. Good thing, then, that the clients specified that they could care less if you bombed the place from orbit after ransacking it.

The second was...a strange request, all in all. While you're aware that your current rank as of the moment isn't a secret for those in the know, it's still strange for someone to ask for you specifically. You're not sure what strikes you as odd about this other than that.

Is it because you're still not used to the idea of being Warmaster? Or is it something else, something much more serious than that? Who is this Kirishima Ruri? Is she someone you used to know, like Malal and Kharn, but have no memory of?

>>24917379

The third is a search and recover mission. Straightforward, but the objective's been missing for a while. Chances are you'll be hunting for a corpse, which you're not all that looking forward to. Still, an assignment is an assignment.

After mulling it over, you make your decision, and you say this to Kyuubey, who's been waiting for your answer for a few minutes, now.

"So you're taking up two assignments instead of just one, Matsuda?" The Incubator blinks at this. "Today is indeed a day of many surprises. I was prepared for you to delegate them all, and spend the entire duration nursing a bottle of spirits. I mean no insult, of course - it's simply an assumption based on your past behavior."

Stupid asshole cat.

"Yes, well. Mami, please contact the client of the first mission. Notify them that the Warmaster will personally accomplish their service request. After that, contact Kirishima Ruri's people and tell them that the Warmaster has accepted her invitation." Mami nods at this, and writes something down on her clipboard. There's an unreadable smile on the blonde's face as she does this. Maybe she's pleased, somehow...?

"We'll discuss scheduling in a little while, to figure out which assignment you'd like to partake first.
Kyuubey continues. "Kirishima Ruri's weekend concert is two days from now. You're required to report to her the day before, and spend four days with her. You can, conceivably, take the first mission before or after that, but...well, do try and remember that our clients don't take kindly to delays."

You nod at this. Sure.

"Now, the third mission. I assume you're going to delegate this one? Who wil you delegate this to, then?"

How do you respond?

We will run the first job ASAP, we will take Kyouko and Sayaka with us just so we can get a feel for working as a team.

The second job we should take Sayaka along to smooth things over, she won't have to be there constantly but for first contact and on call for any important things that come up during the task

The last job will be delegated to Kyouko as a leader, she can pick her team from whoever she thinks is best for the job but she must take Midori and a couple of rookies along, this should be a milk run so we use that as on the job training, Sayaka if she is not needed at the time can help or liase with this team as needed.

If Kyouko could also report back to us once the third task is done on how things went and how the girls worked together that would help us with learning how and where to direct our subordinates talents while also trusting our senior assets

Grabbing my vote from the previous thread (with adjustments):

First Job:
Us, solo. We need a relaxing mission where we just shoot the crap out of anything that looks at us funny. If we must, grab a squad of mixed Eversors/ Vindicares just in case.

Second Job:
Also us and Sayaka, but with off-site backup in case things go awry. (And considering this idol's request, it will probably happen.)

Third Job:
Midori with Kyouko, and probably an extra Eversor/Vindicare or two for good measure.

As was mentioned a while ago, we ask Kyuubey for recommendations on which Megucas to take as backup.

Not arguing the first point, it's not a bad one. As for the second...
Getting stuck there WOULD be bad. If something happened that put us out of commission for the other mission, it'd be bad too. Or if there were fallout that could complicate the other mission. It might really be a better idea to do it after we're done with Ruri.

Technically >>24917674 is 100% correct but I actually did think this was a good chance to force ourselves to beat the hat down and learn to use it to our advantage

Because let's be honest, this girl isn't expecting us to be much different from Kharn so even if we do fuck up and lose it we won't actually cause a big a fallout as we might from things going bad at another time

Also we need to meet Iori BEFORE we go to the idol job

Okay, how about this?

We meed Iori today.

With Sayaka, we go do the Idol job after that, tomorrow.

While we're on the idol job we have Kyouko and Midori scout the location for the first job, set up an entry point, extraction routes, and maybe get some HUMINT on the ground if Midori's up for a sneaking mission.

Then, when the Idol job's over, we have all the prepwork for the smash-and-grab done and the whole thing should go of smoothly.

"Recommendations will be easy, if that's what you're asking for." Kyuubey nods. "If you want someone to be tracked, our Eversors will be more than up to the task. I can easily suggest a few squads you can pick from - ah, yes, Sakura Kyoko? You wanted to say something?"

The rest of you turn to look at the red-haired Eversor, who's been standing behind you, along with Sayaka. Kyoko reddens a bit at being the new focus of attention, but nods. "Y-yeah. If....if it's not oversteppin' or anything, and if it pleases the Warmaster..." She gestures towards you with a hesitating hand. "...I'd like to volunteer for the Search an' Recover. I've done it a couple of times before, and I kinda know how this thing goes." Her one eye sharpens slightly. "...Kind of shit that we're only being asked to do this three weeks in, but I'll do my best if I get the assignment. I'll have it done as soon as possible, too."

"...Well. As it turns out, I didn't need to recommend anyone after all." Kyuubey remarks with the slightest bit of amusement in its voice. "Sakura Kyoko's correct, Matsuda. Out of twenty search and recover missions she's been tasked with, she's only failed one of those. Although, if you take the circumstances back then into consideration, it wasn't really a failure, was it, Sakura Kyoko?"

"...As you say, sir," Kyoko says, her one eye narrowing. "I did find the objective, an' that's that."

That you remember, you note idly. Kyoko was asked to find a particularly rich client's son, who'd broken out of the psych ward. The Eversor found him hiding inside a warehouse by the docks - giggling and cackling as he crunched the bones of the preschool students who'd been declared missing only a couple of days after the young man's escape.

She called you to pick her up around after midnight, disturbing a sleep you'd drunk yourself into hours before. You did so soon enough, and what met you was Kyoko smoking quietly by the street while a warehouse burned itself to the ground behind her.

You'd never seen her so sullen before. So quiet. Didn't even talk to you the rest of the way back to the Officio.

Yes, if anything, it'd be Kyoko who you'd send for the third mission. She knows her way around, she knows how to talk to people you'd normally be yelling at on gunpoint.

"Your decision then, Matsuda? Do you choose Sakura Kyoko as the handler for the third mission, or would you like an alternative choice? Once more, I'll remind you that our client wants his daughter found as soon as possible."

Midori will probably have a hard enough time adapting to the Officio, we all know how Teenage girls can be and I think it won`t help if we exclude her from the dangerous stuff, because people will start to see her as the Warmasters Pet or warming pen.

Othet than that, we know firsthand that Midori is a pretty decent Meguca, its just fighting that its not her forte.

There are three other tasks that come to mind that we should do as soon as possible.

1. Get Yuma to fix Malal's legacy.

"Very well. Mami, make a note of this, notify our client that a specialist is on the case, and his daughter will be found..." Kyuubey pauses at this, turning to look at Kyoko again. "Your timeline for this, Sakura?"

"Depends, sir," Kyoko replies after a moment. "It really depends on what kinda information's already there, and what leads I got. But I got a Plan B if we're fucked there. So..." Her one crimson eye swivels up to the ceiling. "...I'd say two, three days at the most, sir. Longer if she's gone overseas, of course."

The Incubator nods again. "Very well. Matsuda, please give her the third envelope." You do so, and Kyoko nods in thanks. "Would you be needing some sort of support, or are you going on your own once more?"

Kyoko was just about to speak when you cut her off. You'd like to have Midori join Kyoko in the third mission, as soon as she's up and about. Midori's proven indispensable to you in Siberia, and your survival is proof and testament of her having her wits about her no matter the situation. This would also get her used to the new environment of the Officio, which you think is drastically different from her former one.

That's what you heard, anyway.

"...W-well, I guess that's alright?" Kyoko blinks her one good eye at you, shrugging. "I mean, I'm used to workin' solo, but having someone tagging along'd be nice."

"No objections, then?" Kyuubey asks, which the red-haired Eversor shakes her head in response to. "Very well. Update the mission docket to show that Sakura Kyoko and Hanegawa Midori are undertaking the third mission."

"So noted." Mami replies, before turning to Kyoko. "Kyoko-san, may I ask you to take up one of our new recruits as additional support? She's fresh out of basic training. Vindicare, but has very good analytical skills. Just a bit...awkward, socially. But she's fine in everything else."

Mami smiles. "Thank you, Sakura-san." At this, the red-haired Eversor blushes, and looks down. Sayaka merely shakes her head, a small smile on her face, and nudges the other Eversor in the ribs with an elbow.

"That settles that. Surprisingly, that took less time than I thought it would." Kyuubey seems to smirk. "Now, another matter. With the second mission beginning tomorrow proper, when would you like to attend to the first mission? Remember, the projected time of completion is only a reasonable assumption. It does not take into consideration of any untoward incidents." A pause. "...And it is in an off-shore facility, Matsuda."

Yeah, off-shore facility. What could possibly go fucking wrong? Never say a mission'll be a piece of cake, that doesn't end well. Our transport out could be compromised at some point, the mission could take a fair bit longer than expected, we might end up with injuries and require time to recoup.

If we go for it first and something screws we'll have then screwed the pooch on the Idol mission as well and then it all just falls apart, like a watermelon getting shot by a .50 BMG.

"Very well." Kyuubey doesn't even need to tell Mami, this time - the blonde is already noting it, no doubt to tell the client about your decision, whoever they were. Another first. You're no longer confined to what the client wants - now you're the one making them adjust to your schedule. It's...new. And kind of nice, actually.

"That about settles it, I think." Kyuubey suddenly stands up from his seat and hops up onto his desk, before leaping off and walking towards you. "Sakura, Miki, you're dismissed for the time being. Mami, please hold my calls - I'll be showing our new Warmaster her office. Matsuda, follow me."

"Yes, sir." Mami replies smoothly, while the two Eversors behind you snap to attention. You turn to follow Kyuubey out of his office, but not before bumping your fist against Kyoko's held-out one, earning yourself a disapproving glare from Sayaka. You tip your hat at her in response, and you savor her scowled reaction as the doors close behind you.

"...I appreciate you not breaching that particular subject with the others in the vicinity, Matsuda." Kyuubey suddenly speaks as you step into the elevator with your mutant cat of a boss, him sitting on his haunches by your feet as the lift gives a slight lurch. "I realize you have questions about the Research and Development base in Siberia. Inconvenient questions, but questions nonetheless, and as such, need to be answered. But, as far as possible, only answered for those who need to know. And most of the girls under my employ do not need to know."

Yes. That's exactly what you thought he'd say.

"Is it, now?" Kyuubey seems to let out a sigh. "Very well. Ask what you wish to ask." There's a slight tightening of the air between the both of you. "I am now speaking to you and you alone. No one else will be able to hear our conversation. If you wish to reply, simply think it - I'll be able to pick up your response then."

"...I was hoping this wouldn't be another impromptu interview session, Matsuda, but you are my Warmaster now. Very well, I will--" You cut off his little mind-speech right then and there as you reach down to pick him up off the floor with both hands, and then setting him onto one arm, in front of you. The other ruffling the fur on top of his head. "...Matsuda? What are you doing?"

Nothing. Just trying to get to know your boss better, now that the both of you will be working closer than ever before. There's nothing wrong with that, is there?

"...I...I suppose not." There's a note of wary hesitation in the Incubator's voice. "Well then. Erm. Where was I?"

He was answering your questions, you remind him.

"Ah, yes. Well. Alright." He fidgets in your arms slightly, as if debating whether or not to struggle out of your grasp, but seems to resign himself to his current situation. "The organism installed in the Siberian Base." A pause here. "For all intents and purposes, yes, it is a Witch. It has a name, and I would tell you that name, but I have the suspicion that you know of it already. So let's not--"

Walpurgisnacht. You say this out loud, in the silence of the elevator.

If it was possible for an Incubator to wince, Kyuubey would have done so. Instead, you feel his fur prickle underneath your touch.

"...Yes. That." The mutant cat sounds almost offended. "I have never gotten used to the nomenclature you girls give such a thing. It should not be thought of as simply a Witch, really - it is a force of nature. A communion of consciousness. It is--"

It's a monster, that's what it is. What is it doing there?

"Being held captive, of course. Under strict observation. Suppressed into docility - or something approaching it, in any case."

It's here that the the elevator doors open to a floor that's...largely deserted, except for cleaning staff going about their business. They seem to be cleaning out rooms that had, at one time, been occupied. Each one of them giving you a nod as you pass by.

That's not what you mean, you remind him, frowning.

"That's what you asked. I merely answered. Keep going straight, Matsuda, until you reach the next corridor."

Alright. Well. Is your Soul Gem linked to it?

"The procedure was a necessary one." Kyuubey replies after a moment. "The details of which are confidential, even to other Incubators." Another pause. "...I will remind you, Matsuda, that the procedure expended a considerable amount of Officio resources. It would have been cheaper to simply have you retired and be done with it, Warmaster or no. I could have simply chosen another candidate."

...Then why didn't he?

"A promise." Kyuubey states this. "I made a promise, and I am not in the business of making promises I don't intend to keep."

. . .Well. At least he's being honest, somewhat. How about the other questions?

"I'm getting to them. Turn left here." Kyuubey snaps, and you follow his directions. "Midori's Soul Gem is still linked to yours, but it's only a one-way connection. Your circuit - the one the procedure gave you in order to counteract the Golden Weapons' corruption - shouldn't involve her. Straight ahead, Matsuda."

Bossy little bastard.

"As for Jyuubey controlling his contractees and forcing them to Witch Out...well. Potentially, all Incubators can do the former, if they make it a stipulation in the contract itself. I make sure to leave that out, however - I only require being able to monitor you girls from afar, nothing more. As for the latter..." It's here that the Incubator falls silent. "It is...taboo, for us, to do something like that. Forbidden. But it is possible, yes."

If it's possible, then why not just make girls witch out regularly for their grief seeds?

>>24919683

"Because we need to expend energy on our own to do so. The energy that we accumulate from grief seeds in the first place. The payoff is literally nil, and the risks too great. And it's a PR nightmare, in any case. We have all agreed not to resort to anything like that, even in the most dire of circumstances." His voice becomes a bit harder, here. "If...Jyuubey has resorted to something like that, then he has truly fallen out of favor with the rest of my brothers."

While this conversation had been carrying on, Kyuubey's directions had led you to what looks to be one of the only two locked doors in the entire floor. The first one is plain, unassuming, but with a home-made placard with the name 'MALAL' nailed upon it. The other one is more ostentatious and gaudy, with a skull doorknob. "WARMASTER" is embossed on the dark mahogany door, in polished brass lettering. Kyuubey directs you to the latter.

"As for your last question, Matsuda...well, it's just a hat, isn't it?" The Incubator blinks as you pause in front of what looks to be your new office. "Is there something wrong with it?"

How do you respond?

I've experience kharn-like urges and inclinations when the hat is worn.

I've also noticed that it appears to subtly affect the people around the wearer. It could of course be just the fact that it IS a warmaster's hat and our employees have learned to respect the authority it carries but when I tested it on Kyoko, it managed to overcome Sayaka's public sensibilities, causing the little incident we spoke of earlier.

Strangely it didn't seem to affect Kyoko in the slightest. How odd.

"What? Arousal? That's absurd." Kyuubey seems to almost huff in derision at your thoughts. "I realize Kharn had her own reputation during her tenure as Warmaster, but be reasonable. You can't attribute it to something she wore or used during her career, nor should you abscribe any esoteric value to those things simply because she used them." The Incubator in your arms seem to be quite unconvinced. "It's just a hat, Matsuda. Do stop fussing about it. Now, open the door - it should be open for you right this moment."

You frown at this, but reach out to curl your fingers around the skull-shaped doorknob. You turn it, feeling the mechanisms inside engage and allow you to push the heavy mahogany door open.

"Welcome to your new office, Warmaster." Kyuubey says as you finally see the insides of the office that used to be The Betrayer's. That used to be owned by Valnikov Kharn.

It's...quite the office, that much is visible. There's a genuine authentic tiger rug right in the middle of the room, complete with the paws, the tail, and the stuffed head - the mouth twisted into a permanent fang-baring snarl. A large flat-panel television affixed to one wall, with what appears to be an old-fashioned phonograph underneath it, placed with reverent care in the middle of the entertainment center. A mini-refrigerator at one corner. Another door yet in another corner, beside what looks to be a rather stuffed book case - probably leading to the Warmaster's Quarters.

But what really catches your attention is the throne behind the large mahogany desk with the folded laptop placed forlornly on top of it.

The throne specifically made out of skulls.

Kharn really wasn't kidding about the skull throne thing.

"Yes, she really wasn't. Three hundred skulls, taken from her assignments." Kyuubey confirms the question you didn't want to ask. "There are some Magical Girls in there, too. I believe Ahriman's skull is right at the top." He nods towards the skull at the very highest tip of the throne's back rest. "She added it there herself."

...Isn't it uncomfortable?

"Well, it doesn't offer the best back support, no," Kyuubey replies after a moment. "I believe she uses a cushion or something, though, for when she sits down. Otherwise, you're better off just standing."

He doesn't say.

"It does make for a very intimidating conversation piece, you'll have to agree. Quite a handy thing when you're receiving recalcitrant subordinates."

...Yeah. You can see that.

"Your quarters are right through that door. The usual amenities await you, there, but the bed is especially one of note." He seems to read your disgusted expression. "Don't worry, we had it replaced the moment Kharn abdicated her position. It's been unused."

Great.

"Will that be all, then, Matsuda?" Kyuubey says, squirming in your arms again. "You did say you had other things you'd like to take care of."

"Um, excuse me?" A voice suddenly speaks up from behind you. You turn to look at none other than Kumatora - the Magical Girl you remember training, so long ago - meekly peeking her head into the office. "G-good morning, Murder--er, Warmaster, Incubator." She bows crisply at the waist. When she straightens up, she's looking right at her feet, cheeks burning. As if avoiding your gaze entirely, as well as Kyuubey's.

"What is it, Ishikawa?" Kyuubey asks before you could.

"Um, Miss Mami asked me to pass a message on. Sir, you have a message from the Twentieth. You did say to hold your calls, but she says it's urgent."

"...I'll take it up in my office." Kyuubey lets out a sigh. "Are we done here, Matsuda?" He asks this again.

Also, we should read the mission docket to find out what exactly we're extracting; depending on the size of the target, we might need a bigger helicopter.

You're done here, but there's just one more thing you'd like to do before he leaves.

"If it must be done, Matsuda, then do so. The Twentieth isn't someone I like to keep waiting." Kyuubey replies huffily. "What is it, anywa--"

Your response is of course to take off the Warmaster Cap and place it on the Incubator. Of course, it's a miserable fit - the hat's not quite made with mutant cat head sizes in mind - but as it tips forward, the brim effectively rendering Kyuubey blind, his...prehensile secondary ears or whatever they're called move up to carefully lift the headgear out of the way.

"...Matsuda, please stop joking around. Really, this should be beneath you." The Incubator is miffed now. "What purpose does this serve?"

Science, you reply. With the damnable hat on him, more or less, you hold him out to Kumatora, who's now just looked up, blinking in surprise.

"E-eh? Semp--er, Warmaster, what is it?" Kumatora's brow furrows, reflexively reaching out to take Kyuubey from your hands. "Does...does the Incubator need me to carry him to the elevator? If that's the case, I can easily--"

No, no. Does she feel anything when looking at this particular Kyuubey? The one with the dashing hat?

"Well, it is a rather fetching hat, Warmaster," Kumatora says after a moment, staring at your boss. "No offense to Sir Kyuubey, of course, but I rather think the Warmaster wears it much better."

"You don't say." Kyuubey's tone of voice is mimicking your deadpan response from earlier. "See? There is nothing, Matsuda. It is a symbol of office, nothing more. Please take things more seriously from now on."

Kyuubey's ears lift the hat off his head, before reverently placing it back on yours.

"Right. Well. I will take my leave now, then." Kyuubey replies, and you let him hop down from your arms to the floor.

"Enjoy your new office, Matsuda. I will convene with the Twentieth. If you need me, simply activate the laptop. It will connect directly to Mami's computer, and you can easily talk with her then."

You'll remember that.

"See that you do." Kyuubey fixes you with an unreadable stare, before nodding at Kumatora and then walking out of the room.
Well, at least you've confirmed that it doesn't work on Incubators. Not as such, anyway.

"U-um, well, if I'm not needed, I'll take my leave here too, Warmaster," Kumatora squeaks. "Have a nice day, a-and congratulations on the promotion!" She gives you a brief, warm smile, before making to leave - which you, of course, stop conveniently. She blinks at this, blushing once more, before asking if you needed anything else.

You did, actually. Since this is your office now, there may be things that you need to throw away, and you'd need her help.

"Oh, alright," Kumatora seems to cheer up here, if only a little bit. "If it's for sempai, then I'll do anything." She seems to giggle at this, but only for a few moments. "...If only we still had Culexus, then this'd be a cinch, really..." the black-haired girl adds in a murmur, somewhat mournfully.

In the office, the tiger rug's stuffed head is staring up at you in accusation.

How do you respond?

You ask Kumatora about the Culexus as you make your way to the desk - or rather, to the macabre throne behind it. You throw the mission envelops on the desk itself, before looking the throne over.

Does she know a lot about the Culexus? Did she know any of them, before they were wiped out?

"I...I knew some of them, Warmaster," Kumatora says meekly, stepping in front of the desk, wringing her hands together in front of her - just as you yourself gingerly take a seat on the skulled throne. To be honest, there's a memory foam cushion to rest your ass on, but everything else is just skulls. The armrests? Skulls. The throne legs? Skulls. The back rest? Skulls. It's a travesty of comfort. "Only a few, though. N-not all."

What were they like, then? You ask this as you lean back on the tall rest, and immediately regret it as you lean forward. Nope.

"They were really nice girls. I...I remember one of them helping me during basic. I was having trouble with one of the live fire exercises, you know, um...w-when they actually shoot you? To teach you how to control the pain when you do get shot?" Kumatora's face pales at the memory, but she forges onward. "S-she helped me get ready for that. Taught me a few neat tricks so that I was ready when the exercise came, rather than pee myself screaming along with the rest."

...That does sound rather nice of them. But didn't they make her sick when they were around?

"That happened only to the really sensitive ones, I think, semp--er, Warmaster," Kumatora amended herself again, seemingly still not used with your new rank. "Miss Sayaka was one of them, she really didn't like them hanging around. Then again, a lot of the Eversors were sensitive to that sort of thing. Vindicares, though...only a handful of them had adverse reactions to the Culexus. I think they got along just fine."

That's...a possibility, yes. But is it true that there's only one of them left?

The black-haired girl nods at this. "Omegon. She...was the only one left after that incident one year ago, and we never saw another one wearing the suit other than her. A lot of us didn't mind it. She kept to herself a lot, too, even when Miss Sayaka and Miss Kyoko would come around to talk to her. I tried talking to her once, but she just walked past as if I wasn't there." A moment. "I do believe she's on an overseas assignment, Warmaster, but she'll be back sometime this week. It's time for her to get back into the rotation, anyway."

She sounds morose, but...well, it's understandable, if she's the only one left in her unit. You're not sure what you'd do if you were the last Vindicare in the Ninth. That would mean...well, that'd mean you somehow managed to lose Mami, and you deserved all the grief you got.

Kumatora seems to wilt slightly at this. "Omegon was really hurt because of that, semp--Warmaster. From...from what I can tell, she still blames the former Warmaster for her death." It's here that she allows herself a brittle smile. "I'm...not entirely sure of the specifics of what exactly happened, but...well, I'm glad you're the one with the hat now, so to speak, Warmaster."

Yes. Well. That made her and a lot of other people.

Said other people do not include you, funnily enough.

...For fuck's sake. This is the worst chair ever. It doesn't even compare to the one you have back in your apartment.

What do you do now?

[]Call Iori. Have Kumatora investigate the room for any hidden surprises while you do so.
[]Investigate the office with Kumatora. Iori can wait later.
[]Activate the laptop and talk to Mami. Maybe she can tell you something about the office.

Still felt strange, hanging around the VIP section of the Officio. Hadn't been sure what to make of it since the promotions were all finalized back in June. Everything was so quiet. So big. Equerry's chambers had a lot more space than I needed for anything, and I ended up sleeping on the couch in the Hole most of the time anyway. Warmaster's room was even bigger, but at least that made sense – Mary and Annie were sharing it. Shit, the place was big enough for all three of us, if we wanted. Figured that'd be weird all around, though. Didn't need to see either of 'em lying around half-naked. Not more than usual.

Today was different than it had been for the past couple of months, though. Felt a little more normal, probably because it wasn't. It was just like old times, sneaking into the Warmaster's quarters. …Sneaking probably wasn't the right word; it was Mary's room, but we didn't want Annie to find out. We were here to take something she didn't even let her sister touch under ordinary circumstances.

It was an old sword, a Japanese katana. Made by Murasomething, according to Annie. Got it when she became a magical girl, and she'd taken it on just about every mission of her career. Kept it mounted carefully above her bed when she wasn't working, wrapped in a scratched black sheath covered in Japanese paper seals. Even tied a lace garter around the hilt, to make sure everyone knew damn well who it belonged to.

It was also a complete piece of shit. Nobody really had the heart to tell her, but when we'd fucked around with it, nobody could cut butter with the thing. It was a flimsy imitation sword, one of the…many…'cursed' things Annie ended up buying when she got the chance, the crap that lined her side of the twins' room. …Guess some of them might have been real. She's the one that could tell, and she seemed to think so. But whether or not the rest was actually cursed, the sword was shit.

"Y'think she's gonna figger it out?" Mary paused to look back at me as she reached up to lift it from its display. "What if she gets back'n sees it ain't here?" Wasn't like she needed to worry. She was the Warmaster now. Totally Awesome something or other. The boss. Annie would probably only kill me. I was still an aide. Barely even miss me.

"That ain't funny neither, Wendy. If somethin' comes up she's gonna shit the bed, 'n you ain't the one that's gotta sleep in it after." Yeah. That much was true. It wouldn't be a problem, though – made sure Annie wouldn't be waking up for a very long time.

"…You fuckin' with me? You…did you drug my goddamn sister, Cooldown? It woulda been better if ya fucked her to sleep!" Her eyes flashed. Probably shouldn't have mentioned it. Took a lot of anything to knock out a magical girl. More than enough to do real damage to anyone else. …It was the most of the basic of the basics of Callidus training, though. Someone unconscious can't detect you. Can't stop you. After Miss Marigold's extensive Callidus Training Regimen, I tried to remind her, she was lucky I didn't kill half the building to make sure there were no witnesses.

"…You really gotta stop tryin' t'make jokes." Maybe not, but it eased the tension a little bit. Mary just grabbed the sword off the wall like it was nothing after that, and we made a beeline for our next destination – Doctor Nakajima's garage.

Nakajima's place was tucked away in a dark, underground corner of the Officio. Part of the arrangement for her joining up with the Eighth, apparently, in exchange for her research and saving her from an early, messy death. Pretty big part of it – where she did her bigger, messier work - ended up being the garage where the Rabbits kept our cars, and she'd expanded it at her own expense. Added a couple of rooms that she used as a lab for, I guess, inventing and crap, and another she called her…clinic. Not that anyone outside of the Rabbits would be caught dead in there. …Well, they might be caught dead. Heh.

When we handed over the sword, the first thing Nakajima did was yank it carelessly out of its sheath, play with it, and bring it down on her arm. After seeing some of the shit Annie had done with it, I half-expected it to come clean off, but the blade bounced off of her skin, almost completely harmless.

"Wow! You guys know this thing is a piece of crap, right?" She didn't even flinch, dropping the sword to rub at the small cut it had made with part of her shirt. Mary and I glanced at each other, then she nodded. …And as usual, Nakajima started to laugh. "Oh man. You let her FIGHT people with this thing? You let her fight ME with this thing!"

"You seen Annie in a fight, Amber. She cut a goddamn tank in half with that piece'a crap. We was just thinkin'…" … Mary was always a little out of place when the situation didn't end in shooting somebody. Especially when it came to Annie being Annie.

"You was just thinkiiin' it'd be even better if this thing actually had an edge, right? Well, it's barely even a display sword. I'd just sharpen it, but then it'd just be a wobbly piece of crap instead." She scooped it back up and started waving it around, like she expected it to wobble right there. Even made a little sound effect for it.

"Aw, c'mon. Can't ya just…do some'a yer Japan magic? Put on some pajamas'n pray to the Emperor or somethin'? Or is that what'cher doin'?" …Didn't even have words for that. All I could do was stare at Mary, but…Nakajima's harder to mess with, I guess.

"Don't worry, Warmastaa-dono~ Watashi habu supaa ethical Yamato toki desu~ Long time~" Nakajima giggled again and jabbed the Warmaster's cheek with the tip of the sword. Couldn't help but laugh a little, myself, although I could barely understand a word of it. Just glad Nakajima could take a joke. At least, glad she could tell when to take Mary seriously.

"Yeah, uh, that's…that's great. Tokey days as hell. Can ya get that done in a couple hours?" The giggle turned into an uproar. Could barely make out 'fuck you, ma'am' through it.

"Ahahaha…ahhh…I have to replicate this whole sword if we're gonna do anything with it, boss. I can rush it and take a couple of days, but she'll feel the difference in the grip if I make something totally new, and she's got an engraving here. I could try welding a new blade on or, hmm…" Finally, she seemed to sober up. Didn't stop smiling – Nakajima never stopped smiling – but she began to examine the cheap piece of touristy garbage we brought down for her, and after an awkward minute, she made for her…lab, waving over her shoulder and telling us we could go. Mary called out to her one more time, a reminder to make it 'extra Japanese'.

…Probably should have told her not to put a motor on it or something. Annie couldn't get away with using a sword that'd rip her arm off whenever she drew it.

"Aw, it'll be fine. Amber ain't gonna screw around if it's fer Annie, they're damn near closer'n we are. Now, how the hell're we gonna keep her from noticin' 'til it's done…?"

…I had an idea, but I didn't like it. Told the Warmaster to hunt down all the Officio's spare gardening tools. Special training. She seemed to pick up on it pretty fast, and we got the paperwork done an hour or two later. On the grounds that she wouldn't ever have to try and kill someone with a watering can again, anyway.

That'd be V's job this time, anyway.

Got a chance to test the sword out before we snuck it back into Annie's room. Nakajima called it 'Gooseberry Sugar Donut', although the old inscription, 'Luck', was still on the blade. …It felt good. Really good. Almost made me want to trade up from my old kitchen knife. Seemed like it was balanced better, from what I knew about swords, and without even really trying I cut clean through the stereo Nakajima was using to blast shitty J-pop throughout the garage. Tried to warn her. You could hear that shit from outside the building, and even I could tell that whatever old 50's song this was didn't need to be remixed and sung by a ten-year-old with a heavy accent.

Little bit less happy when Nakajima told she snuck some parts for a beam emitter into the hilt. She'd probably bug Annie to let her tool with it later, and who the hell knows what she'd do to this poor sword if she got free reign.

…Annie's problem, not mine.

She was overjoyed the next time she tried it, though. Made it all worth it. Even the J-pop. Seemed to think that it was transformed by absorbing the souls of a thousand evil men, or something. Not ever sure when Annie's serious about things like that, but it didn't matter. She needed a real weapon now. We weren't Alpha Team anymore. Weren't Miss Marigold's bitches. She was the Eighth Equerry. Mary was the Eighth Warmaster. We led a squad of some of the best Eversors in the world. And life was, for once, pretty fucking great.

Prose Magica

Nothing. Two hours of scouring nearby streets, alleys and rooftops and Odette had nothing to show for it. She kicked at a few pebbles at her feet and bit her lip in frustration. A few blood spatters where she assumed Freida had been standing in the alley, but nothing else. The one-eyed scowled as she looked on to the alley below, one foot on the concrete edge of the building. The smell of ozone hung thick in the air as she felt the first drop of rain hit the top of her head, heralding the end of her search.

Whoever had taken the Callidus had to be skilled, that much was certain. It seemed as though blood was only left behind when entirely unavoidable. Odette managed to prop open her umbrella just as the downpour began, quietly cursing the skies for not giving her more time.

Nothing. The word hung in her head as her footsteps rang out on the metal staircase leading down the side of the building. As she reached the bottom, she slumped against the rough brick wall and fished her cellphone out of her pocket.

Nothing. No crime was perfect, or at least that's what she had always been told. People didn't just disappear into the thin air. There had to be something she was missing, she was sure of it. Odette looked through her notes briefly before dialling a number. After a few rings, a nervous but polite voice answered.

Thanks for the thread, Deculture!

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 4 archivalfag 05/19/13(Sun)14:45 No.24922314

"Hello?"

"Hey Gerty," Odette replied, adjusting the phone against her ear. "Any chance you're free today?"

"Y-yes, madam, of course," the vindicare said, stumbling over her words for a moment. "What do you need?"

"I'm kinda stumped for now," Odette laughed to herself. One day in and she was already dry on leads. Had she gotten so rusty? "Ask Holly if there were any witnesses to the other disappearances or anyone who might have known them. Ask around, see what you can find. I don't know."

"A-alright. I'll do what I can. Was there anything else you needed?"

Odette pressed the phone to her chest for a moment as she thought. "Any chance your sister is busy today?"

"I believe so, yes. Something about Valkyrie squad having a meeting."

"Shit, that's right," Odette sighed, rubbing her forehead with the hand holding her umbrella. "Pass the same orders on to her. And, uh, tell her I'll try my best to get Frieda back. She can tell the rest of the Valkyries the same."

"I'll be sure to pass the message on. Is there anything else, madam?"

"Uh, n-nah, that's... that's everything, I think," the one-eyed girl mumbled. "So, um, I'll meet you outside the bakery at HQ around, say, uh, six-ish? You know the one."

"Oh yes, the one with those macarons you love so much?" Gertrude asked.

"Ah, yeah. Yeah, that one," Odette paused to clear her throat before continuing, her face heating up ever so slightly. "Thanks. I'll, uh, I'll see you then."

The sound of soft, delicate laughter tinkled through the speaker. "Of course, madam. I'll see what I can find."

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 4 archivalfag 05/19/13(Sun)14:46 No.24922326

And with that, the line went dead. Odette took a deep breath and pressed her back against the wall, her mind mulling over the details of the case. With a few quick motions, she brought up the list of missing magical girls on her phone. The only thing that seemed to link them was that they were all fairly high-ranking members of the Officio. Now even the leader of the top squad in the whole damned Officio had vanished. Odette let out a soft groan and pinched the bridge of her nose. It had been too long since she'd been forced to work with so little.

The rain pounded out a steady beat against her umbrella as she went over her options. She could always bug Holly; having her figure out the most likely next target would be the best idea. Then... Odette glanced up at the rooftops around her. She couldn't quite shake the feeling of being watched. But really, she thought, if the kidnapper or murderer or whoever the hell they were was going after important targets, why bother with a back-number former warmaster who hadn't gotten a real job in months? Odette kicked at a shard of broken glass as she thought. Tyler was right, she told herself. She was a washed-up has-been.

The silvery-haired girl shook her head and thumbed a number on her cellphone. It was a number she hadn't used in months. One that still hung in the back of her mind after having used it so much in her days as warmaster.

One ring. Two. Three.

A click on the other end heralded the voice of the receiver.

"Yo, yo, yo. How's it hangin', O?" Came Holly's chipper voice, the same as always. "Haven't heard from you in a while. Well, not counting last night."

"Uh, oh yeah," Odette mumbled, suddenly recalling the previous night. She had a habit of taking unnecessary and regrettable actions when in a bad mood. "Sorry about that. Just... work and stuff."

"Yeah, yeah. I know how it is," the vanus replied, chuckling to herself. "You've never been a happy camper. Well, you WERE, but-"

"Holly," Odette groaned, rolling her eye.

"Ah. Yeah. Sorry. Bad memories. What can I do you for?"

"I need you to run a prediction for me," the one-eyed girl said. She still couldn't help but glance at the rooftops every now and again. "Looking for the next potential victim. Can you do that for me?"

"Depends," Holly stated flatly. "How much information you got?"

"Looks like they're hitting our big names. They'd need to be strong," Odette shrugged. "Not much else to go on. They're good. Hardly any evidence left."

"Wow," the other girl let out a long breath and Odette winced as the earpiece crackled. "Yeah, that's, uh, that's a doozy alright. I'll pull up the list of victims and work from there. It shouldn't take too-... ah shit wait."

"What?"

"I forgot you're not- It's just-" the vanus stammered before letting out a long, tired breath. "Uh, sorry, O. Forgot I can't just bump you to top priority anymore. It'll take a few hours to run the algorithms, factor in all possible motives, and... Yeah."

Odette closed her eye and nodded. "I understand. Call me when you have something."

"Will do. Take care."

Odette considered saying something for a moment, then tapped the big, red 'End Call' button with her thumb. Her first real talk with one of her old friends had done little more than confirm what she'd been thinking early. The words wormed their way into her mind again.

Washed-up.

Has-been.

Sure, some new kid had asked for her autograph, but wouldn't you know it, it was a picture of Odette from her heyday. Back when she still had both eyes and didn't have messed up nicknames like "Odette the Furious" and the "Wandering Warmaster". Back when people respected and looked up to her instead of feared her like some urban legend.

"'m not a goddamn Sasquatch," Odette mumbled to herself.

But that was enough brooding for one day, she told herself as she picked up her feet and made her way out of the alley. The rain beat a sad tune on her umbrella as she walked, accompanied by the brass section of traffic just outside the corridor. And faintly - oh so faintly - she could smell the sickly sweet scent of flowers at a funeral.

Therese stepped up to the podium and cleared her throat. Twenty magical girls watched her with eager eyes. The warmaster tugged at the visor of her cap, let out a deep breath and began speaking.

"Good morning, everyone," she greeted them, her tone composed and professional. "As most of you have no doubt heard, as of this morning, at approximately zero-hundred hours, Callidus Freida Norton has gone missing."

The wave of shock moving through the small crowd was substantially less than Therese had expected. No doubt they had already passed the rumour between themselves several times over. Still, there were those who simply had to hear it from the warmaster herself to believe it. Several were crying, others simply stared in shock while the majority stood at attention as they awaited further news.

"Some of you may be pleased to hear that our very own Odette Brighton has been assigned the case," Therese gulped and scanned the crowd for reaction, trying her best to hide her nervousness. "Others, not so much-"

"But what about us?!" A voice shouted from the crowd. "The hell are we supposed to do?!"

"Those of you who wish to help can either report to Miss Brighton or standby and await further orders," the warmaster stared out into the crowd as her eyes grew hard. "The rest of you can resume your lives as usual. Let it be known that this Officio will not tolerate vigilantism. If I receive word that one of you has interfered with the investigation, you shall be reprimanded accordingly and without mercy. Am I understood?"

A chorus of "Yes, Warmaster." rose from her meagre audience. Therese scanned the crowd and gave a quick nod before dismissing them. She stepped down from the podium and leaned against the side wall as the crowd filed out. The few that remained seemed to be the crying, those comforting them and several who simply sat in shock.

Therese watched as a solemn looking girl with spiked, forward-swept black-dyed hair and a lip piercing quietly walked up to her. Fredrica Volk; Freddy to her friends. The other half of 'Odette's Hounds'. The hammer to her sister's scalpel, as some said, though, the reverse may very well have been more accurate. Whereas Gertrude tended towards powerful, booming rifles, Fredrica never used anything but her trademark three-pronged switchblade. Often times, she didn't need anything more.

"Mornin', warmaster," the dark-haired girl called out, both hands shoved deep into her pockets. "How 'bout that weather?"

"Freddy. Quite the downpour, so I hear," Therese responded in kind.

Freddy nodded as took up a position beside the warmaster. "Just got a text from sis. Looks like we're gonna be helping out."

"Glad to hear it," the warmaster tilted her head a bit closer to Freddy. "Truth be told, I'm glad Fubey finally folded. Odette was starting to show... signs. You know?"

"I know. She's been cooped up in that damn tower since D-Day," Freddy shook her head faintly. "Still can't believe you keep Argente around after that shit."

"Tyler's a good girl most of the time," Therese sighed. "Odette just gets under her skin for some reason."

"Yeah? Well she got her fucking wish," Freddy growled, gritting her teeth. "Odette got demoted because of her and she got to be warmaster's aide!" The black haired girl furrowed her brow as she glared at the ground. "Thought we only got one each."

As much as the warmaster wanted to voice her agreement, Tyler was still a valuable asset to her and, like it or not, a good friend. Playing with the lint in her pocket, she could only think of one thing to say that didn't put her on either side of the line.

"Some people are just lucky, I guess."

Odette stared into her cup of tea lost and forlorn. Her day had started out terrible and only gone downhill from there. She'd had an argument with someone she hoped to never see again, found no solid evidence at the crime scene, had the fact that she was a nobody shoved in her face and now, to top it all off, the bakery was out of macarons. Maybe she ought to take up some other, more appropriate vice, she thought to herself. What kind of hardened, down-on-her-luck magical girl spends her time writing poetry and eating sweets? When she thought of others like herself, she imagined alcoholics and chain-smokers and people who sounded like they were gargling gravel every time they spoke. At least she had the scowl down.

"Ah- E-excuse me," said a rather timid sounding voice.

The one-eyed girl looked up. She had been expecting Gertrude, but this girl was most certainly not her. Her hair was long and dark and looked as though it had never known the touch of a brush. The girl's eyes were a dark brown, the kind that looked almost as if she had enormous pupils and no irises. Strangely enough, Odette could swear she knew the girl from somewhere.

"Um, do you mind if I sit here?" the girl asked, cautiously pointing at the empty seat next to Odette.

Odette shrugged. "I'm not using it," she replied. Though, as the girl sat down, she couldn't help but wonder why she hadn't picked any of the other, unoccupied, benches. Unless-

"You're, um," the girl started, voice shaking, "you're Odette Brighton, aren't you?"

This was why she didn't come to the building anymore. Warmaster or not, she still stood out like a sore thumb. Silver hair, eye-patch – Odette had to admit that she was hard to miss.

"Yeah, that's me," the former warmaster answered. "Look, if you want an autograph or something it's cool-"

"Really?!" The messy-haired girl nearly made Odette jump off the bench as she lunged at her. "Do you think I could maybe get a picture with you? I- I mean, if it's not too much trouble."

"I... yeah, whatever," the one-eyed girl could only mumble after being caught so off-guard.

Odette cringed as the girl shuffled closer - a blatant invasion of personal space - and pulled out her cellphone, pointing it at the two of them.

"Say cheese!"

Odette barely had time to smile before she heard the click of the imitation shutter.

"Did... did you get it?" she asked hesitantly.

The messy-haired girl nodded vigorously as she looked at her phone. "It's great! Thank you so much!"

"No problem, Miss, uh," Odette said, suddenly realizing that she had never caught the girl's name.

"Fennel! Fennel Vance!" The girl, Fennel, answered. Her dark eyes shot open as she looked through her phone. "Um, is... is that really the time?"

The silver-haired girl leaned over, glanced at the screen then nodded. "Looks right."

"O-oh no. I'm gonna be so late," Fennel groaned as she jumped out of her seat. "She's gonna be so mad. Stupid, stupid Fennel! Sorry Miss Odette, but I have to run!"

Has Midori already spoken with Chiaki about the discrepancies in her life story?

Like how Midori said in the cold room how she was contracted as she was on the verge of death after being run over, as opposed to how it really happened (being offered to become a meguca by JB, and accepting because she didn't want to be a mundane owner of a ramen place).

The girl was gone before Odette even had a chance to raise her hand. She blinked her one eye as her gaze shifted back to the cup of tea in her lap. There was something eerily familiar about Miss Vance, but she couldn't quite put her finger on it. She'd always been terrible with faces, even back in her warmaster days. Odette knew that she knew them, she just couldn't figure out where from.

Her freshly resumed stupor was interrupted quickly enough by her own cellphone going off. Odette pulled it from her pocket and clumsily tabbed through the screens. Sure enough, it was a text from Gertrude. It seemed that wouldn't be able to meet Odette and asked if they could possibly arrange something the next day. Odette sighed and quickly typed out her reply, nothing more than a short, terse "sure", before turning off her phone.

There went her afternoon, she thought. Maybe she'd hop in Sleepy Sue and just drive until the sun went down. She'd done it before - simply drove and drove until she fell asleep. More than once she'd blacked out on the rode and woke up on a certain American warmaster's couch. How she'd managed to get from Toronto to Santa Destroy in the span of a night had always been a mystery.

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 4 archivalfag 05/19/13(Sun)14:51 No.24922413

It was nearing midnight when Odette finally arrived at her apartment. It was a grey and dingy old building on the edge of downtown; it was the kind of easy-built cookie-cutter structure that seemed to spring up by the dozen as the city crept outwards. Despite having only lived there for two months - and probably only spending half as many nights there - it still managed to feel like home.

She had her phone out in one hand. Some time in the night, Holly had left a message. Odette hadn't even thought about her earlier call when she'd turned it off. She thumbed voice mail button and shoved the phone between her shoulder and her ear; a precarious balancing act as she went for her keys.

"Hey, O. Holly here," the vanus' voice called out. "Just following up on your request from earlier. So, I've got some bad news and good news. Good news is, it seems like I've got a solid pattern going. Seems like they're going for powerful girls, not necessarily high-ranking. Most of the earlier victims didn't have much of a reputation behind being hard as nails."

Odette dug her hand into her pocket and fumbled with the jangling chain. Her house key, Sleepy Sue's key which were really just for show, the old key to the warmaster's suite that she'd likely never get around to taking off, and a host of others that she no longer recognized. Looking at the fist-sized ring almost made her feel like a janitor. She let out a quick huff and shoved the brass key into the lock, jimmied it just the right way and gave the green door a good shove like it always needed.

"Bad news is, I finished calculating the probabilities on the next victim. Therese and Tyler were up there pretty high, but I doubt anyone could get past their security even if they COULD beat them in a fight. Nobody knows where me and Molly are, so we're out. So, uh, most likely next target looks to be..."

The door gave way and Odette stepped inside, and breathed in a long breath of...

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 4 END archivalfag 05/19/13(Sun)14:53 No.24922432

Sweet.

Nauseating.

Like the cheap perfume they spritzed on a dolled up corpse for viewing.

"You."

Odette didn't bother to close the door as she bolted in, her cell clattering on the floor. Drawers were half-open or pulled straight off the rails. Papers were strewn about, blowing in the wind from the open door. No, the open door simply led into the hallway. A window was smashed, specifically the enormous window she sat in that morning.

The one-eyed girl frantically ran from room to room. The house was empty. Nothing seemed to be taken. The only thing that seemed wrong - aside from the broken window - was a small envelope on the kitchen table, held down by a brick. Classy.

Odette cautiously pulled the envelope from under the brick and tore it open. Its contents were simple: a single sheet of folded eight and a half by eleven inch paper, with several machine-printed lines of text.

thanks, and sure, the debriefing on its own doesn't take multiple threads, I just meant lots of small stuff like that - the only stuff we've done in the past 7 threads/2 months is talking with Sayaka/Kyouko regarding their promotions, and dealing with loose ends. I don't personally mind since I enjoy the characters' interactions a lot, but someone browsing mostly for plot would probably be pretty bored by now.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 05/21/13(Tue)07:45 No.24953554

You are a Magical Girl, and you're currently looking around your new office for any surprises its previous owner may have left you. Kharn's still a friend, of course, you parted ways amicably enough when you left Siberia - but she was still, after all, Kharn. Kharn, who collected the skulls of her enemies and made a throne out of them. Kharn, who collected the underwear of every conquest she made. Someone who tore what she wanted from the corpse of life with bloody claws and a blood-pinked grin.

What you're getting at, here, is that you know where this office has been, and you're just playing it safe.

You want to start this Warmaster thing right, after all. The last thing you need is --

"Sempai! I've...I've stumbled upon what appears to be a wall of laminated panties! ...They've even got nametags too!"

God dammit, Kharn. Just...God dammit.

>> ☐ Deculture 05/21/13(Tue)07:46 No.24953561

It's your first day on the job. No, still not official, but you've walked around with the hat on. You've talked to a few people with the hat on. You've made things happen with the hat - things that you probably shouldn't talk about, if you wanted to avoid dealing with a stab-happy Sayaka just looking for an excuse to shove ten inches of steel through your spine. You've even managed, after a fashion, to successfully delegate a particularly touchy mission to people you think would do best in it, even if you had to cheat and ask Kyuubey for his recommendation. Slowly but surely you're acclimatizing yourself to the position of being responsible for more than a thousand Magical Girls.

It's...not so bad. It's a change of pace, sure, and the fact that you now have to worry about how you look to other people is...kind of irritating to be honest (it's never been one of your priorities, to be completely honest). But it beats drinking yourself to something approximating death in a corner of your old apartment, waiting for a call or a delivered envelope to tell you who to kill. Mami's even stopped looking at you with futile desperation in her eyes, the sort where you looked at someone and had absolutely no idea what else to do with them.

You're even having Ishikawa Kumatora, a girl you gave a few month's worth of basic training to (which she somehow never forgot about, even if you nearly did forget her name) help you look the entire office over for aforementioned Kharntastic surprises. This is, of course, after telling her to drop the bit about calling you Warmaster. Sempai is fine, even though technically you never did outrank her before your promotion. It's simply that you've been a Magical Girl longer.

The wall of panties she discovered, it seems, is hidden behind the suspicious-looking book case - the entire thing simply swiveled on a hinge like a door, revealing a large collection rack of panties sealed in sheets of thick plastic. There's an awful, awful lot of them, with small printed-out tags slipped inside, stating names, dates, places and ages. A cursory look tells you that there are more black lacy underwear than there is the innocent, childish sort. A slightly longer look tells you that some of them were collected at the same time, with different owners and in the same location.

God dammit, Kharn.

"T-there's an awful lot...h-hey!" Kumatora looks at one particular set, a plain white one with a small strip of checkered pattern at the front, where the small pink ribbon should be. "Wendy...Cooldown, Santa Destroy, California? Oh, this must be from America..."

Don't touch it, you tell her. You don't know where it's been.

"Oh. R-right, sempai." Kumatora squeaks, before stepping back. "Um. So...what are you going to do with them?"

If we mail them, we should mail them to Kharn just so she has her collection back. Honestly, we don't need to be jerks.

You pull the laminated pair of panties belonging to a certain Wendy Cooldown from its peg. Well, for one thing, there's no way you're going to keep them in your office. Sure, they're pretty and everything, and they are properly catalogued - you derive the same pleasure from seeing such meticulous organization as you would seeing a complicated firearm be field-stripped to its component parts with respect, care and dignity - but they're just underwear, when all is said and done. Crass reminders and trophies of a former Warmaster's conquests. Keeping it would be something like...well, keeping someone else's trophies for your own and pretending they're yours.

You're tempted to have them burned, but you just thought of something better to do with the lot.

Booting up the laptop on top of the desk - Mami's attentive face filling the screen with her smile - it's then that you ask if the Officio regularly ships supplies to the R&D Base in Siberia, and when would the next shipment be sent. The blonde blinks at you in surprise, before telling you to hold on as she consults something off-screen.

"Oh, hmm. Apparently, the next shipment of supplies will be sent later tonight, along with some requisitioned equipment, Chiaki-san." It's then that she smiles. "Ah, are you going to send Miss Valnikov a gift or something? If so, sending it along with the supplies would be faster and more efficient than regular parcel service. Just have someone deliver it to Logistics downstairs, properly labeled, and they'll take care of the rest."

Yes. Yes, that's exactly what you're going to do. You thank Mami for her help, and she shakes her head, smiling once more.

"It's no problem, Chiaki-san. Feel free to ask me whatever you wish. I'll do anything for you, Warmaster."

She clicks off with a wink, and you close the laptop slowly with a click - feeling your cheeks positively burn at that last bit.

After composing yourself, you tell Kumatora to run down to Logistics and get you a few cardboard boxes - the biggest they have - along with a marker and some packing tape. You'll be packing the laminated panties away and sending them off to their rightful owner. While you do believe quite firmly in the school of thought that finders will always be keepers, this was one case where you'll make an exception.

"R-right away, Warmaster! I won't be a bit!" Kumatora grins, snapping a salute, before rocketing away before you could remind her to stop calling you that. And get you an ashtray, or something.

...Well, at least she's enthusiastic. That counts for something. You wonder if you were just as energetic when you were a fresh contractee.

You walk back to the skull throne, sitting down carefully on the cushioned areas once more - still turning the laminated underwear of the girl haunting you in your dreams in your hands. You realize this only a moment later. Another moment, and you find yourself contemplating taking it out of the lamination.

What? That's...no. That's not your thing. Panties is not your thing.

...It's the damn hat again, isn't it?

[]Take it out. What's the harm? You're in your office, anyway.

Just a hat, he says. Nothing but a symbol of office, he says.

You all but tear off the Warmaster Cap off your head, letting it drop onto the mahogany desk with a sharp clack. ...Seriously, you should get this thing looked at, somehow. It's not...making you think right. It's not making you act right, anyway. You saw what it did to Sayaka. You saw what it did to Kyoko. You even took pictures of the entire thing. It's...it's not natural, even if it does make you look completely hardcore. Even if it makes Mami look at you in that way.

Well, maybe it wasn't COMPLETELY useless and wrong. You pull the hat closer, hooking one cautious finger on its band and dragging it until it's right in front of you. It's...just a strange hat. Like all things, it could be controlled, somehow. Just like a gun that pulls to the left, either by accident in its make or simply a flaw in its engineering. The first few times you use it, you might end up shooting who you're not supposed to - but with diligence, you'll be hitting your mark with it with deadly accuracy. All it takes is time. Time and patience.

Making up your mind with this bothersome piece of headgear, you push it aside, to your left, replacing its spot with the laminated underwear you'd taken from the rest of Kharn's...extensive collection. Wendy Cooldown. Whoever owned this little scrap of silk and cotton may be the girl from your dreams. Maybe not. But it's probably worth asking about it, the next time you meet her. And you'll be sure to do so in a manner befitting the delicacy of the situation.

You smile slightly at the prospect seeing her face the moment you ask her about being fucked by someone with metal blades for hands, and a foot-long pink tentacle for a tongue.

Heh.

...Well. No. You can't spend all day daydreaming in your office. You have a call to make. Iori needs to be told, and it should be well enough in the morning that you'd be able to call her without worrying about waking her up or something.

You fish out your smartphone from your inventory, and the idol had just picked up and cheerfully greeted you good morning when Kumatora came running in, carrying a still-folded cardboard box and the supplies you asked - shouting at the top of her voice.

"I GOT THE BOX FOR THE PANTIES, WARMASTER-SEMPAI!" Kumatora exclaims, all fired up like some sort of shonen superhero. Loud enough that her voice echoes in the office. Loud enough that you're pretty sure Iori heard it.

"...Is...is this a bad time, Chiaki-san?" Iori ventures carefully after what seems like a long while. "Are you in the middle of something? Something involving panties?"

How do you respond?

You tell her that it's just you settling into your new office. Because of the promotion, she remembers. After the panties go out, the exorcist comes in. Probably with incense and those rice paper talismans banishing evil spirits with black metal claws and long snaking tongues.

"A-ah. I see. Well, um, I hope it's going smoothly, Chiaki-san. Is there anything I can do to help?"

...No, it's fine. You've got all the help you need at the moment. Maybe a bit too much help, but you're certainly not lacking in that department.

"Mm, well, if you're sure, Chiaki-san." The uncertainty in her voice evens out, replaced by the pleased tone she'd been using earlier when she greeted you. "A-anyway, I'm just glad you called. Today's didn't start out in the best of ways, so..." Her voice trails off in silence, before she continues again, as if suddenly aware of the gap in the conversation. "...Y-yes, I mean. I'm happy to be able to hear your voice today, Chiaki-san."

Is...is that so? You motion for Kumatora to settle down and keep quiet as you shift slightly upon your throne of skulls. You just called to tell her about the coffee you wanted to have with her. Is Iori not a morning person?

"Oh, well, I'm alright with mornings. It's...well, I suppose it's like Chiaki-san getting a job request that she doesn't particularly enjoy?" It's here that she giggles. "I...I suppose the first time we met, it was something like that, wasn't it?"

...Well, no, not entirely. You didn't hate it, it's just not something you like doing. It wasn't anything...personal.

It's here that her tone becomes slightly sharp. "She's...quite popular, actually. She's on the return leg of her global concert tour, and her last stop is Mitakihara. It's a really big concert..."

Oh. Huh. That's...is that not a good thing?

"Well, it's great! I mean, it's a really huge event!" Iori seems to be hurried, here. "J-just that, well, um, the production company's a rival of ours, and we're seeing this as...well, some sort of insult. Or challenge. Something like that. I mean, this isn't how it's really done, you usually get backup singers from your own production company...it's like she's trying to assert dominance over us. Does...does that make sense, Chiaki-san?"

It sort of does, yes. You can get it.

It's also here that you feel a creeping sense of dread.

...The idol's name isn't...Kirishima Ruri, by any chance?

"...Yes, yes it is, Chiaki-san." You could hear her surprise over the phone. Surprise and...jealousy, it sounds like. "A-ah, is Chiaki-san a fan of hers?"

ZRTP and most other encryption methods only protect against man-in-the-middle so long as the third-party wasn't there during initial session creation. If the outbound lines of the cell towers within the vicinity of the QB Heavy Industries Tower are already compromised, or at the towers servicing the Garcia estate, then it's quite possible for such an attack to succeed.

Of course, this all assumes that Iori's cellphone has the special GSM card that has encryption built-in.

You tell her that no, it's nothing like that. It's just work, nothing more.

"A-ah. I see." Even though she's obviously trying to disguise it, you can hear the note of relief in her voice. "Is...is it security detail, again, just like how it was with me, Chiaki-san? Or something else entirely?"

...You're not too sure just how much you can share with the idol. You glance over at Kumatora, who's now taken a seat on the floor, the raven-haired Eversor cheerfully putting together the box, taping up the bottom carefully and fastidiously. Almost like a child putting together a school project on her own.

Anyway, er. You tell Iori that you'd like to talk about this more over coffee. Today, if she's free. Your schedule got kind of messed up a meeting ago, and you're not sure if you'll be available during the next few days. You apologize a moment later for the short notice.

"Hmm? Oh, no, that's fine, Chiaki-san! Having coffee with you today would be just fine! Um, how about later in the afternoon? Around...three o' clock, something like that? It's only ten in the morning right now, and I'm afraid I'll be indisposed until then..."

Three o' clock's fine. Does she have a coffee shop she likes to go to in particular?

You don't really do the coffee shop thing. It's not your scene. Bars are more your playing field, but you'd rather not take her to one.

"Ah, hmm, yes! There's a quaint one not far from our building! I'll send you directions before our meeting!"

Alright, that'll do. You thank her for indulging you.

"Hee. Chiaki-san, you've really changed. ...Sakura-san told me that you're sporting a new look, now. I can't wait to see what it is!"

...It's really nothing much. You just...ended up hairier than you previously were.

You should really get a haircut, you know? This long hair thing is not working out.

"Well, I'm still looking forward to it! I-in any case, I'll see you later, Chiaki-san, the producer's calling me! Goodbye, and take care!"

You bid her goodbye, and the connection clicks off. You place the smartphone on the desk, right on the pair of laminated panties, before reaching up and pinching the bridge of your nose under your glasses.

That turned out as well as you'd hoped.

"Ah, sempai, should I start taking them down now?" Kumatora springs up to a standing position, still full of fire and brimstone, both hands curled into fists. You nearly back away at her enthusiasm, if not for the fact that you're currently sitting in a throne made of head bones. Take down who? What? Who's the unlucky fucker who's going to get shipped back to their parents in seven seperate zip-up bags, taken apart by an unassuming-looking kid with twintails and the burning wrath of something unholy in her eyes?

"T-the panties, I mean!"

Ah. Well. She should have specified.

You tell Kumatora to start taking the panties down, yes. Probably while wearing gloves. If she doesn't have any gloves, then she should wash her hands directly afterwards, or before she handles any food.

...Oh, and if it's not too much, could she take pictures of every one, making sure that the nametags are in view and legible? It's...for book keeping reasons. Yes. Just to keep things organized.

"Right away, sempai!" Kumatora snaps off a blistering salute, pulling out her smartphone and getting right down to work - seemingly not thinking that anything's off with your order. You're pretty sure that it's not everyday an Eversor gets asked to catalog an entire Warmaster's career of stolen underwear, and pack it all away in a parcel box - but she looks to be completely eager to do this for you.

...Must be the hat, again. Well, at least she's not making eyes at you, or something.

You activate the laptop again, and once more you're connected to Mami's own laptop. Your conversation is brief, this time - you telling her what you've learned from Iori, and how it could create unforseen complications, what with the overlapping contracts and all. Is there something that can be done about this? Should you look into having a team cover Iori while you attend to Ruri?

"I see. I suppose that is a bit of an issue, Chiaki-san, but it's nothing we can't fix." Mami's hands are moving under the screen, most probably typing something. "I'll look into Iori's contract with us and see if it still applies during the date of the concert. If it does, I'll arrange for a mixed team of Eversors and Vindicares to shadow her during the entire thing. If it's expired then, I'll just arrange for it to be an impromptu refresher op for some of our more experienced security detail girls. Would that be alright?"

. . .Well. That's...really more than you can ask for. That'd be perfect. Is Mami sure she didn't want to be Warmaster instead? You've barely warmed the thin seat cushion of Kharn's skull throne. She could easily take your place. The authority and the glamor! A desk chair that's both stiff and knubbly - the worst of both worlds!

Mami giggles at this. "Thank you for your offer, Chiaki-san, but I'm afraid you just wear the hat better than I ever could. Besides, I know you'll do just fine after you settle in." She winks at you again. "Oh, is there anything else you wanted?"

Yes, actually. If possible, you'd like Kharn's skull throne be put into storage. It's...not you, and you'd like something a bit more comfortable. And normal-looking. And has good back support.

"Hm? Oh, well, that's a shame. I thought it was regal in its own way, Chiaki-san. Sure it's a bit macabre, but it's fitting for that kind of position. Are you really sure?"

I think we should keep the throne, just move it away from the desk for now so we can use our own luxurious chair from our apartment, though that might not be the best idea either, if we get that thing, we might not get any work done either, too busy making up sleep. The Throne is still good to keep around for intimidation, and a reminder of what our task ultimately is as warmaster, a task that should never be taken lightly, and never be put away somewhere because it's inconvenient.

Imagine what it would be like if we didn't call Iori and still took the idol mission.

Yes. You're pretty sure, you tell the blonde on the screen of your laptop. You want this thing gone from your office. It's...nice, it's awesome, it can be considered stylish. But it is also very uncomfortable. ...You can't even lean on the backrest without wincing. It's Kharn's, not yours. Just a normal one will do.

Mami smiles at this, warm and soft. "As you say, Warmaster. I'll have Housekeeping come over shortly and pack it away into storage. I'll pick out your new chair myself, I think I have an idea of what kind you'd like."

You blink at this, then turn away slightly. She doesn't really need to go to so much trouble...

"Oh, I insist, Chiaki-san. Don't worry, it's nothing much. Plus, you ARE my Warmaster now, aren't you? It's my job, too, to make sure you can perform your duties to your optimum capacity." More typing. "I'll have your new chair bought and installed in your office this afternoon. You've got that meeting with Iori-chan later, right? It'll be there when you get back."

Oh. Well. That's convenient.

...Wait, how'd she know that?

"She told me about it, Chiaki-san." Mami replies smoothly, stopping in her typing. "She does know my number, though. She's quite excited, to tell you the truth. She's asked me what she should wear for coffee with you today. I told her to wear something cute, yet tasteful. Nothing too out-and-out idol-ish, just something she'd normally wear outside."

...Ah. Well. Um. Yes. You're meeting with Iori later. Just for coffee.

"Is it only going to be just coffee, Chiaki-san?"

How do you respond?

We already "let her down" once before, there's not a whole lot of need to do so a second time. Doing it again would just be kind of insulting and create negative feelings. The real move is just to be cordial with her and make it obvious through subtley and demeanor that she's not going to win us over.

Letting her down gently without actually SAYING we're letting her down and drawing attention to the fact would be the best course, because it allows her to save face. And for a rich idol with a fragile heart, that's vital.

The first time the Prima met the Ninth Warmaster – and for that matter, the first time I did – it was like oil and fire. …Well, oil, more oil, and a spark provided by our new Warmaster. …It was sort of cute. One of the only times I'd seen her slip back into her drawl. She only did that when she was fighting with her sister. Usually.

Took a little bit for me to piece it together, between the unintelligible accent the Ninth Warmaster brought to the argument and the squeaking of the Prima's voice when she got upset, but according to Malal, this was over some kind of forbidden love between the Warmasters. …Guess I'd be upset if somebody fucked my sister, too.

It was probably stupid not to expect this to escalate, between the Prima's reputation as Queen of the Psychopaths in our Officio and the Ninth Warmaster's penchant for blood and gore. For almost a full second, I was even surprised when, as if they'd planned it beforehand, the Prima's Luck and the Ninth's wicked, jagged-looking sword clashed in the blink of an eye. …When the Ninth's sword started to roar and move, though…that got me.

What the fuck is wrong with Russia?

Sparks showered the Prima as she yelled…well, pretty much that. My hand slipped to my knife – I didn't transform right away, didn't usually feel like I had to – but Malal grabbed my wrist. Said to let 'em get it out of their systems. …Seen a lot of shit, but I know better than to tell a Culexus to go fuck herself, and opening up the Ninth while she was fighting would have been a pretty terrible idea. Not worth it, no matter how mad the Prima seemed to be.

Probably wouldn't have gotten that far anyway, though – their expressions were surreal. Inhuman. …The Rabbits are monsters. We threw away our humanity a long time ago. But the Ninth Warmaster was…something else. Something worse. She didn't look…angry at all. She looked thrilled, as her freaky fucking chainsaw sword dug into the Prima's katana. It was blinding just to watch, and a tiny shard of Luck dug into the wall between Malal and me as it was chipped away.

And the Prima…well. The Prima I was used to. As Luck met Vodkasaw over and over, the horrible screech of tearing metal filled the air. They seemed to clash for hours, each quick strike from the Prima countered with effortless ease, and each heavy blow from the Warmaster blocked with foolhardy determination, even as Luck wore thinner and shards of metal dug into the both of them.

Then, they pulled apart, as though they'd found some kind of truce, the Warmaster's manic grin fading into an almost…hurt expression. Disappointed.

"Is not seriously all you have! I heard you are the smart one, but I thought you would have more strength, at least, than this."

"Bitch, Ah'm a heroine." The Prima's anger seemed like it was gone, replaced with a smile we'd all learned to fear. She ran her hand up her blade, like she'd done every time she thought she might have dulled it. …As the blood from her fresh cut dribbled over the metal, it just…filled in the missing parts, as though it was nothing. Freshly-drawn. "And a heroine's luck never runs out. 'Bout time Ah stopped fuckin' around, though." That's when she stopped fuckin' around.

Guess that was obvious.

With a flick of her wrist she summoned Luck's sister, Pluck, and the two of them met again. I glanced over at where Malal was sitting to see if she thought we should do something yet, but she'd disappeared. Figured it wasn't anything to worry about, then, but once Pluck came out, the Prima usually got kinda…carried away.

A mad giggle echoed around the room as she flew at the Warmaster, the screech of chain-on-metal replaced with a quick, repeating clang as the Russian struggled to keep up with the barrage of slashes, though there was still an uncomfortable rain of metal as their weapons collided. Even though it seemed like it was starting to tilt in her favor, every glancing blow the Prima managed seemed to be deflected by the Warmaster's freakish black armor, and the threat of her sawblade meant not even the few blows that sunk in were very deep. …To be honest, I was already having trouble following what was happening. When they broke apart again, I couldn't tell why, at first. Then, the Warmaster spoke.

"Where are your big words now, silly little frilly doll? We are not past third blood and already you are tired! Too much American hamburgers in diet, maybe you need workout?"

"You keep talkin' shit, Russia. Ain't none'a mah blood on that sword. Thought it was for takin' skulls, not takin' hits like a little bitch."

She was breathing hard. I'd never seen the Prima…well, I'd never seen her have to fight so hard before. …I was pretty good at opening people up, but the Ninth was on a totally different level.

"Then you are not going to run and cry? Good!" With a cackle, the Warmaster snapped into motion. Bore down hard on the Prima, forced all god-knows-how-many pounds of crazy Russian chainsaw onto her. She stood her ground, for a minute, as her swords were ground into a silvery powder over her. The wild bloodlust seemed to return to the Warmaster's eyes as they stared each other down. Something about the way The Prima was looking at her, I guess.

There was a sort of snapping sound as one of the blades finally gave – Pluck, it was in her left hand. Had to be. At that moment she slipped out from under the chainsword and whirled to get a swing in at the Warmaster's side, only to have it caught by a black knife-hand.

What happened next...shaped my perception of both of them forever. The chainsword roared as it came down in an arc, nearly drowning out the Prima's cry of 'Fuck you!' as she jammed her broken, jagged sword up into the Warmaster's abdomen. Right under her ribs. At the same instant, the horrid sound of chain cutting into bone filled the room as the Warmaster's weapon dug into the side of the Prima's chest, blood and little fleshy bits spraying along with little bits of black cloth as the two froze.

The chainsaw slowed and stopped, the Warmaster's grip loosening as they stumbled apart, Pluck still buried in her.

Couldn't have been far from her heart. At the time, I figured she'd killed her. …Well, killed her body. Temporarily. Real bitch to do permanently.

Then, the Warmaster reached up with her gauntlet or whatever the hell it was and yanked Pluck out herself, holding the wound just under her breasts and laughing weakly. She seemed to chastise herself, then forced out a much stronger laugh, and dismissed her weapon. The Prima did the same, forcing out a little giggle as she tried to stem the blood coming out of the gaping wedge taken out of her torso.

"Yer…you're pretty hot, Russia. …Guess I forgive you. You wanna…like…do something?"

"You are like frilly, starving dog, Annie May Springfield." …Nobody used the Prima's name like that except for the Warmaster and me. I was almost confused for a second. "Luck and Pluck, eh? These are not great names. But they are good names."

“Well, I was thinking about Killer Queen and Bohemian Rhapsody, but like…”

Don’t remember most of what they talked about. Wasn’t really paying attention. They…neither of them should have been standing. …This is what it meant to be at a Warmaster’s level. …You had to be batshit fucking crazy. …I was lost in thought until the Ninth looked over at me.

“…You know, rabbit is a delicacy, back in the country. Maybe I can have little, tiny taste?” It was probably the most disturbing pickup line I’d ever heard. I don’t think I’ll ever forget it.

“Well~ We do die if we get too lonely. …If you really want rabbit, you’ll have to take us both.”

…I don’t really want to talk about the rest.

…Never did get those panties back.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 05/22/13(Wed)08:05 No.24971957

You are a Magical Girl, and you're currently finding it hard to talk to one of your colleagues. Well, you've always had problems with communication, you'll be the first to admit that - but it's made doubly more difficult by the fact that you're being interrogated about a certain idol you're about to meet for coffee in a couple of hours.

Minase Iori, specifically. One of the top-billing idols of 765 Productions. You have a history together, although you'll also be the first to admit that it's been a rocky one to say the least. A disagreeable first meeting, rescuing her just as she's about to be raped by gun-toting fanatics, dragging her out of a charnel house that started off as a rather peaceful gala...not to mention the misunderstanding that you caused, what with playing around with your aide's soul gem in the middle of a phone conversation.

And don't forget how you said goodbye to her, just before you left for Siberia. Yes, that didn't go down too well, now did it?

You're tempted to just lie about it. You've done it before, either by blatant, bald-faced misdirection or simply clamming shut, trapping the interrogator in stony silence.

But lying to Tomoe Mami, well. It's not something you can do. Not with her looking at you like that.

Warm amber eyes, lustrous as honey, staring into your soul, expecting nothing but complete and utter honesty from you.

You look down and find yourself mumbling your answer, finding your throat painfully dry as you swallow.

It's...just information you're after, honestly. Information about Kirishima Ruri. Nothing more and nothing less.

"Yes, and...?" Mami's smile widens just the tiniest bit, nodding, encouragingly.

...Well. Maybe...there's also the bit about...letting Iori down a bit easily. You've been thinking hard about this, and...while Iori is a nice girl and all that, you're not too sure if letting this go on is unhealthy. If...if Mami could help with that, then...

"Ah. Well, that wasn't so hard, was it?" Mami nods, her smile changing just the subtlest bit. It's a different sort of smile now, one with a note of relief in it, along with just a bit of disappointment if you're any judge. "I suppose, Chiaki-san, that you're worried that you're stringing her along, and want to make sure that she understands what's really between the both of you?

...Yes. That's....that's it, exactly.

"Then I suggest, Chiaki-san, that you do so by telling her the truth, as you would normally do it." Mami leans back on her chair, a serious look to her face, now. "...Don't try to take any airs, or buy her presents, or anything like that. Lay open your heart to her, as plainly as simply as you can. She'll most probably cry, and do what you can to comfort her like a friend would. That's the most important bit, please do well to remember it."

You nod. You guessed as much, really, but to hear it from Mami herself gave it the legitimacy you so desperately needed.

>> ☐ Deculture 05/22/13(Wed)08:07 No.24971966

You're not too sure about that comforting like a friend would, though. Would that mean taking her to a bar, or something? Kyoko usually did that, with you, and you remember doing the same for her when she'd gotten into some rough times.

"Oh, heavens, no! That sends the wrong message entirely!" Mami's alarm gives way to a nervous giggle. "U-um, no, Chiaki-san. Just...be there for her. Give her tissues, listen to her sadness and anger, be there if she needs someone to blame and hurt. She will need it. After that, if you so choose, leave the possibility open for friendship. You get along well enough together, Chiaki-san, and there are wounds that friends can heal better than lovers."

Right. Friends. You can work with that.

The blonde nods again, her smile coming to the fore once more. "Again, it's up to you what path you want to take with Iori. There's no wrong or right path - just make sure that the soonest you pick one, you stick to it no matter what."

...Mami really knows her way around complicated matters like this, huh?

It's her turn to be awkward, now, and she giggles again. "N-no, Chiaki-san. I'm just...well, I do watch a lot of soap operas, haha..."

Right. Mami seems to have equipped you with enough relationship advice for now.

Is there anything else you wanted to ask her?

You thank her for the advice, and she smiles. "You're quite welcome, Chiaki-san. Now, is there anything else I can do for you, Warmaster?"

...Well. If she's asking, then...would it be possible for Mami to pull your file up? You'd like to go over it, and see if it could fill in some of the glaring holes in your memory, or at least those that have to do with your time in the Officio.

"You file, Chiaki-san?" Mami blinks at this, but nods after a moment. "Well, normally the Warmaster's personal file is usually locked away for the Incubator's eyes only after she gets the position, but...I'll see what I can do." Her fingers move underneath the screen, in such a speed that you wonder if being a secretary isn't her actual calling, besides being your personal blonde goddess of luck and salvation. "I'll deliver it myself personally tonight. Are you going to spend the night in your quarters, Chiaki-san, or are you going back to your apartment?"

Uh. Hm. Well, you were hoping to get some sleep in your apartment later. You're not all that comfortable sleeping in the same bed that Kharn collected quite a few specimens of her collection on, no matter what Kyuubey said about the mattress being replaced.

"Hee. Well, that's understandable. Alright, I'll drop by then with your file, and we can go over it together if you like."

That'd be great. You thank her again.

"Oh, no, it's my pleasure, Chiaki-san, don't worry about it. Now, is that everything?"

...You open your mouth to say yes, but immediately shut it as another thought comes out of the blue for you.

Is...is it possible for her to help you out with your hair, too? YOu're just at a loss on what to do with it. It's grown out much too long for your liking, and it is getting uncomfortably warm during the day.

"Eh? I thought it was a nice look for you, Chiaki-san. It makes you look...well, mysterious and stylish." It's then that she giggles. "Well, sort of like Kharn, then, I suppose, but certainly a different kind of appeal."

Yes. You're not Kharn. That needs to be said.

"Of course, of course. Hmm...well, if you'd like, I can take care of that personally, too. And I promise not to do it the way Kharn did, with a combat knife." Mami giggles again, shaking her head. "Oh, I remember that. It was such a rough cut she did for you, I really had to spend some time just making it look presentable. You seemed to grow into it well enough, anyway."

Ah. Well. If...if it's a haircut she's talking about, then you'll look forward to it.

"Of course it's a haircut, silly! Besides, we have to make sure you look presentable for your client. It's a four-day security detail job, right? You need to look your best, moreso that you're Warmaster now. You have to make a good impression."

Good impression. Right. You'll...try to work on that.

"I'm sure you will, Chiaki-san." Again, the smile. "Well, if that's just about everything, then I'll meet you later, then?"

It's a date, you tell her. Finding your cheeks burning at your own words.

Mami giggles at this, making you blush even harder. "Chiaki-san, do be careful on how you say things!"

You manage to smile at this as the both of you finally say goodbye to each other. You close the laptop as the call ends.

Well, that's that. Hopefully you remember what to say later.

You look over your desk to check up on Kumatora's progress - and you note that she'd gone through half of the panties already, her own smartphone clicking and flashing with every specimen photographed. Each one carefully documented, before being packed into the box.

"No problem here, sempai!" Kumatora flashes you a grin. "Oh, uh, I did find something interesting!" She plucks out two specimens from the pile in front of her, before standing up and placing them carefully on your desk. "They're the same date and place as the one you're keeping right now, sempai! Different names, though, but there you are!"

Huh. Really? You slide them closer to you for inspection. One is a completely frilly black number, barely even qualifying as a pair of panties and more of an over-embroidered, triangular piece of black silk tied to black garter.

The other one is a plain and simple white variety, with a golden sheriff's star embroidered at the front.

The former is owned by an Annie May Springfield. The latter, owned by Mary Sue "Totally Awesome Alabama Liquid Snake" Springfield. Same date, same place.

Twins. Kharn did a pair of twins at the same time.

God dammit, Kharn.

Kumatora rocks back and forth on her heels, somewhat uneasily, as if unused to being in one place for too long. "Should...should I put them back in the pile or what, sempai?"

How do you respond?

You tell Kumatora to pack them away with the rest, and she does so with admirable efficiency and enthusiasm. While it's an amusing thought - to be able to meet with whoever owned the panties and just whip them out at your leisure, to see them squirm and fidget in embarassment at you owning such an intimate belonging of theirs - it's not something you're into. You're not so crass to take fun in something like that.

...Of course, you did just take photographs of two of your aides making out in the elevator because of hat-related shenanigans, but that's neither here nor there. Besides, that was just to document the results of your experiment, and not for something tawdry like blackmail.

Besides, it's not like you need any more help with that regard. Mary Sue? Annie May? Totally Awesome Sweet Alabama Liquid Snake? With names like that, well. Murderface seems a whole lot tamer.

You drum your fingers idly on the polished top of your mahogany desk, before realizing that Kumatora had left you Wendy's panties, leaving them untouched when she returned the twins' underwear to the pile. ...Well, you did pick these out for a reason. Maybe you'll indulge yourself this one time. You have a feeling she'd want it back, anyway. Maybe, just maybe, it'd distract her long enough that your meeting won't end in another double-murder.

Surreptitiously slipping the laminated piece of silk into your inventory - praying to whatever god there is out there for Kumatora not to suddenly look up and see you doing so - it's here that you wonder what to do with the rest of your time, before your meeting with Iori.

You have a couple of choices. You've got time for one of them.

[]Look for Sayaka. She's probably training the newbies right now.
[]Bring Midori lunch. You've had the food they serve you in the sick bay wing, and it's horrible. You'd like to spare her that.

[]Look for Kyoko. Check up on how she's preparing for her assignment.

You decide to bring Midori lunch for today. You've spent your share of time in the sick bay yourself, and while you can certainly understand that those recovering from injury or sickness need a specific diet designed to help get them back into fighting shape - the reason that sick bay food had always tasted horrible continues to escape your understanding, still.

Was it something deliberate on their part, some sort of psychological tactic to make Magical Girls train harder and fight harder to avoid being injured, and in turn avoid having to tolerate such garbage? Or was it by design, that something healthy for you really has to taste like something you'd rather not eat, even if it meant starvation?

...Well, you're probably exagerrating here, but you still can't forget how you were served boiled, mushy carrot porridge that one time. Just an entire bowl of boiled, mashed carrot and rice. There wasn't even a side dish you could pick at, not even a miserable cup of soup to slurp.

It's with this in mind that you tell Kumatora to continue with the underwear-packing and so on. If she finishes before you get back, she's to seal the box, label it with the recipient being a certain Director Souji of the Siberian R&D base, and haul it off to Logistics. She should also lock the door behind her as she leaves.

Kumatora flashes you her eager, sunbeam-bright grin, and salutes. "You can count on me, sempai!"

Yes. You're pretty sure you could. You thank her, and after putting the Warmaster Cap back on, you leave the raven-haired Eversor to her duties as you make your way towards the office cafeteria.

It's an hour or so before the lunch rush officially hits, but as you get nearer and nearer to the headquarter's chow hall do you realize that there's a lot more people in here that you participated. Most of them active-duty magical girls, chatting with each other, giggling, some whispering to each other fervently, sharing gossip in hushed whispers. Some are laughing uproariously, bringing to mind a certain red-haired Eversor, although you don't see her one-eyed mug at the moment. Maybe she's still preparing for that mission you gave her. Maybe.

The moment you step into the cafeteria, though, is when the entire place falls silent. You blink at this, not quite sure just what happened - when a cursory glance around tells you that everyone is staring at your direction. At you - and at the hat you're wearing.

Well. Shit.

It seems you've suddenly got a captive audience, here.

How do you deal with this situation?

Despite feeling yourself break out in a cold sweat, you force yourself to keep moving. To keep walking. The void left by the cafeteria's sudden silence filled only by the sound of your heartbeat thudding in your ears, forming an odd backbeat to the sound of your heels clacking against tiled floor.

"Don't mind me," You hear yourself murmur as you pass by the first table occupied by dumbstruck magical girls, in a deadpan tone of voice that sounds markedly smoother and colder from the usual rough growl you're accustomed to speaking in.

A sudden compulsion that you're much too slow to think about - much less suppress - has you reaching up to rake the fingers of your right hand quickly through your hair, flipping the mass of thick strands over your shoulder with a frosty flourish. A repeat of the same gesture you did earlier, at the entrance of the building.

Before you can ponder how that came to be, your legs - now seemingly already on autopilot - had already brought you in front of the cafeteria counter, the crowd in front of it quickly parting to give you a wide berth, staring at you with rapt attention.

You clear your throat quietly at this, before stepping forward once more and then pointing with an index finger at one of the packed lunch sets on sale. ...You're not even reading their labels, you're just pointing at the one you spotted first.

"I'll have this, please." You tell the cafeteria lady, an aging housewife type who's trying not to stare at you too hard, and she quickly wraps the packed lunch up for you, holding it out a moment later. You reach into your inventory for your cash card, but she quickly shakes her head. "O-oh, no, please. The...the Warmaster always eats free. O-on the house!"

You blink at this, before accepting the lunch with a bow. "My thanks," You hear yourself say again, once more in the cold, prissy tone you're finding more and more irritating. You turn sharply on your heel, clutching the package to your chest with one hand, and you leave the cafeteria as quickly as you entered it.

You let out the breath you've been holding after ducking into an empty corridor and leaning your back against the wall. Your heartbeat still pounding in your ears, adrenalin coursing painfully through your veins.

Is...is this what being a Warmaster really feels like? You...you were hoping it'd be something like any other promotion. You get a new rank, new responsibilities, a higher pay grade. You weren't expecting something like this, being the sudden center of attention when all you want to do is to just fucking buy lunch for someone.

You spend a few moments getting your bearings back, before tearing the hat off your head again and pinning it underneath one arm. You make your way back to Midori's room as soon as you can, and you burst in on her drawing something on a sketchpad, a newly-sharpened pencil in her hand.

"S-Sempai!" Midori's eyes grow wide, and she clutches the sketchpad close to her chest. "What's...what's wrong? What happened? Did...did you run all the way here? You're as pale as a sheet!" It's only then that she notices the package still clutched in your hands. "...Is...is that for me?"

How do you respond?

When we first turned Midori, we asked QB to put her parents under guard because they might get targeted by Jyuubey.
QB said that no normal Incubator would fall so low, but he said that since the 10th was such a rogue, that he would make sure of Midori's parents safety.

They might have even been relocated.

Also, fights between Magical Girls seems like it would be something forbidden between Officio's. It takes energy to create a Meguca, energy that is subtracted from the Incubator's own store of Grief Seed energy that's supposed to go towards their quota.
Enough Meguca's die, and it'll result in a significant reduction in Incubator energy collection operations.
You'd think that the Home Office would have severe penalties for things that could negatively affect the operation.

So either Home Office doesn't have that tight of a control, there's competition between the Incubators that's encouraged by the system, or the energy collection is only secondary to something else, since the Third just up and left his Meguca/Grief Seed collection duties to engross himself more fully in the pure acquisition of human wealth.

You take a moment to compose yourself, before shutting the door to Midori's room to ensure your privacy. You toss the hat - that fucking hat - onto one of the chairs in the far corner of the room, away from you, away from Midori, before making your way to her bedside. Holding out the packed lunch to the recovering Callidus.

Nothing...happened, you reply after a moment. Nothing worth talking about, anyway. Just work. It's always work.

But you didn't run to get here, no. Just...you were just in a hurry, after all. In a hurry to get her lunch, before the nurses come around to serve her infirmary food, which you would never wish upon anyone.

"You...you didn't have to, though, sempai. The food's not...that good, but it's not that bad either." Midori is blushing as she says this, though, and you see her carefully closing the sketchpad, placing it on her side table along with her pencil - before taking the packed lunch from your hands and placing it on her lap. She starts to unwrap it, taking her time in untying the knotted ends of the wrapping cloth. "You didn't have to go through the trouble, sempai..." She protests again, in a quieter voice.

You frown at this, before shaking your head. It's fine, you tell her. You've had enough of sitting behind desks and being stared at for one day. In any case, she should eat before the bento gets cold, or something.

"A-ah. Well, thank you all the same, sempai--" Midori starts to thank you for the meal, when the both of you finally see the bento you've picked. "Oh. Oh, um." She squeaks, while you could only blink, aghast.

You've picked the one in the pink packed lunch case, with the hearts all over it. The Waifu Special, a playful, cute way for the more amorous of magical girls in the Officio to 'confess' to someone.

Heard from a colleague once that when they attacked a witch, ash sprayed out. Another one said that when she killed a familiar, it just disappeared. Never had those problems myself.

What had formerly been a vast field of smooth ice had become an endless lake of blood as my knife struck true over and over, rupturing babbling wooden figures on crude ice skates like they were gibbering sacks of meat (though I was grateful they weren't; the one barrier I'd been in with meat familiars was an experience I didn't want to repeat). Near as I could tell, there was no end to them – we'd engaged the witch early. Badly. Underestimated it, and V rushed in.

She wanted to get messy. V loves getting messy on a hunt.

It was hard to blame her. It felt good. Too much of our time lately'd been spent training the FNGs, since Touchdown fucked everything up. The whole Corps was edgy, pent-up. No retirements lately, and no retirements meant no fun for the Rabbits. We were only here at all because the Prima realized that some of us were stir-crazy enough to start busting heads in the city if we didn't get out soon. Not that the city was any safer if she wasn't out picking on witches most of the time, but at least this way we got to stretch our legs.

So thanks to V's blood fetish, we were being gangfucked by pirouetting soldiers and liable to drown in their insides before we cleared enough of them, and every single one we let swirl around for more than a moment pulled a crappy wooden rifle on us that fired crappy wooden bullets that moved at a crappy several hundred miles per fucking hour.

Took about thirty familiars and three shots to the chest before I got sick of that. Don't like using magic if I can help it – makes the nightmares worse – but in record time I made my way over to V and the latest dismembered puppet she was ramming her scissors into, and I grabbed her arm. Told her we had to haul ass and whipped up a broom. Flying is one of my better tricks, but not my favorite by a long shot. Doesn't feel all that freeing when you can feel everything of yourself that you've managed to hold onto ticking away while you do it. …Actually, it feels pretty much like shit.

So she grabbed onto me and we took off like bats out of hell. I could feel her soul gem resonate as she switched right to cover fire, a minefield of furniture and small objects – dressers, mirrors, and knives, mostly, with the occasional teapot and a clock now and again (and once or twice I swear she pulled out a soda machine) – that began to shake and hurtle toward the familiars below like so many shooting stars. A number were blasted off-course by their godawful toy rifles, but that didn't matter. It was as much a bunch of shields as anything.

Once we were off the plateau of ice, it was easy to spot the witch, a tiny, misshapen creature like a colorful octopus with long, sickly-looking limbs stretched in all directions, whirling and juggling arenas like the one we'd just escaped to a merry-go-round tune. The sound was distorted, like it was being played from a shitty radio from the 1930's. It tossed its huge landforms around as though they were paper plates - that was how it got us before. All it had to do was land a hit and it'd send us to the surface of one of those things again, for another bloodbath and another assload more magic use than I wanted to deal with.

I bolted for the main body as quick as I could force my little broom to go, and as we'd expected – and feared – its attention turned from its harmless spinning to our asses. The first swing I managed to skirt by a hair, and the second was held back with a deluge of objects just long enough for us to slip by. The third…The world melted around me as I summoned my stoplight, right on the edge of my broom. Everything took on a dull, fleshy tint, and I squeezed my eyes shut as the light flicked from green to yellow. That was enough. That would be enough to get us through, I hoped. …Any further and it'd have to get uglier than I liked to go.

There was a whoosh overhead, the sound of us narrowly avoiding its swing, but we'd barely gotten a breath before an impact sent us tumbling down, the broom and light both vanishing as soon as I wasn't focusing on 'em. The witchtopus had split down the middle, and the figure of a thin young woman made of the same prismatic jelly emerged, her head tilted unnaturally to the side as it shared neckspace with thicker, stronger tendrils. I guessed one of those was what dismounted us right before I hit the ground with an uncomfortable gloop.

It wasn't an ideal landing, but I had it better than V. She didn't scream – I knew she wouldn't – but V, it had caught. It was afraid of V, V could have stopped it. On her way down she'd scissored right through a couple of its limbs, I think, and it was returning the favor. It even dropped its shitty arenas to latch onto her with more of its limbs, one to each of hers, with another around her waist and another around her neck.

I couldn't hear the noise it made when it ripped her arm off, and I'm sort of glad. I couldn't help her there. Couldn't get to her fast enough.

Not sure yet how I feel about that.

It was then that I heard the Prima. She said later she was worried about us, about how long it took. That's why she's the Prima, I guess.

The air filled with noise, when the Prima would transform. It was like hanging around Malal, sort of. Didn't make my teeth itch, but it did…something. Seemed to make everyone sick in a different way. The world would twist when she used her magic, like it didn't make sense anymore. Like seeing in three dimensions was no different than looking at a painting of a sunset, and realizing that there was no depth to it. To say nothing of the…things, just playing around at the edge of your vision. It was horrible the first time and it never really got better. Most people start crying. Or throwing up. Usually both.

She didn't seem to care about anything that was going on as she walked along the gooey ground. The witch's whole barrier seemed to shiver as it took on that painting-like quality, and it dropped V like a sack of bleeding stumps (which was shockingly close to an accurate descriptor). There was a gleam as the Prima whispered to her patrons, the gleaming, golden scythes she'd recently taken up. I couldn't hear what she said to the witch before she leapt on her, but I knew. V did too, and without even thinking, we mouthed the words along with her:

"Die for me."

Fear isn't something the girls of the Wonderland Corps, the Rabbits, feel anymore. It's something bred out of us by experience, something stolen from us by our demons. To some of us, becoming magical girls was our only chance to save ourselves from our own darkness. To some of us, it was the chance to rend and slaughter, to devour our enemies. To give in to our anger and our hate, to unleash our terrible beasts. To most of us, though…it was both. We threw away fear long before we became Eversors. We were monsters long before we were magical girls.

I like to think that's what brought us all together. Why we all gathered around the Prima…around Annie. Our Lady. Our Alice. The Eversor Prima of the Eighth Officio Assassinorum, as well as its Equerry. She called us Rabbits, her heralds, the hounds of her war against the things no human should know. We were first response for anything worth worrying about, hopping down the rabbit holes and running like hell to break up the tea party before anyone's head had to come off. Before Annie and her fucked-up Wonderland arrived.

The dead and the damned are the only ones who can walk away, once she does. The only ones who can sleep again, seeing what she sees.

"…You don't look so good." Eve's quiet tones invade my thoughts as I slide in next to her at our local Burger Suplex (located across the street from a particularly crappy apartment complex – 'secondary personnel housing' my ass). She looks like she's seconds away from throwing up, but then, she always does when I come back from a hunt. And then we always come here.

Don't feel like eating much – I don't eat all that much, anyway – but I know she'll throw a fit if I don't eat something, especially if I look as shitty as I feel. …Even I can't deny the food here's good, though. Good enough to vomit back up again, worse comes to worst. Wouldn't be the first time.

I grunt at her, hoping she'll lay off for a change. Eve is a smart kid, but she can get pretty nosy. And she's a dour little thing, reminds me of myself when I was that age.

That's not good. At all.

"…You're upset. …Everyone came back, right?" As always, her voice is completely even. …If I hadn't passed up Ol' Batshit's offer before she left, Eve'd probably be my second-in-command in the Callidus Corps. Only ever saw her cry once, and she joined this shit way younger than I did. Used to think there was something wrong with her, but she's just…tough as hell. Tougher than me, probably. Not a fighter, or a killer. Not even a psychopath. Just…tough.

"…The Prima had to step in." That's enough to make Eve wince. "Almost lost V. Got her arms ripped off. She was still throwing a tantrum when we dumped her off in medical." Alright. A large Hassy and a Hurricanrana combo. Guess I can eat something.

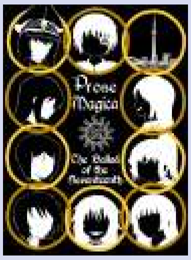
File: 1369241470498.png-(466 KB, 1000x1353, PM.png)



Today's chapter will be a tad short. Explanation on why at the end.

Odette leaned against the wall outside of her apartment building, tapping her foot in a puddle as costumed magical girls shuffled in and out of the entrance. In addition to whatever frilly, girlish affair they were assigned, each girl wore a white cape with gold trimmings over her left shoulder - the symbol and uniform of the Valkyrie squad, the very best the Seventeenth Officio had to offer. Even Odette remembered a time when she was among their rank, some four or five years previous.

She couldn't help but reminisce about the old days as she waited. How long had it been since she'd actually fought a witch? How long had it been since she'd done the damn job she'd signed up for all those years ago? There were three other fresh recruits when she had first joined up. One had moved out West, to take charge of Vancouver HQ, the other two had been among the first to go missing in the past month. As far as Odette knew, that left her as one of the two members of the Seventeenth Officio that had been around the longest. She couldn't think of anyone left that had been around prior to her, save perhaps Holly and Molly. Those two seemed to have always been members of the Officio.

It was an odd feeling, being one of the last of a generation. Before anyone came Warmaster Brie, the first warmaster of the Seventeenth and the first member of the Officio on record. Odette had always seen her as an older sister figure, which was part of why she'd taken her death the hardest of anyone. Brie had groomed her, in a way, to become the second warmaster. Some said that after her death, Odette changed. A small, imperceptible change, but a change that would nonetheless snowball into something much bigger.

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 5 1/2 archivalfag 05/22/13(Wed)12:51 No.24974933

The one-eyed girl shook her head just as she caught the sound of heels clicking on pavement. Odette tilted her head up. Two white-shouldered guards followed in step with Therese Witton, the third warmaster of the Seventeenth. Her flowing overcoat wavered behind her, giving the impression of a king's cloak - an image all the more reinforced by her obscenely tall cap. As she approached Odette, Therese gestured toward the two guards with her chin and watched closely as they disappeared into the towering apartment complex.

Odette held out her hand, expecting the traditional greeting of Eversors. "Long time no- GHRK."

Instead, Therese threw her arms around the silver-haired girl, pulling her in tight. Odette tried her best to return the hug, but it was complicated somewhat by Therese being a full head taller than the tiny former warmaster.

"I missed you," the taller girl mumbled, holding the other girl as closely as she could.

"Ni- Nice to see you, too, Terry," Odette wheezed. "Please don't kill me."

Therese slowly released the squirming magical girl and gently patted her head. "Sorry, sorry. It's just... been a while."

"Two months by my count," Odette stated, nodding. "How's the job been?"

Therese shook her head and sighed, leaning her shoulder on the wall next to Odette. "It's not fair, really. You made it look so easy. I wasn't exactly expecting..."

"Everything."

"Pretty much," the warmaster let out another long breath as she tried to compose herself. "I've been overseas four times in the past month. The others have been helpful but it's still difficult to get used to." Therese smiled as she looked down at Odette. "How's retirement been?"

“It's been fine,” the silver-haired girl mumbled.

“And of course by that you mean it's not fine,” the warmaster replied, saying everything that the smaller girl couldn't bring herself to.

Odette's one blue eye swivelled up, glaring at the rusty-haired girl.

"I'll take that as a yes, then," Therese said, smiling to herself in smug satisfaction. "You don't have to keep this up, you know. This little... self-imposed exile of yours has gone on long enough, wouldn't you say?"

"Doesn't seem like the world's giving me much choice," Odette replied.

"Seems that way," the warmaster smiled as she turned her head up to the apartment building. “What exactly happened? I've been hearing some... strange reports.”

"I, uh, got a bit mopy earlier. Drove around for a few hours," Odette's shoulders slumped for just a moment, long enough that she couldn't quite manage to disguise it as a shrug. "Came home to a smashed window and a creepy ass note."

"Can I see it?"

Odette fished around in her pocket for a few seconds before pulling out the crumpled piece of paper and holding it up to Therese.

"I see you're as careful about these things as always," the taller girl observed, gingerly taking the paper between two fingers, as if it would disintegrate with so much as a sharp breath. With a delicate touch, she unfolded it, her eyes scanning its contents. "This is... something. That's for sure."

"You're tellin' me."

Therese flipped it around, looking the paper over back to front. "What do you think it means?"

"Going line by line?" Odette plucked the sheet from Therese's hands and pursed her lips. "First part doesn't really need much explanation. Tests before me... the disappearances? I need to find who's been taking our girls?"

"Could be," the warmaster offered, shrugging. "It would be a hell of a coincidence if this didn't have anything to do with them."

Odette nodded before continuing. "'Her gracious boon'," she paused and slapped the paper against her palm as she thought. "No idea what that could mean. But 'Her' is capitalized. That's gotta mean something."

"Like a god," Therese mumbled. "Ess. Goddess. Since it's a her and all."

"This 'Blessed Lady'.”

The warmaster nodded, holding her cap in place as she did. "Precisely. Next?"

"Gets weird after that," the one-eyed girl explained, scrunching her brow. "I may defeat 'the Usurper'. The fuck does that mean?"

"Me maybe?"

"Don't flatter yourself," Odette laughed, nudging the warmaster with her elbow. "Not like I want to take you down. The hat looked dumb on me anyways."

"I always wondered why you stopped wearing it..."

"Story for another day," Odette grumbled as she shook her head. "And the last bit about the singing and the animals... I don't really care to find out."

Therese nodded several times as she rubbed her chin. "I'll ask Molly if she can find anything out about this 'Blessed Lady'. Maybe Holly, too, for good measure."

"I've got Gerty and Freddy hunting leads," the silver-haired girl added, "I'll check in with them. I'm guessing fatty'll want to see me."

"A debriefing at the least," Therese smiled as she let out a few muted laughs. "He'll be happy to see how serious you're taking this. Probably expected you to take it slower, if at all."

"Thought I'd let my lackeys handle it, eh?" Odette asked as a smirk crept across her face.

"In much more pleasant terms, I think. But yes."

The former warmaster's smile drooped as she made a few shallow nods. "Seems like the assumption most would make."

The current warmaster looked down at Odette, then slowly leaned over as she rested her head on top of the shorter girl's. "Not everyone," she whispered, smiling gently, "boss."

"You're cruel," Odette muttered as she laughed to herself. "It's after midnight. Go home and get some sleep, kiddo. I'll handle things from here."

"Just a little longer," the warmaster mumbled, rubbing her cheek into the top of Odette's hair. "I order it."

"Idiot."

The next day, or much later in the current one, Fredrica Volk stepped out of one of the Officio's many interrogation rooms. Another witness with nothing to say. No, not exactly nothing. Just more of the same. Little noise, the odd muffled scream here and there, a strange smell and always at night. Only one new piece of evidence, and it was nearly useless. A nervous young Vindicare had sworn she'd seen a figure bounding over the rooftops after her partner was taken. A figure carrying something shiny and metallic, something that she'd claimed was golden. Great. So they could establish that it was, in fact, SOMEONE that had taken the girls. Someone with a penchant for gaudy accessories.

Freddy shook her head and leaned her shoulder against the wall. It was always busy at midday, and that particular afternoon was no exception; girls in all assortment of costume passed back and forth, coming and going from various appointments. Occasionally one or two would stop to admire the boyish Eversor - the fact that her costume looked very much like a butler's suit had always attracted the attention of some of the girls. Not that Freddy minded one bit.

She still couldn't shake that sense of failure, though. Having so little to show for the first task the former warmaster had given her in months. Failing in general was one thing, but failing Odette was something that Freddy simply couldn't fathom. The stress had only built as she questioned each witness, turning up with nothing each time. The Eversor balled up her fists in frustration as she looked up and down the hall.

And then she heard it. That distinct click-clack of footsteps that just echoed with authority. It wasn't the warmaster, oh no. Freddy sneered. She was already spoiling for a fight and even her usual fans had sense enough to give her space. But there was one individual who never seemed to be able to read the atmosphere, one whom Freddy loathed above all others. Tyler Argente. Oh how much she'd like to just tear out those damned hairclips and gouge her eyes out with them.

"Volk," the Vindicare called out, picking her way through the crowd. "I'd hoped I would catch you."

"Oh yeah?" Freddy asked, her voice laced with venom. "What for?"

"I simply wished to offer my condolences about Miss Norton, nothing more," the aide said. "I understand it has been hard on the Valkyries."

Freddy nodded, turning to lean her back against the wall. "Mostly for the younger ones, but thanks anyways," she answered. Part of her hoped the other girl would simply leave it at that. Just offer her sympathies and be on her way, but Freddy knew it was only a matter of moments before the other shoe dropped.

"Just a shame they assigned the case to Brighton," Tyler said, laughing to herself. "I spoke to her the other day and she was the same as ever."

And there it was, all the excuse Freddy needed to pick a fight. She barely even noticed the sudden weight in her hand as the switchblade dropped into her palm. Nobody insulted Odette on her watch. The black haired girl grinned, baring her teeth ever so slightly. "Yeah, I heard about that. Rumour is that you picked a fight and got into scuffle. They say she really put you in your place."

Tyler narrowed her eyes by a hair. "What exactly do you mean by that?"

"Just thought I'd give you some advice," the Eversor hissed, putting her arm around the aide's shoulders. "I wouldn't mess with Odette if I were you. Not sure if you've noticed, but she's still pretty damn popular with folk around here."

"Is that so," the aide growled back.

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 5 1/2 archivalfag 05/22/13(Wed)12:55 No.24974975

"You've already made yourself a fair few enemies, Ty," Freddy smirked. "Don't want to make them too upset now. The Officio would be a mess without you. Think of all the pencils that would go unpushed."

"Are you threatening me, Eversor?"

Freddy only laughed. "Wouldn't dream of it. Just thought I'd give you a friendly warning," she replied. She'd already lost herself in the thrill of the moment. Her grip tightened around the Vindicare's shoulders, pulling her in tighter, and whispered. "I've heard there's been some disappearances lately. People might not think much of it if you up and vanish."

The boyish magical girl barely had time to finish the sentence before she felt something thump against her neck. In that same instant, the blade of her knife sprung out, seemingly by itself. Tyler held her pistol crossbow under Freddy's chin, while the other girl held her blade millimetres from the aide's throat. Neither of them was in any mood to hold back, and they both knew it.

"Don't think I can just let a remark like that slide, Volk," Tyler growled. "You can't hide behind Odette anymore. No one's going to come rescue you now."

"You think you're tough shit," Freddy spat. "You ain't equerry just yet, and at this rate you never WILL be."

"And I highly doubt you'd put your promotion at risk over something so trivial," the Vindicare paused, trying her best to turn and look Freddy in the eye while keeping the Eversor's blade off of her neck. "Stand. Down. Neither of us needs this."

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 5 1/2 END (sort of) archivalfag 05/22/13(Wed)12:56 No.24974984

A second passed. Then another, and another after that. Finally, Freddy nodded as her switchblade retracted of its own accord. She felt the pressure on her neck fall away and dropped her arm from the aide's shoulders. As the Eversor slowly came to her senses, she couldn't help but notice the sizeable audience the show had gathered.

"You're right, you're right," Freddy laughed, backing up and holding her hands in the air. "Why beat you up as an equal when I can wait a week or two and beat you up as a superior, right?"

"Not exactly what I had in mi-"

"But!" The Eversor exclaimed, stepping back up to Tyler and leaning in. "Just remember. You may have caught her off guard and got her eye, but remember who it was that was chopped up into so many pieces that Fubey was out of the game for two days after putting her back together again. So you could at least show a little respect."

"Why you-"

"Listen," Freddy grinned, stepping off to the edge of the crowd. "It's been fun, but I've got stuff to do." She turned to leave, but tilted her head back after a thought crossed her mind. "Oh, and cute band-aid by the way. Really suits you."

Tyler simply shook her head in awe at the other girl's audacity as she disappeared into the crowd. As much as she hated to admit it, there was something to be said for the Eversor's boldness and loyalty. It was almost admirable, in a way. Still shaking her head, Tyler walked away in the opposite direction, the crowd making way for her and dissipating shortly after she made her exit.

Alright, so. I usually aim for 3000 words per chapter, but this time I went a little overboard and hit just under 4000. There were certain things I had to tie up before moving on to chapter 6, but not enough material add a whole extra chapter. So, in the interests of not totally shitting up the after-thread ambiance (as if I don't already), I've split chapter five into two halves. Really, the two are meant to be read together, but whatchagonnado. So if today's chapter seemed a bit short and incomplete, that's because there's meant to be more to it. Good news is, there's a thread tomorrow so I can post it right away.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 05/23/13(Thu)08:00 No.24991467

You are a Magical Girl, and like the mixed-signal sending idiot that you've always been, you've just indirectly confessed to your subordinate.

A subordinate who, it must be said, had jumped willingly into two overlapping hells, made friends with an insane eldritchian nightmare, shouted down a bloodthirsty maniac and finally died - to save your worthless amnesiac corpse of a shell. A subordinate whose knees you shot out with a desert eagle made out of pure madness, after cold-bloodedly murdering her employers. A subordinate who's made a healthy sideline drawing porn of you - or at least, a character heavily based on your looks and personality.

...Maybe confession was too strong a word for it. You just bought her the wrong boxed lunch by mistake, after all. You just wanted to bring her lunch before the infirmary's well-meaning nurses brought along their tasteless, colorless meals. You brought her the meal that the girls of your Officio considered a polite, shy way of revealing their true feelings to their friends and comrades. The Waifu Special, a boxed lunch that was gaudy as it was unsubtle. Its ingredients shaped like hearts, its case plastered with the romantic iconography. All that was missing from it was a bouquet of flowers and chocolates to really ram the point home.

You can probably blame the fucking hat for this, the symbol of office that declared you the Warmaster of the Ninth Officio. The damnable hat that's been making everyone around you act weirdly, even yourself. You're still not sure what kind of magic enchanted the thing to do so, if it did have any magic enchanting it at all. But as much as you can't help but think that it's just a stupid hat, you also can't deny the coincidence of those events happening while you wore it.

Currently, your aide - Hanegawa Midori, Callidus - is looking up at you in stunned silence. The lunch open at her lap, showing off its contents. Her cheeks the most red it's ever been. You don't even need to guess what she's thinking about, or the conclusion she's jumping into.

...You wish you could hate Kharn to death.

She'll pay for this, one way or another.

You manage to avert your gaze from Midori, completely at a loss at what to say. You try to start something - anything - but an incomprehensible jumble of words tumble out from your lips, making you feel as awkward as you did just a few minutes earlier, when you had to endure the stares of the entire cafeteria.

Even that was a puzzle. You've never felt like that before, not to your memory. Apathy was something inbred in you - you didn't really care what other people thought of you, only a few had that kind of consideration.

You'd been gawked at and stared at before, but it never really got to you, not in the way that it did in the cafeteria. Was it being in the sudden limelight, the sudden center of attention, by the same people you've always despised? You certainly never thought much of them, even if you worked underneath the same Incubator. What was so different now that you would have stood there like a stuttering idiot had the hat not been in your possession then?

You shake your head at this. Maybe...maybe Mami would know. You remind yourself to ask her, later, when she stops over at your apartment. Maybe she can help you make sense of things.

At that comforting thought, you manage to finally murmur a coherent answer to Midori's silent, questing gaze. An answer that didn't really answer the question as much as it tried to redirect it. You told her about...well, her now-impending mission with Sakura Kyoko.

Midori takes a few moments to reply at this, blinking at you slowly, dreamily, before seemingly snapping out of her reveries in a flinch. "O-oh! Ah, yes, sempai, I know about that. Miss Kyoko came around earlier. Nearly woke up the entire floor with the racket she was making!"

She looks down at her lunch, a small smile curling her lips. "She's really very energetic, isn't she, sempai? Anyway, um, she did tell me that you had me assigned to help her with mission to...look for someone. That's what I remember." Midori nods.

Yes, that's pretty much it. You let out the breath you've been holding. So far so good. And she probably shouldn't call the Eversor with that kind of apellation - it's just Kyoko, plain and simple.

"That's what Miss Kyoko--er, Kyoko told me, sempai." Midori grins. "Ah, she also told me that she can wait for me to be discharged tomorrow before she officially starts the mission proper. I told her that it's fine if I got myself discharged today, but she was really insistent..." She shakes her head. "Is that alright, sempai? I mean, we are delaying the mission start..."

Of course it's fine. You wave a hand as if to brush the matter way. You're Warmaster now. Anything you say fucking goes.

Midori giggles at that. "I...I guess so, sempai. I...thank you for the assignment, too. I was...I was a bit worried it'd be just like the Tenth, again. I was relieved to find out that I'd just be looking for someone, now, and not tricking them into believing that something horrible isn't going to be done to them."

The Ninth's really more of a direct kind of Officio, but you've never heard of Kyuubey asking anyone in his employ to do something like that. Extortion, sure. Kidnapping, maybe. Assassinations and purges? Bread and butter. But nothing like that.

"...That's...thank you, sempai. I'll keep it in mind."

You brush her thanks away, and tell her to eat before she gets an ulcer.

"Hah. Alright. I'll...I'll try to eat, at least." She giggles, here. "But it looks so cute, I don't think I can even bring myself to take a bite, sempai!"

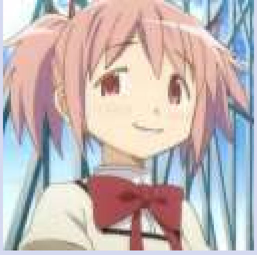
[x]Eat, or you'll feed her yourself.
[x]Tell her about your impending haircut.



After that make sure to put Plan Maximum--Miracle-Midori-Teasing into motion.

And by that I mean:

[x]Hand over Spare key to your apartment
[x] Tell her that she doesn`t need to cook for you too, since you will be on a mission abroad the next few days
[x]Enjoy her reaction while understanding over what you just implied sinks in.

You take a seat on the edge of the bed, before reaching out and snatching the pink packed lunch - and its equally pink chopsticks - from Midori's hands. Quick as a flash, you take a bite of the perfectly-molded rice, inadvertently tearing one of the salmon hearts in half. Chewing quickly and swallowing, you place the lunch back in her lap. stunning her for the second time in a row.

There, you've ruined it for her. Now she doesn't need to feel bad about it. Or do you have to feed her yourself to get her to eat something?

Midori blushes beet red again. "Ah, uh, sempai, I'm--"

You cut off her sentence by doing just that. ...Well, it didn't go as neatly as you wanted to, with a bit of rice sticking to the corner of her lips, but the look of utter surprise on her face as she starts chewing the mouthful you'd slipped into her mouth with the chopsticks is priceless. Maybe just a bit cute.

And so it begins, Midori's strange lunch with the Warmaster of the Ninth. You're pretty sure this isn't how it's supposed to go - you remember Kharn lounging around in the common room, somewhere, reading a book while a few blonde-haired Eversors fed her seedless grapes - but it doesn't seem to be that awkward. Midori, thankfully, is quiet, not ruining the moment by stuttering nervously or offering half-hearted denials - just allowing you to feed her. Although she did blush harder each time she had to open her mouth for you.

...You couldn't help yourself from doing the old switcheroo trick, where you make to feed her but swing the chopsticks around to feed yourself instead. This got you a few pouts, although you could tell she smiled each time you looked down to at the lunch to take another portion.

It's then that you break the comfortable silence, here, by telling her about your impending haircut, later tonight. You told her that you'd asked Mami for help about your ludicrously-long hair - and she'd volunteered to trim it for you. Midori blinks at this as she chews, and nods as she swallows.

"A-ah. I see. That's...that's nice, sempai." The Callidus smiles, and while she's trying to hide it, the note of disappointment is clear in her voice. "If anyone knows how to do anyone's hair, it's probably Mami-san's. Getting delicate curls like that perfect every time - that's nothing to be sneezed at, you know!"

...But didn't she want to style your hair first, before you had it cut off?

"That's...that's fine, sempai. I can just wait until you grow it back out." She offers you another smile, a bit more natural this time. "Besides, that's really the problem with long hair - it's the reason I try to tie it off as much as I can, see?" She tugs at her own ribbon. "At least, most of it, so it's not as hot..."

Ah. Well. Hmm. If she's sure. But you can't help but notice that you may have disappointed her a bit.

[-50 MIDORI POINTS]

What's done is done, though. You try to keep the conversation going - with the packed lunch halfway done - by asking her what she was drawing, earlier, when you came in.

"O-oh, um. Well." Midori seems to blush again at this. "I...just some new character sketches I was thinking about adding to the roster, sempai. But it's nothing worth showing, really, it's really messy, too..."

You'll be the judge of that. You ask her to show it, and after some hesitation, she does so.

There are two characters here, drawn side by side. The first is a pink-haired girl with rather cute twintails. Her Magical Girl costume - or at least, it looks like one - is what can conceivably happen if a bavarian maid costume and a tutu had too many drinks and fucked on the couch. She's smiling toothily, waving around a staff that looked less of a magical focal device and more of a brutal spiked maul. Magical Mimico, or at least that's what was written underneath her.

The other is a taller, more slender Magical Girl. Long black hair fell from her scalp, down to the back of her knees. Her hands and feet a familiar brutal, clawed sort, but where the obvious inspiration wore something a bit more chaste and reminiscient of a soldier's uniform, this one wore...well. The sort of costume that you'd find in really specialized clubs, the sort with leather and whips and all that. She was even licking a riding crop with a tongue that brought to mind a slender pink tentacle. Horns, curved and slender, jutted out from her scalp, and great leathery bat's wings folded behind her. Her name, Kalashnikova Varya, had an underlined nickname underneath it - "She Who Thirsts".

. . .Yep. Yeah, that's...pretty much spot on.

"How is it, sempai?" Midori looks at you expectantly.

How do you react?

Yeah, this. As players, I kind of feel like we're pretty much racing to a Midori end on a stunt motorcycle. And both in terms of "what makes a good relationship" and "what makes a good story", we don't REALLY need to be banging her before the halfway point.

In terms of meta, while it may not be within Chiaki to play hard to get, we might be forgetting that just with her morose and loner personality(as much as some of that has ebbed away), as well as after her last crush went Kenshirou on her, she might not exactly be rushing to jump into a relationship anyway.

The drawings are fine. Suggest her she can make another versionof her doujin series, one based on more real facts. Like a diary of sorts.

Don' talk about the hair anymore, though.

You stare at Midori for a while - longer, admittedly, than either of you were comfortable with - and when she finally breaks the stare, murmuring your name, it's then that you reach over and flick her forehead with your middle finger. Putting enough force into it that she immediately squeals in pain, one hand coming up to rub the spot.

"Sempai, that...that hurt!" The Callidus mumbles, eyes tearful. "What....what was that for?!"

That was for being dishonest with you, you tell her. If she wanted to mess around with your hair so much, she should have said so right away, and you'd have her discharged right this very moment. She'd be hustled off into the apartment the both of you are going to share, and from there she can mess with your hair as much as she likes until Mami arrives.

If she braids it, though, you'll shoot her legs off again.

"E-eh? Erm...but wouldn't that..." Midori's brow furrows here, as she tries to absorb just what you've dumped on her - and her eyes go wide as she finally manages to get everything straight. "...Wait a minute. Sempai, I'm...Mami-san told me I'm getting a room in the Callidus floor. She didn't say anything about an apartment..."

You shake your head as you take the sketchpad from her hands, examining the drawn magical girls carefully. Of course Mami-san wouldn't have known about you sharing the apartment with Midori, because you haven't told anyone else. But she is going to live there with you. There's just way too much room for just one person, and already it feels much too wide and uncomfortable for your liking.

You give the sketchpad back, just as you feed her again. Her drawings are good, by the way. Very accurate. You're pretty sure who she based Varya off from, and you have a faint idea who Mimico's supposed to be. Varya could probably do with bigger horns, though. And maybe shamed magical girls crying at her feet, sobbing about their lost purities.

What, is she going deaf now? Do you need to call the nurse?

"N-no, but..." The Callidus goes crimson again. "Isn't it...a-against the rules, somehow? You're Warmaster, after all, and I think it's bad for you to be seen with...um, someone like me..."

You take a bite out of the Waifu Special - you have to admit, for a gag sort of packed lunch, it does taste good - before replying that yes, she's correct. You are the Warmaster. The hat - which is safely at the other side of the room, dumped unceremoniously on one of the chairs there - proves it. That means what you say goes, that means you make the rules. She's worried that you'll make yourself look bad to the other Magical Girls? For fuck's sake, your predecessor's Valnikov Kharn. Getting a roommate barely even qualifies when you consider the precedent that Kharn set.

"I...I know that, sempai, but--" Midori tries to start, wringing a bit of the bedcovers with her hands, but you shake your head again and cut her off there. You want her to live with you. she's one of the few people you trust most in this world. You'd feel better, really, with her close by, where you can keep an eye out for her and make sure Jyuubey doesn't try anything else. Besides, you owe her for a few things, things that you may never be able to repay but you'll do your best to try.

It's here that she starts to tear up. Her eyes, wide and uncertain, suddenly glistens as she starts to pull in short, quivering breaths. You blink at this, before putting the nearly-finished lunch away as Midori starts to cry. Burying her face in her hands.

. . .Yeah, okay. You're not good with this sort of thing. Maybe you shouldn't have hit her--

"N-no! No, it's not that, sempai! I..." Midori manages to say between sobs. "I'm...I'm just happy that you're okay...!" She sniffles a bit, before wiping her now-reddened eyes on her gown's sleeve. "B-but, please, you don't have to think you owe me a-anything, sempai, I just didn't want you to disappear from us like that!" She sobs again, but forces herself to look up at you. "R-really, I'll be okay in the quarters..."

She already has been horribly disappointed in us in Siberia, when we gave her the talk about the Full Murderface Experience and told her she needed to get to know us properly before thinking it was at all a good idea to be in a relationship with us.

That she's put up with out abrasiveness, our going fucknuts-crazy on her with Kirika's sword, subsequently forgetting everything about her, and then even after all that unhesitatingly thrown herself into a witch's barrier on her own to save us from our own fucked-up psychoses, and is STILL interested in us, I'd say she knows us pretty well by now.

You narrow your eyes at that, before shaking your head again. Taking a handful of tissues from the box by her bedside, and pressing them into her hands. She's not listening, is she? It's not just because of that, anyway. You trust her, and you want to keep her safe. Because it's personal, yes - and important. You're being selfish here, at the moment, and the least she could do is let you do it.

"Sempai..." Midori's lower lip quivers, before breaking into tears again. This time reaching over and hugging you, crying into your shoulder. Apparently unable to help herself.

You blink at this, and...well, find yourself unable to figure out where to put your hands. You settle for awkwardly patting her on the back while she cried it out. Yes. This is...good. You just hope no one would suddenly burst in on you like this--

"HEY, MIDORIN!" Kyoko all but crashes into the scene, holding what appears to be a box of donuts. "GOT YER DONUTS RIGHT HERE, ALL FRESH BAKED FROM THAT PLACE WITH THE MUSTACHE DUDE! I GOT STRAWBERRY FILLED, WATERMELON DELIGHT, HONEY-GLAZED, BLUEBERRY CHEESECAKE--"

She stops in mid-yell as she surveys the scene in front of her. Namely, you and Midori trapped in an embrace, with the empty Waifu Special loud and proud on the bedstand.

"Oh, hey, Murderface," The Eversor greets you, her voice nonchalant, except for the BIGGEST SHIT-EATING GRIN on her face. And you hoped that this time she'd miss it. "What's goin' on? Did I interrupt somethin' or what?"

For fuck's sake.

How do you react?

I am also a bit worried that all of this things may inspire or exacerbate the clinginess or jealousy that Midori may have, as it might have been hinted at from Midori's reactions to Mami's interactions with Chiaki. We want her to integrate with the Officio and pull her out of her shell as well. Not sure if inviting her to live in the apartment so quickly is a good idea.

Changes in your own feelings don`t come suddenly. Especially when love dies. It doesn`t hit you over the head with a baseball bat.

It is a slow decline, you start to see more and more things about the person that didn`t bother you in the past or that you even liked, that turn into something that irritates you with no end. Its starts with the little things, then you get colder without yourself noticing, then come the doubts. And lastly you realize that there isn`t any love left for that person before you, even if you remember it to burn brightly and hot like a pure flame in the past.

You struggle to clamp down on the reflex instinct of...of, well, throwing down some cooked grenades while diving through the window. Or shooting something and booking it out of there. It's...you're not equipped to deal with this sort of thing, especially when people are looking. ESPECIALLY when you can't just shoot the people looking.

You manage, instead, to look at Kyoko with something approaching desperation, and silently ask her for help. You were just trying to do something nice, and look what happened! This is why you don't do nice things, most of the time.

Kyoko blinks at you, her smile disappearing, before it re-engages, managing to be wider than ever before - and she flashes you a thumbs-up as she walks over. "There, there, Midorin. I'll protect ya from the evil, rapey Warmaster. She's not gonna make you cry any more. I'll kick her ass if she does."

...Evil? Rapey? Hold on one fucking second here...! Can Kyoko just show you were the fuck it says on your forehead, probably tattooed or something like that, "Kharn 2.0"? Because you're pretty sure it's not there!

Kyoko gives you another grin, before shaking her head and pressing an index finger on her lips to shush you. She pries Midori's arms away from your waist, and then shoos you to one side as she takes your place. Patting and comforting the still-crying girl, hushing her, making her calm down.

...Well, at least Midori's stopped crying. Whatever Kyoko's doing is working.

"Yeah, yeah. It's okay, Midorin. You can show me where Murderface touched you in a bad way, later."

You murmur Kyoko's name with as much threat as you can muster - which is admittedly not much, considering the circumstances. The Eversor's grin grows wider, before she cants her head towards the door. "Ya got that meeting to go to later, right? Don'cha need to get ready for that?"

Meeting? But you only have the one with--

Kyoko's one eye goes wide, her smile vanishing.

Oh. OH. Yes. Right.

[1/2]

>>24993530

...Yeah, you do need to get ready for that. You thank her for reminding you. You walk over to the other side of the room and pick up your hat, patting it free of imaginary dust.

"Oh, sempai has a meeting?" Midori finally manages to speak without her voice quivering. "I...I'm sorry about the hysterics, sempai. I just...well..." She smiles at you just as she lets go of Kyoko. "I...just...I didn't--"

You shake your head. Nothing more needs to be said, and you're not taking no for an answer.

...Well, there's probably the thing of her having to wait back at the apartment for you until you get back, but you won't be long, really. Kyoko can keep her company there, while they talk about the mission.

"Al...alright." Midori nods, managing to work up a smile. "Thank you, sempai. This...this really means a lot."

"Oh, cool! I get to see Murderface's apartment, hahaha!" Kyoko cheers as you walk over to the donut box that Kyoko had left on one of the chairs, popping it open. "Oh, go ahead and take one, Murderface! You haven't had breakfast yet, have ya? Or lunch?"

You had a bit of the...er...boxed lunch you shared with Midori. But a donut won't be too bad, you figure.

You reach for one, before blinking and looking at Midori. ...Donuts? She wanted donuts for lunch?

"...I kind of missed them, that's all, sempai." Midori murmurs, blushing again. "I mean, after Siberia and everything."

Huh. Well. Okay. You'll keep it in mind. You turn to Kyoko, and tell her to get Midori discharged after you leave, and for her to take the Callidus to your apartment. You toss her the keycard to the apartment itself, which she catches easily.

"Yeah, count on me! I gotta share the dossier with her anyway, this is a good chance to," Kyoko grins.

You just hope that when the mission starts, Kyoko won't set Midori on fire as a diversionary tactic.

"What? You're still sore about that? It worked, didn't it?" You glare at her, frowning, before she capitulates. "Right, right. Friends don't set friends on fire. I gotcha."

You finally nod, and then make to leave, the donut in your hands. Both Kyoko and Midori bidding you goodbye.

The moment you bite into the donut - you didn't really look when you grabbed it - you realize you've taken the Honey-Glazed one.

...Well. You wanted another flavor, but this is okay too, you suppose.

Where do you go now?

This wasn't really what I had in mind when I asked Kong to show me around Mitakihara, though it was probably what I should have expected from her – a tiny shack of a bar with no sign or anything, save for a patch of neon in the window that glowed in the fading light of the early evening. The kind smoke damn near poured out of when you opened the door, that reeked of liquor and broken dreams even from outside. It was…cramped. You could call it cozy, I guess.

There were a few people there aside from us, old men slumped over their drinks. Not crying. Old men wrung out of tears, probably. …Bartender was just the opposite, though, a tall, black man with an afro. He had a scowl that I bet he was born with, and one that I figured he'd probably die with, someday. An ageless sort of man.

…A shitty dive bar in a shitty part of a foreign country. I wondered aloud how Kong knew I was looking to get raped. She snorted, and the bartender's scowl turned on me. Ordered some whiskey, and Kong did the same. …I was seventeen then, and she was younger than me, but the bartender – Charles, I found out later – didn't ask. Didn't seem to care. Just offered a gruff, professional courtesy to anyone who needed a drink.

…I hoped my yakuza rape-baby at least came out with a sweet dragon tattoo. Kong forced back a laugh and elbowed me hard, almost enough to send me off the bar stool.

"You really like to bitch, don't you."

Wasn't sure when it became a contest, but after a couple of drinks, we were each eying how much the other was having, and it became a sort of measured contest to stay ahead. Not chugging them – we weren't fucking college kids, or middle-aged office workers. She'd take a sip. I'd take a bigger sip. She'd match it, then slam the rest down, and I'd follow suit. …The atmosphere really warmed up once you were a little buzzed. It was comfy. And once you learned to speak Charles a little bit, he was an alright guy. According to Kong, he didn't ask about the people here because he knew anyone coming into a bar like this was having a rough-ass time already. Great guy.

"What happened to your stupid braids." When Kong asked a question, it was always a demand. …Told her I wanted to look nice to go to her shitty dive bar. Proper fucking member of the Eighth. Diplomacy. Same reason I came in my nice dress. Nice jacket. Nice boots.

"You look like a skank." …It was a cheongsam, dammit. It was a gift. Christ. Even magical girls could dress up once in a while.

…She was staring at my face.

…Fucking stop it.

"…You should tie it back." …What? "Your hair. …Put it in..." When Kong started to mumble, I realized something.

She was drunker than I was. Probably shouldn't have been surprised – she was smaller than me. Probably hadn't started drinking until recently either; didn't have to deal with rednecks every day at the Ninth. …A responsible person probably would have cut her off, but fuck it. Liver damage wasn't a big deal for us anymore. Wouldn't be the first time either of us made asses of ourselves in public, either. …Still had people in the Ninth calling me Vomit-tan after last time.

…Guess the less roundabout way of saying it…I grabbed the bottle of Kong on the counter and finished it off right there. Fuck it. Kong started to laugh, and in spite of myself, I did, too.

She put my hair up in ponyails. Dunno why but she thinks its really cute and when she smiles I feel a little less stupid about it. theyre fluffy and I look like someone from annies stupid animus. She keeps playing with em and its kind of pissing me off but her face gets really close every time and her breath smells like cigaretes and whisky. theres a little whiskey on her chin this time. charls wont give us any more but fuck him.

The next time she leans in I lick it off because iw ill tell you when I am done fucking drinking charls and then we kissed. Didnt really mean to but i wanted a cigarette. her lips were really soft, and she froze right away but i didnt. I pulled her in and she kind of fell off the bar stool and onto me, but shes so tiny its not like it was hard to hold onto her.

she made that cute noise again when we stopped, then her arms were around my neck and she pushed me off the bar stool and we just stayed on the floor for a while just like that,until charls kicked us out because hes an asshole

Woke up a lot more naked than I was accustomed to. Underwear was still all in the right place, but...figured I'd be lucky if my cheongsam wasn't wrecked, wherever the hell it was. ...Even more disturbing was the company. Seemed like we'd made it back to Kong's apartment in one piece – probably thanks to Miss Tomoe somehow – and we'd...made it back into her bed, too. Both of us. ...Still there. ...Silky black hair was just a few inches from my nose. Kong's head was buried in my neck.

...She made that noise again as I tried to sneak away. Had to get a drink and some aspirin, but... ...Mostly I wanted to get breakfast. It took a few minutes to pry her off without waking her up, but it was probably worth it. ...She didn't need to think I molested her or something.

There wasn't a whole lot in the kitchen. Buttermilk. Flour. Sugar. Baking soda. Eggs. ...She really was into pancakes, so it was pretty obvious what breakfast was going to be. Dug up an apron from one of the cabinets. 'Tiro Tiro' on the front. ...Didn't really suit Kong at all, but it'd do for me. Little frilly, but better than getting batter all over my underwear.

Barely got a chance to start before the door opened and someone slipped into the kitchen, clearly trying to be quiet. I glanced back over my shoulder. Took a guess as to who it was, and...

She didn’t miss a beat, didn’t wonder at what I was wearing. Even kept it quiet. ...I told her I woke up a little early and wanted to get breakfast. She was welcome to take over if she wanted-

“Hmm. No, it would be rude to barge in, wouldn’t it?” Her ever-present smile widened, and I could feel my face burning hot. ...She pretty much saw right through me. “But...I’m not making any assumptions here, but...if you happened to want to make something Murderface will really enjoy waking up to, I can certainly give you a few tips.”

...Yeah. ...Guess I’d...appreciate that.

Get up.

I nudged Kong’s sleeping form. ...Again. And again. Then I just shook her with my free hand. True to form, she rolled away in an instant, snatching a handgun that was under her pillow away and taking a shot at my head. ...Predictable. It shaved off a couple of hairs, but it wasn’t enough. Told her to stop being retarded.

Through bleary eyes she stared at me for a moment, then adjusted her aim. But before she got a chance to squeeze the trigger again, I thrust the plate of honey-and-syrup-drowned pancakes out between us, then sat down on the bed where she’d been sleeping a second before. Like a cautious animal, she leaned in toward the plate, like she was going to sniff it, then grumbled a little as she snatched it away and shoved a hunk of pancake in her mouth.

...Guess I wasn’t that hungry after all. I was pretty alright with licking the mixture of honey, butter, and syrup off of my knife. ...Told her not to overthink it. Wanted something to eat and there was some batter left over.

...That’s all.

Will you be making a long-haired Chiaki Chikuwa?

When we go back to a neo-noir tone, will you keep around the romantic comedy choices just so that they end in failure and loss (of good relations, items, limbs)?

Will Chiaki, with her new appreciation of water, become some kind of water connoisseur? Comparing the relative merits of water from Iceland to water from an artesian well in France?

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 05/24/13(Fri)08:26 No.25010670

You are a Magical Girl, and you're on your way to meet an idol - namely, Minase Iori from 765 Productions. It must be said, here, that you're not at all looking forward to this meeting. Not because of any ill feeling toward the idol, it's just...things happened. A lot of things.

And you'll be the first to admit that you didn't part ways with her all that neatly before you left for Siberia, leaving her in tears and in the care of some spoiled kid who shot himself unconscious with your own tranquilizer gun.

You could have handled it better, you think, instead of hiding behind the tissue-thin veneer of professionality that was almost always soaked through with alcohol. Then again, you did need to put your foot down, then. You needed some space to yourself.

But why did you? It was a misunderstanding, after all. Plain and simple. You did something stupid, she overheard it on the phone, and suspected the worst. She acted cold and guarded and angry - and who wouldn't have, in that situation? Was she really coming on too strong, or were you just simply unused to having someone be concerned for you in that kind of way?

You'll have to figure it out later, you grumble. You just need to hash it out with her, and then...you'll let the cards fall where they may. You're Warmaster now. You can't afford to get...caught up in such things. Not with a civilian.

There's no sense dragging someone who still has a life into yours. You'd be sending them to an early grave if you do.

You're currently being driven to the coffee shop that Iori wanted you to meet her in. The car is the usual company car you're always ferried around in - you bet it's the same one that Kyoko fetched you from the airport with - and the driver is the Eversor that helped you with the panties from earlier, Ishikawa Kumatora. She's not as smooth a driver as Kyoko, but she knows her way around. She didn't even need to get the directions from you - she says she's a regular there, and can't resist their strangely-named coffee shakes.

You grind your third cigarette in as many minutes into the ashtray built into the car's center armrest, before lighting up another one. ...It's not like you to be nervous before a meeting like this. It's just Iori, after all. You're just going to clear things up with her. Simple as that. Nothing to worry about.

...If that's the case, then why the fuck do you feel like you're about to do something completely horrible and unforgivable?

Christ, you'd have preferred setting fire to an orphanage instead. No, you wouldn't do something like that - not with good reason, like if it was an orphanage full of zombie children - but in comparison to what you're about to do...

"...We're nearly there, sempai," Kumatora calls from her seat way up front. "Just a few more blocks."

Right. She can take her time, really. There's no rush.

"Nonsense, sempai! This is your coffee date, after all! Sempai's got to be punctual!"

...Yeah. Coffee date.

You glance down at the shield clamped down on your arm.

Hell, even talking to Pinky seems preferable. It's...you should probably talk to her, right? Just to check up on things.

[]Talk to Pinky.
[]No need to talk to her. It's been two days, at least. Just get this meeting with Iori over with.

Wanting to talk to Pinky is the king of horrible ideas. She will either annoy the shit out of us or be threatening and jealus as fuck.
And you really want to talk to Iori to clear up stuff after talking to a lovecraftian monstrosity in loli-form?
Are guys lunatics?

And what if she rips us apart again and we have to go to hospital for a few days? The missions were are supposed to do would go either to shit or be delegated to someone inferior to us and cost lives.

You decide holding off on talking to Pinky until later. While it certainly can provide the distraction - nothing else like stopping time to talk to a murderous, insane goddess in a pink dress to distract yourself from your problems - you need to focus on what you're about to do. It's going to be unpleasant, yes, and crying may be involved, but if you want this settled, then you'll just have to grit your teeth and simply go through with it. You can talk to Pinky later, after everything is over. She'd probably gloat over it, but you won't particularly be caring then.

You go through half of your current pack of cigarettes before the car comes to a stop, with the tell-tale ratcheting of Kumatora engaging the parking brake. You glance out the window, and immediately see Iori sitting at one of the outdoor tables, sipping one of those coffee shakes you've been hearing so much about.

The coffee shop's pretentious name - Cafe Coffee - is at least offset by the fact that they seem to be an outlet serving Duncan Hills Coffee, which is alright as far as coffee goes. You think it's a bit too strong yourself, for something to jolt you into wakefulness during dreary mornings, but you tolerate it well enough.

"I'll just wait here in the car for you, sempai, until it's time to go," Kumatora says cheerfully, rolling down her own window and reclining the driver's seat a few inches - what looks to be a portable gaming console activating in her gloved hands. "Take your time, don't worry about me!"

You nod at her, before looking back outside. It seems that Iori hadn't spotted you yet - well, not her fault, the windows are tinted so darkly that it looks like it's night outside. You glance back at Kumatora, and ask her if she wants anything from the coffee shop. It'll be your treat.

>> ☐ Deculture 05/24/13(Fri)09:17 No.25011105

"E-eh? Oh...um, one of their Cold As A Forgotten Grave coffee shakes, sempai, if it's not too much! Extra Brutally-Whipped Cream and Cadaverous Chocolate syrup!" The girl quickly volunteers, immediately brightening at your offered generosity. "And please tell them to add extra coffee jelly!"

...Right. You'll try to remember that, but you'll bring her something, guaranteed.

"Thank you, sempai! Good luck on your date!"

Yeah, thanks. You're going to need it.

You pop open your passenger side door and slowly get out of the car - one hand on your cap to keep it from falling off. It's here that Iori seems to have noticed you, and quickly stands up from her seat, nearly spilling her own shake in the process. She waves at you, energetically, positively beaming.

"Chiaki-san! Over here!" She calls, not too loudly, but enough to grab the attention of the rest of the shop's customers - customers you notice are also idols, some of them wearing the same costume as Iori is. A few of them eye you critically with narrowed eyes, while some hunker down with their friends, resuming their conversation in hushed whispers, turning to look at you after every sentence or two.

You nod at her in slow acknowledgement, still unused to the attention but managing at least to deal with it better than you did earlier. They're no Magical Girls, that's for sure - why should you care what the fuck they thought about you? You can talk to anyone you like, even if it's Iori. And besides, she's the one calling your attention, not the other way around - you're not some lovestruck fan stalking an idol. The idol is stalking YOU.

Right, you need to relax. Maybe...you need to take off the damn hat before joining Iori on her table, eh?

[]Take the hat off.

While I would rather not want to drag Sayaka, Kyoko or Mami into our Pinky-Business, simply because its something that we messed up and and its something we need to fix one way or another.. Mami might have a calming influence on Pinky just like Midori.

And sooner or alter we will need to confess to our friends anyway that Pinky is our fault.

From what I rmember after the fusion, while we don`t know the details, we were pretty sure that Pinky is in fact, our fault.

Yeah, from our conversation with Pinky on the plane back, Midori putting Chiaki back together helped our memory a bit. Still fuzzy on some details, but it's confirmed for a fact that we know that Pinky, and by extension her actions, are our fault.

Well, getting Midori and Pinky to meet again might be a bit awkward but it could, maybe, work out.

Getting Mami to meet Pinky might cause certain secrets to come to light.

Then again, as was pointed out, she might blab to Kyubey and then we'd be in deep-shit trying to explain to our boss why his Warmaster never told him she was having conversations with the eldritch abomination that's behind the Golden Weapons case.

A small sigh escapes your lips as you feel more than a dozen pairs of idol eyes boring right into you, scrutinizing your every move. So you won't be able to talk to Iori in private, huh? You were hoping that this wouldn't be out in public, but you did ask for her to pick the location. Somewhere she felt safe. And really, you don't have any call to blame anyone else for this. This is your bed, you made it, now you have to sleep in it.

You make your way towards Iori's table, focusing on the one person you came here to talk to and no one else, your steps calm, deliberate and measured. Just before you reach Iori - just a few steps until you do - you reach up to take the hat off, clasping it by the front brim and levering it off your head in a quick flourish. You reach up with your other hand - just as you tuck the damnable hat underneath your arm - and do that hair thing you did earlier, raking your fingers down its length before flipping the mass of strands over your shoulder. The entire routine taking no less than two heartbeats.

You come to a stop just as your hair settles behind you, a heavy sort of warmth on your back and neck, and you open your eyes to meet Iori's gaze with the most indifferent look you can manage. A look that very nearly fell apart into one of surprise as you see the idol staring at you, her eyes wide and awestruck, her mouth half-open. Her cheeks stained crimson.

...It could be just coincidence, but the chatter seems to have also died away into silence right after you did that.

Something out of chronological order can work, as long as you show what happened eventually.

Often when a couple might split up; as if something terrible had happened between the two of them.

Though in this case it wouldn't fit into that relationship quite as much.

"Chiaki-san, I..." Iori blinks again, cheeks burning redder. "I...I sort of had an idea what your new look was, b-but I wasn't expecting...um..." She fidgets on the spot, wringing her gloved hands. Despite Mami's advice for her to wear something a bit more casual to this meeting, her outfit is decidedly an idol's - a silk one-piece gown the color of cream, with frills in just the right areas and a body-hugging contour that blossomed out into a short, puffy skirt that bared the knees and legs. Her hands, encased in silk gloves of the same color, ending at the wrist in nearly-transparent lace cuffs. A rose headband completed the outfit, the petals created from the same material with the same hue.

She looks almost like a bride about to go to a wedding, really. You'd have guessed as much, if it weren't for the other idols in the coffee shop wearing the same exact outfit, with a few differing modifications.

There's an uncertain silence between the both of you, still standing like that - Warmaster and Idol, in an awkward meeting, one waiting for the other to finish her stuttered words, one waiting for the other to speak. You narrow your eyes as you hear a giggle come from somewhere near the neighboring tables, and you clear your throat carefully. Taking the initiative.

How do you start this encounter?

While it's coming, ask how she's been, see if her friends and her have recovered, neutral.

Only start going to deep stuff after the coffee gets here and you can hold it with both hands, and take a swig if you need to stop an awkward moment.

This is good on Chiaki's part, it keeps her being quiet and listening until she can get the nerve to actually speak properly to Iori without spazzing out overly much instead of right away.

Try and get her to talk about herself a bit, to try and even up the mood and give us time to think of how to both grill her a bit about Ruri and to word our letting her down.

Think carefully on our words, and what we can afford to be overheard by at least a dozen gossiping idols.

She already knows that our line of work is fucking dangerous, though. She saw first-hand our ability to murder the ever-loving SHIT out of people when we killed those rapists, and when we got her out of Kilgore's place.
And she was there when we retired Kirika and lost an arm, as well as when we got it back from QB.
We explained to her that we're in a dangerous business, one that she has no place in, and furthermore, that our relationship was strictly professional, that of a bodyguard and her principal.

We already went over all of that.
So we shouldn't retread all of that, especially when we're in the middle of a damn rumor mill staffed by her peers, and most likely in some cases, rivals who stand to gain from her public embarrassments.

Yeah, this is a good summary of how it went down last time, but Chiaki was extremely cold and aloof then. Basically "Fuck off, you're my client, you have no place giving me shit over what I do in my downtime."

Other than going over the same points in a more polite tone, I really am at a loss as to what to do.

Just, hm...

Small talk, followed by the "I died" comment and "I've had a lot of time to think on this. I realize now that I wasn't very civil the last time we talked, but what I said is still true. I would be glad if we could be friends but I cannot return your feelings. I'm sorry."

We can make small-talk and inquire about her life/friends now, then get her alone after a little while. Apologize for being so standoffish and not considering her feelings earlier, explain that we were not used to treating people all that well, then calmly explain that even though we think she's great, we're not really suited for each other, and make sure she understands that even though there might be some mutual attraction, we're not letting her down just because it would be too hard, or too dangerous, but because we genuinely want to just stay friends and not go any further.

You manage to work up a small half-smile as she continues to stumble around her words. She must have expected something completely different. Not that you blame her, of course - you've only been gone for half a month or so at least. People don't usually show up after that with hair down to their ass cheeks and eyes that don't look out of place in some ninja anime.

You ask her if if it's really that bad, your new look. It wasn't like you could do anything about it - workplace accident, plain and simple. Her brow furrows at this, in the same look of disbelief that you often get when you try to explain something magical girl-related to someone outside the industry - and it's then that she shakes her head, blushing again.

"A-ah, no, Chiaki-san! No, it doesn't look bad at all, honest! It's...it's just..." She gestures vaguely to you, then to her own hair. "I mean, it took me the best part of a year to just get it to this length, and even then I had to use extensions to add volume...n-not to mention all the treatments I had to go to! But yours, it's..." She shakes her head, again, an embarrassed smile on her lips. "H-haha, I'm babbling here, aren't I? I'm...I'm sorry, Chiaki-san, but it's just really so good to see you again, and...and looking quite dashing, I have to say!" Iori is all but gushing now, looking at you with nothing less than admiration.

You nod at this, and after a long moment of her looking up at you expectantly, you murmur something about looking...pretty, as well.

"Really...?" Iori seems to freeze up at this, cheeks going absolutely red. She looks down, as if finding her shoes suddenly interesting. "A-ah, um, thank you, Chiaki-san..."

The both of you stand awkwardly once more, while the rest of the coffee shop's customers continue to look on. Iori thankfully snaps out of it quickly enough, however. "Oh, where are my manners-- please, Chiaki-san, sit down! The waiter will be arriving in a little while to take your order, and please don't worry about it, it's my treat!"

You were just about to say that it'll be your treat, but it doesn't look like she'll accept that kind of answer, right now. You resort to murmuring your thanks, and just like she said, the waiter came around a few moments after you've both taken your seats. You ordered a Blacker Than The Blackest Black Times Infinity black coffee, no sugar. You also order Kumatora's coffee shake, and request that the waiter deliver the drink personally - after all, the car is parked right there next to the sidewalk, in front of the shop itself. The waiter nods at this, and once more you are left alone with Iori, the silence between the both of you deafening.

...This would go over better, really, if it didn't have such a heavy atmosphere. You find yourself wishing that you chose the meeting place, instead.

You break the silence between the both of you, again, as you wait for your coffee to be served. You ask her how she's been, while you were away. You also ask her about her friends, if they're shaping up alright after the gala. Careful not to say anything too...revealing about your work. There were still other people who had no idea that magical girls existed, after all.

"Oh. I've...I've been fine, Chiaki-san! Like I told you, things have been peaceful since then, and they're doing quite well as far as I know. And, well, um..." Iori gestures to her costume. "We're currently trying to practice as much as we can before Kirishima Ruri-san's concert. It's really short notice, and we're not all that happy about it, but it's a huge undertaking all the same so we're doing our best."

It sounds rough, in any case. Aren't there rules about that sort of thing? Isn't it bad form to just request help from another production agency in such short notice?

Iori nods. "It's usually frowned upon, Chiaki-san, but like I said, it's a really big concert. They're getting help from the other production agencies besides ours, and...well, it's really big publicity. They're pushing it as the 'Concert of the Century', where all the idols sing in one voice, with Kirishima Ruri-san leading the choir." She smiles, a somewhat brittle one, but a smile all the same. "So many people are attending, they've actually changed venues from the Mitakihara Mall convention center to Mitakihara Stadium!"

. . .Well. That does sound huge. You wish her luck with it, in any case.

"Hee. I'll need it, thank you, Chiaki-san." Iori's smile is now one of genuine warmth. "Um, well, in any case..." She ventures forward as the waiter arrives with your coffee, the mug stylized to look like a skull with molded hair shaped like a helmet, and what appears to be a triangular mustache bisected in the middle. "May...may I ask about what happened, really, during your...office trip?" The idol must also have been reminded by Mami not to talk directly about Officio matters. "Did...did it hurt, Chiaki-san, when you had that workplace accident...?"

How do you respond?

I suppose that could work, but we really don't have the numbers needed to cover the entire venue, and Iori might question why we're sticking so close to Kirishima if we're supposed to be handling the entire concert.

By saying that we got assigned to the Kirishima detail, it'll make her more understanding of why we're sticking so close to Kirishima, and why we can't talk with her much, if at all, during the duration of the contract.

Well, okay. Iori's attraction to Chiaki is quite blatant, and even the most innocent of comments about a fellow idol's romantic pursuit could travel far and wide in the industry. Ruri must have specifically requested for Chiaki for a reason, after all, and if not because she assumes that the Warmaster would be the best at the job, then this is certainly possible.

Also, >>25012929 is right.
Our past two protection details had the mundane security compromised and turn out to be the actual enemy.
It might annoy QB, but I think we should request heavy Eversor support hidden throughout the crowds, in addition to ourselves on Ruri and the secondary security team on Iori.

Actually, in addition to >>25012648 include "So are there any other idols from your production company going to be there? Or just you?"
I know it's not our job to do Sales work, but maybe we should suggest to QB that he contact the other production companies, at the very least 765, for greater protection given how idols have been targeted more frequently in recent months.

I don't recall this. The only direct support we're getting on the Kirishima detail is Sayaka, and we asked Mami for a second mixed team of Eversor and Vindicare for Iori.
I'm saying that since every security detail we've done for idols in the past 2 months (which admittedly is only 2), the mundane security that was supposed to be our backup turned out to be compromised, so we should have a third team of Eversors hidden where they can provide support to us and the second team if/when the mundane security turns on us.

IORI MINASE

You tell Iori the truth, here, or as much of the truth that you believe you're allowed to tell her. It hurt, plainly speaking. It hurt in more ways than one. Two of your colleagues didn't make it. Interference from a third party. Options are currently being considered as to how the Officio will proceed. Besides that, well...you're here, aren't you? It's enough for you, at least.

"Ah, I...I see." A brief look of hurt and concern crosses Iori's features, and she reaches out with a hand to place over yours. For the briefest moment, you consider moving your hand away, but you find yourself allowing this to happen - feeling her soft fingers alight on your Soul Gem. "I'm...I'm very sorry to hear that, Chiaki-san. I...I don't really know what really happened, and I'm not going to pry, but...I'd like to think I know about losing a friend." She works up a smile for you. "If there's anything I can do..."

You shake your head. It's...fine. Wounds heal, in time, and the fact that you're still here, still alive, is enough of a solace for you. She doesn't need to worry about you - besides, there's always work to throw yourself into. You won't have enough time to dwell on things too much.

"I suppose so. But...if you do need someone to talk to, Chiaki-san, I'm always here, alright? Please don't hesitate to call on me whenever."

The chattering starts up again, more furtively and insiduous this time, and you clear your throat before nodding. What were you supposed to say then, just throw that offer back in her face or something? She was legitimately looking out for you. Whatever happened here, she was genuinely concerned for your safety and sanity, enough that she could say it in earshot of her...colleagues. You're not sure if that's at all kosher in the idol industry, but you could tell by the stares that there's plotting and scheming going on.

Aww shit. This smells like a) a trap. Or b) like an incoming bloodbath.

After we are done we need to contact either QB or Mami to:

1) Investigate Ruri
2) Check our Officio Roster for availible Megucas that could be on Stand-By during the Event, if possible someone we know and with known expertise, we will probably need Back-Up for that.
3) Investigate if any bigwigs are somehow affilated to this event that had employed Megucas before, not only our Officio but rival officios too, if possible

Call me paranoid, but this time we won`t be catched flat-footed like with Kilgore.

You use your free hand to finally grab the strange skull-mug by the handle, lifting it off the table and raising it to your lips for a careful sip. The coffee was still hot, but cooled down enough for you to be able to drink without being scalded.

Rat piss. It tastes like rat piss. You force yourself to swallow the mouthful completely. Spitting it somewhere comes to mind, but...Warmasters don't do that, do they?

In hindsight, you should have asked for sugar. It's nearly undrinkable. It's got a kick, but it tastes horrible.

"Anyway, um...what's this about Kirishima Ruri-san, anyway, Chiaki-san? Why the sudden interest?" Iori asks, leaning forward. You feel a subtle change in the air, as if the other idols looking on are doing the exact same thing. A tightening in the air's tension, where a dozen mouths held in bated breaths.

You glance at her, then back at the well-manicured, fancily-gloved hand on top of yours - and it's then that you place your mug down. Taking the Warmaster Cap that you've placed on your lap and setting it upon the table instead.

You might as well come clean, now, since she'll be finding out tomorrow anyway. You pull your hand slowly from underneath her hand - a gesture the idol doesn't miss at all - and tell her the truth.

You've been hired as security detail.

"...For the concert, Chiaki-san? Well, um, that's not that puzzling--"

Exclusively for Kirishima Ruri.

Iori's face seems to drain of all color, her eyes widening. "...An...exclusive security detail, Chiaki-san?" Iori squeaks. It takes her a certain amount of time to recover. "I...ah...um. Well. Is it...I..." Iori looks like she's at a complete loss on what to say. When she speaks again, there's an edge to her voice. "I...I had an inkling she'd try something like that, but I didn't really think she'd go through with it..."

...Does idol rivalry go to this kind of length? Did Ruri hire you in order to cuckold Iori, or something?

How do you react?

Kirishima had now way of knowing that we would be Warmaster.
Yet she apparently has a History with Iori and the other Idols and requested a Warmaster before the Warmaster was officially initiated.

This is a Trap. Either by Ruri herself who might have a Golden Weapon or a Third Party is using her as a bait.
Since we still haven`t heard anything from the Saints since we are here and we killed already two of them, so I guess they are probably somehow involved.

You are right, she doesn't. Perhaps she still thinks Kharn is Warmaster.

You narrow your eyes at this. If Iori's reaction to the news was anything to go by, then there has to be something that she's not telling you about the two of them. You should have expected this at the start - you don't know much about idols, admittedly, but even you know what kind of things people can do just to grab the top spot. It's almost comparable to the competitive world of Magical Girls - it's only that idols aren't really meant to kill each other if they disagree. At the very least, your kind has the room to be lethally honest. Idols apparently do shit like this, cloak-and-dagger, getting under each other's skin through underhanded means.

After letting Iori stew on her thoughts - the idol furiously sipping at the remains of her drink through a straw, creating that petulant sound of droplets being sucked into a vaccuum - you ask her about...well, her and Ruri. Was there something between the both of them? What would cause her to ask specifically for you for security detail? This reeks of something personal, or a grudge of some sort. Would it be possible for Ruri to be hiring you in order to get back at Iori?

"I..." Iori grits her teeth at this, before shaking her head. "It...it all started after...well, after what happened in the Hotel, Chiaki-san. A couple of days or so, after I started...um...rooming with you." The whispers grow a tiny notch louder at this, but fades soon away. "Kirishima Ruri-san started calling me, texting me, asking if I'm okay. It was...strange, since our production agencies aren't really in good terms, but I thought she wanted to be friends. We talked for a fair bit, and I even went shopping with her a couple of times. She helped me buy your maid outfit, too, if you remember that..."

Yes. You remember all too well. And then what happened?

She takes another sip from her now completely-empty cup, and places the container back onto the table. "She kept asking me about you until the gala. I...she stopped contacting me after that. T-then, um..." It's then that Iori's face pales once more. "Ruri called me up one night. What is this feeling of imminent doom.
>clear out the relationship
And lose her for good. Which is what we came to do, but doesn't make it any less hard.

>keep asking
Implies interest, and that the prospect of having Ruri 'stealing' us from Iori is being considered.

No good option.

As I stared down three of the most dangerous people in the Eighth, the only thing I felt was...a deep calm. A sense of purity. Like...for one of the only times in my life, I'd really, truly done something right. Three sets of eyes were fixed on me with a burning, almost painful intensity. Three bodies tensed as time stood still.

"...If yer gonna shit on us, at least open yer fucking eyes." Mary Sue Springfield. The older of the Springfield Sisters, the two girls chosen on sight by the Demon in the Garden of Madness, Warmaster Marigold. A rising star in the Vindicares, and one of the magical girls that enlisted about when I did. They said she could pick up a handgun and make a snap-shot at a fly three hundred yards away and nail it every time. Asked her to show me once. She called me a pussy for 'pickin' a faggot gun' and did it with a huge fuckoff revolver instead. Same revolver I was going to be facing down any second now.

"...I trusted you, Wendy. What the fuck." Annie May Springfield. Mary Sue's younger sister. One of the Officio's top Eversors, and Miss Marigold's spiritual successor. Always had an air of nonchalance to her, but when Annie got serious...when Annie was serious, she'd tear someone's throat out with her teeth for the sheer violence of it. Whole world around her turned into a bloody Hell that made my worst nightmares look like... ...made them look like some of my better nightmares. ...Not as squeamish as most people.

...The two of them together are almost as frightening as Ol' Batshit. Even I was a little worried, and until about two seconds ago, we'd been best friends.

...Then there was the third. Amber 'Magical Guro' Nakajima, whose smile had turned chilling; her yellow eyes devoid were completely of warmth, and they had an unnatural glow that may have even rivaled Annie's. Amber was a story we told the FNGs even before she contracted at gunpoint a couple of months ago. Used to be an assassin, and one of the handful of normal humans with the balls to hunt magical girls. Had a reputation for cutting them up. Keeping them alive for days, so she could see how we worked. Never stopped smiling, either. ...Eightball's got a thing for crazy bitches.

I took a long drag on my cigarette, relishing the tension in the air. I could hear both of the Springfield sisters' hands on their revolvers as I opened my mouth to speak. To explain what had just happened.

Ron. All terminals. Three dora. With Riichi, that's-

A gunshot rang out, then another. Then a lot more. I kicked away from the table instinctively as my side of it got the everloving hell shot out of it by .45-caliber bullets. The Springfield Sisters moved in perfect time, each blasting away six of the tiles I'd set out in front of me.

"Well now, I thought you needed thirteen tiles in your hand, Wendy. I only see one, 'n the one you took from me." Annie smirked down at me, then blew on the barrel of her gun with entirely needless showmanship before tucking it back into her jeans.

"Don't even know how ta play Chinese Poker." And across the table, Mary clicked her tongue, doing the same with a little shake of her head. The two exchanged a look, then leaned in to fist-bump.

Nakajima's eyes narrowed. Recognized the look, from the few times I'd hung around her for more than a couple of minutes. Something had just clicked in her head. She stood up a little bit, then leaned in, all the way over the table, snatching Annie's tile away from the shattered remains of my side. She slipped it in with her other tiles, then flipped the whole thing onto the table at once, giggling.

"Ron!"

Game night became a weekly Alpha Team tradition, eventually. A way to blow off stress from a week of Ol' Batshit's extensive gardening/murder regimen. Wasn't actually any of Alpha Team's idea, though; Nakajima came up with it, probably because she was bored. She joined the Eversors right after she contracted, but her reputation – and presumably her on-the-job methods – put anyone off from working with her after about a mission. Started hanging around Alpha Team, since Annie and Mary were the ones that brought her in. Guess you could say she was our fourth member, though Miss Marigold didn't have any interest in training her. Said she could tell at a glance Nakajima was low-blooded, or something.

We just don't ask questions when Miss Marigold talks, most of the time. It's all flowers and crazy incomprehensible Southern bullshit.

...Mahjong was the first thing we tried to play, but it didn't go over well. I picked it up watching Triads back when I'd just joined the Officio, and I didn't explain it all that well. Figured Annie's inner Japanophile would kick in and help, but she didn't seem to have a good grasp of it either. Poker went a little better, but Nakajima got bored with how much you don't actually play when you're playing poker. ...Probably didn't help that Mary kicked all of our asses at it pretty handily. Mario Kart ended up as a competition between Annie and Nakajima every time we'd pick it up, and Monopoly...

We don't talk about Monopoly. Fuck Monopoly.

...They were still good times, though. Even if we couldn't find anything that was fair, exactly. Ended up in a couple of fistfights, but every week, it was a few hours of screwing around with...with my best friends, I guess. Doing normal things. ...Something I hadn't done in a very long time.

Eventually more people started to join up. Crazy bitches Eightball found. Girls that couldn't work in normal units. We'd invite them to screw around with us on game night, and slowly, we got to know each other. ...Kind of found each other for missions. Other outcasts to watch our backs. Guess I'd had Annie and Mary since just a couple of weeks after I joined, but...

...We all knew what it was like to be alone. And none of us would have wished it on anyone.

"No. No she won`t. I´m pretty sure I can come up with a bunch of reasons why she is interested in me and none of those have anything to do with love or lust. I won`t fall for her.

That said, Iori, I want us to be on the same page regarding that. You are my Employer and you are my friend. And I would prefer if we stayed friends, if possible."

I think this pretty clear without ourright telling her in her face that we don`t love her around all the other idols.

I also have the sneaking suspicion that the Rape-Otaku-Incident wasn`t some shitty thing that just happened. I mean, come on, how exactly would some shitty Otakus compromise Hotel Security? Why did we never investigate that? You need some sort of wealth to do that. They were paid to pull that shit. How to better ruin an Idol than fucking rape her and get the Rapevids in Television or the Internet.

The world of idols in noir truly is a terrifying one. And not so different from our live after all.

Prose Magica
The Ballad of the Seventeenth

For the benefit of those who don't follow me on twitter or check my pastebin, and for the sake of completion, here's the second half of chapter 5.

Meanwhile, in a darkened room lit only by the glow of a dozen screens, the Seventeenth incubator sat and watched the ensuing scene. The rotund incubator looked less like a cat or animal, as most of his brothers did, and more akin to a clear sack of flour with legs stretched just a bit past its limit. He was so large, in fact, that his enormous girth nearly covered the entirety of the pillow that had been placed atop his desk. The twin prehensile appendages known as the trademark of the Incubators hung limp from his cheeks, just above his mouth, giving the impression that he had an enormous moustache.

The monitor placed directly in front of him showed the confrontation between Tyler and Fredrica, while the one directly right of it displayed only a black screen with bright white text reading "V1 - Sound Only".

"Would those two just get it over with and fuck already?" Holly groaned over the speakers, the sound of typing in the distant background. "See boss, I told you this would happen. I told you! But nope, didn't listen! It's only a matter of time now."

"I am grateful that you have brought this incident to my attention, Miss Corbin. I'm beginning to understand why my brothers add such violations of privacy to their contracts. However, I hardly believe this fulfils the conditions of your prediction."

"Seriously? I just don't understand you, bossman," the Vanus sighed. "You spend millions on a state of the art prediction engine, and then when it tells you something SERIOUS, you don't listen."

"Miss Corbin, I am simply taking into account the variables of the human mind," the incubator paused, blinking its crimson eyes as the tape rewound itself and played again. "I apologize if it seems I am disregarding your predictions, but you yourself admitted how outlandish they sounded."

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 5 2/2 archivalfag 05/24/13(Fri)13:40 No.25014186

"Has it ever been wrong?" The vanus asked, her voice, for once, coming off as stern and cold.

"Miss Cor-"

"Has it ever been wrong?" She asked again, adding more strength to her voice.

"There is a first for everything." The incubator's gaze seemed to wander for a moment before snapping back to the monitors. "I apologize, that was rude."

The Seventeenth had always been noted for being far more polite than any of his brothers. He was one of the few who treated his charges with utmost respect, believing this to be the key to optimal results. It had become a running joke among the girls of the Seventeenth - and select other Officios - that Fubey was only doing his best to act more Canadian.

"It's fine, Foob," Holly grumbled indignantly. "You want to ignore the prediction engine, fine by me. See if I care."

"Miss Corbin, I meant no disrepect and I sincerely apologize. However, you understand exactly what sort of measures would need to be taken should your prediction prove correct," the incubator shifted his gaze to the second screen, as if using it to look directly at the Vanus. "Our organization can not afford mobilization of that calibre on a hunch."

"Ninety-nine point six repeating, Fubey. That's no hunch. I think a point three-four percent chance of failure is an acceptable risk when the fate of the entire Officio is at stake."

"Perhaps," the incubator nodded as his words flowed out into the air. "Perhaps."

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 5 2/2 archivalfag 05/24/13(Fri)13:40 No.25014193

With a distinct thump, Fubey rolled himself off the desk and disappeared underneath it. "If I may be so bold as to seek your counsel once more," he began, "what do feel should become of our Miss Volk? As Miss Argente said, it does not bode well for her promotion."

The vanus thought for a moment, leaving only the sound of fingers on keys emanating from the speakers. "I say we just send the video to Odette and leave it to her. Either that or put her on an assignment with Tyler. Make them buddy-cop it up."

"Goodness, I was unaware that you held such animosity for Miss Volk," the incubator replied as he emerged from beneath his desk, riding proud and tall on his Roomba, his fluffy tail swishing back and forth as he clutched the remote in his prehensile moustache.

"Are you- Do I hear-"

"I really must thank the warmaster for her gift. It is most useful."

"She spoils you," the Vanus groaned. She could almost hear the satisfaction in the incubator's voice. "This is why you're so fat. We keep saying you need to go on a diet."

"Incubators are neither fat nor thin and do not require organic sustenance. This is simply the figure which nature has seen fit to bestow upon me."

Hearing that remark, Holly couldn't hold back her laughter any longer. It came out long and hard as she wheezed out a few choice words. "The only thing bestowed upon you is a few too many Timbits, Chubby!"

Later that day, Odette stood outside of the First Canadian Place, leaning against Sleepy Sue and glaring at her cellphone. Fredrica nervously shifted in place in front of her, twiddling her thumbs and fidgeting with the hems of her suit top.

"You want to explain this?" Odette asked, showing Freddy her phone.

The black-haired girl watched nervously as the earlier encounter with Tyler played out before her in all of its glory. She flinched when the two held pulled their weapons and held them to each other's throats and cringed at her own exit.

"I was just, y'know, standing up for yo-"

"Is that so?" Odette interrupted. Her words seethed with rage. If she could, Freddy would have turned tail and run that very moment. "YOU were standing up for ME?"

"Well, yeah, I mean-"

"Are you saying I can't stand up for myself, Freddy?" Odette asked, taking a step closer.

"No! Never!"

"Then why are you trying so hard to defend me, Freddy?" The one-eyed girl asked as she took another step.

"I- I meant no disrespect, warmas-" Freddy caught herself a moment too late. Her eyes shot open in a mixture of shock and fear. "I- I didn't mea-"

She barely even saw Odette move before the shorter girl's hand grabbed her by the collar and pulled Freddy down to eye level. "Listen, jackass," Odette hissed, "because of you, now I have to go and apologize to that cunt. I have to go and clean up YOUR goddamn mess. I have to apologize to the BITCH who TOOK. MY. EYE. Is that what you wanted?"

The former warmaster had a knack for being far more intimidating than anyone her size had any right to be. Freddy could see the fire in her single eye. A chill went up her spine as she noticed the sudden plunge in temperature. The panicking Eversor was suddenly aware that she could see her own breath as the smaller girl's iron grip held her in place. She knew all too well exactly how close Odette was to dragging her into a dark alley and making her wish she could just give up and die.

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 5 END archivalfag 05/24/13(Fri)13:42 No.25014209

"I'll do it!" Freddy pleaded. "I promise! I'll do it myself! I'll apologize and grovel and everything! I just wanted to make you happy!"

A sly grin crept across the shorter girl's face. In that instant, Fredrica Volk realized exactly to what degree she had misjudged the other girl. She'd panicked and fallen right into her trap. This was the true nature of an angry Odette.

"Then do it," the one-eyed girl said, holding out her cellphone. "Right now."

"Ri- Right now?"

"Right now," Odette ordered as she began to navigate the device's various menus. "I'll even find her number for y-"

Odette blinked. Her eyes went wide. There was no way...

"Odette?" The black-haired Eversor called out. "You okay?"

It wasn't possible. It SHOUDLN'T have been possible.

The one-eyed girl's mouth hung open. "Oh my god. I am such an idiot."

"What is it?"

Odette shook her head. She didn't want to believe it, but there it was. Staring her in the face. With a pair of unmistakeable dark brown eyes and a long mane of hair that looked as though it had never seen a brush in its life.

"Fennel Vance," she muttered. "I met her yesterday."

"That's," Freddy blinked and wrinkled her brow, "that's impossible. She went missing nearly two weeks ago."

The silver-haired girl nodded. It was a sheer coincidence that she'd accidentally opened up the list of missing girls again. She'd always been terrible with faces. She knew that she knew them, she just couldn't figure out where from. Her voice was muted as she murmured out a simple question.

"So then what was she doing here?"

Alright guys, we've got 4 more pages to think this through, now that we're not trying to get our posts in before Decu starts writing.

Yes, Iori ended up creating an opportunity for us.
But consider these items:
1. we're still in the middle of a group of gossiping idols, who are actively trying to listen in on us.
2. Our rejection is still likely to result in crying on the part of Iori

Waiting till we're away from all of these idols before we break Iori's heart a second time would be better for her.

Question about the after-quest write-ups. Are they cannon (as cannon as quest can be) or do they have no relation to the quest we are playing and are just a bits of fan-fiction of... someone. Who writes them anyway? Is it just one guy or different people? Is it Deculture under different name?

I just want to know if those things are happening in Decu's setting and quest. I never read them before the last thread when Deculture referenced the writeup in his last post.
If they are just fanfics made by other people, I don't see any reason to read them but if they are actually incorporated into the setting then they are worth.

Also, do the writes first let Decu read them and then post them or do they just post them without making sure they fit into Deculture's story?

We know that elements of the Eighth Officio, such as Smooth Alabama Liquid Snake and Wendy Cooldown have been referenced and mentioned in the main plot (their panties, and the gift given to Sayaka).
Also, Chiaki did actually meet Wendy, who even said that she'd pitch in and help when we mentioned that Mami was in danger.

One more thing that I think bears mentioning:
The idols that are listening in on us now; they've pretty much gotten the entire conversation. Their whispering even got louder when Iori mentioned rooming with us.

They are filing away this conversation, anything and everything we say can and will be used against Iori.
In >>25013306
the whispering intensified as soon as Iori offered to be a confidante.

If we reject her publicly then that's something even better that they'd be able to use against Iori.
An idol looking for friendship and comfort in another girl? Scandalous.
Said idol being rejected, rather than the other way around? Career destroying rumors acquired. Because in the former situation of "How Lewd", an idol could beg forgiveness from her fans and colleagues for not being the pillar of purity that their carefully crafted image is supposed to be.
But in the latter, she didn't even measure up, and was rejected.

I really think it's important that when we do friendzone Iori, that it be done in private.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 05/27/13(Mon)07:31 No.25067720

You are a Magical Girl, and you're currently having coffee with one of your former clients. A client whose life you'd saved twice, in as many times as she's hired you. Well, maybe more times than that, but you don't keep really keep count. All you counted, really, was the paycheck you got afterwards.

Maybe the kills you got during the job was worth counting, sure, but even that got old. Kill tallies were all well and good, and even Kyoko herself got a bit fussy over hers, but you never did see the point of it. Who cares how many people you've killed, anyway? What was the point? Sure, it looks nice on your record. It's a conversation starter. But you've never felt it was worth bragging about. You've never thought it was a reliable standard of how good someone was. It was nothing but a running total of how many people you've murdered. The act itself wasn't worth celebrating, it was just something you had to do. It certainly isn't something worth trying to keep track of.

...A sudden surge of melancholic, introspective guilt aside, you note idly that it's been a while since you killed someone.

Unless killing a fragment of yourself counts, but that probably just counts as masturbation. Maybe. You can't verify right now.

In any case. You're having coffee right now with Minase Iori, 765 Productions idol. She's just given you the opportunity to do what you came here for - and not one to waste an opportunity when it's all but dropped onto your lap, you go for it.

You tried to be gentle about it, the first time you gave this...talk. Of course it still came out unfeeling, rough, and callous - something you'd want to blame on your cigarette-ruined voice, but there's a limit to just how much you're willing to delude yourself. One thing's for sure, though. You don't want to cause a scene, not with so many people looking on. You'd like not to cause tears, no matter how inevitable that seems to be. You'd like to be considerate, here, is what you're trying to get at. For once in yourlife, you'd like to do the right thing.

Iori is looking at you, expectantly, hanging onto your every word.

The shield clamped on your right arm is clicking faintly, so faintly, that you're not sure if it's clicking at all.

How do you let Iori down?

"No. No she won`t. I´m pretty sure I can come up with a bunch of reasons why she is interested in me and none of those have anything to do with love or lust. I won`t fall for her.

That said, Iori, I want us to be on the same page regarding that. You are my Employer and you are my friend. And I would prefer us to just stay friends, if possible."

I think this pretty clear without ourright telling her in her face that we don`t love her around all the other idols.

I also have the sneaking suspicion that the Rape-Otaku-Incident wasn`t some shitty thing that just happened. I mean, come on, how exactly would some shitty Otakus compromise Hotel Security? Why did we never investigate that? You need some sort of wealth to do that. They were paid to pull that shit. How to better ruin an Idol than fucking rape her and get the Rapevids in Television or the Internet.

The world of idols in noir truly is a terrifying one. And not so different from our live after all.

Politely, but don't leave any room for error, make sure it's very clear that we're letting her down. If possible get her somewhere a bit with more privacy.

"Iori, Ruri, no doubt a crazy bint with a strange obsession with Magical Girls, isn't going to steal me away from you.

This is for two reasons, firstly, I'm not going to get involved with her beyond my job, my life is complicated enough as it is and I am in no way looking for a relationship with her. It's simply an absurd idea.

The second reason is because I am not something that can be stolen from you as I do not belong to you. I enjoy your company, I consider you one of the few friends who I've managed to find. But we're not anything more than that.

You really don't want us to be more than that, we'd both regret it the first time you find giblets of flesh in my hair, I might want to trim it some time but it can wait, or stumble on any other number of odious habits and personality traits.

I'm not a good person by any stretch of the imagination, or in any way suited towards a relationship with you, and luckily for you you're not a good match for me, anyone who was a good match for me would have to be about as fucked in the head as I am. I'm not going to drag a nice girl like you into hell just because I like your company. It'd be vile of me to do so. The closer I am to someone the more likely they are to get emotionally, mentally, or physically scared and hurt.

So yeah, I suck, feel free to do the traditional thing of throwing coffee into my face and running away, I deserve it by this point. Sorry."

Most of these ways of letting her down seem pretty reasonable, but if she starts to try and make a case against what we're proposing, we need to make DAMN sure that she knows that we're perfectly amenable to staying in touch, but that if it ever comes to her trying to contract with an Incubator in order to bypass the "there's no way it could work; we're from two different worlds" spiel, we would never be able to forgive her for it. She has a good thing going, and throwing it all away while simultaneously going back on her promise to us never to involve herself in our line of work is where we would absolutely draw the line.

~~So for what it's worth, despite seeing this quest around all the time, I hadn't really given it a second look. Figured I'd check it out, and read the whole backlog between last thread and this one. Shit's pretty interesting, but it's in a brutal timeslot as far as participating goes.~~

You take a deep breath, before letting it out in words that...you have no prior experience of saying. Words you'd never thought you'd say to anyone, ever. Even the simple concept of it is...well, laughable at best. But you say them, anyway, and you hope that even with your horrible voice and half-murmured enunciation that Iori would hear you and believe you.

You tell her what you've told her, back then, before you left for Siberia - but you manage to do it in a way that you feel manages to carefully nudge the message home more than shove it right into her face. You tell her that you still believe she deserves better - much better - than you could ever live up to be. You're not a good person, nor do you see yourself becoming one in the future - and you're definitely not someone she wants to be with, nor be seen with.

By this time, Iori's face had gone pale, her eyes wide and staring, now glistening with unshed tears, but you forge on. There's no stopping, not when you've committed yourself to this course of action.

You go on to tell her that you wanted to talk to her, today, to make sure she understood. That something happening between the both of you, something more than friendship - is something neither of you want. Friends, nothing more and nothing less. For both your sakes.

You lower your head as you hear the first half-choked sob come from the idol. You wait a few moments, before asking if she understood everything you've told her.

"...Iori?" You look up, and immediately regret doing so.

She's smiling, here, despite the tears trickling down her cheeks.

"I...I understood everything, Chiaki-san," She says in a quivering voice, the volume barely above a whisper. "I...I knew you were going to say that. And...and I tried to accept it as much as I could, when you told me the first time, before you left. I tried my best, Chiaki-san, I...I honestly really did. I accepted that...that Chiaki-san just wanted to be friends, and nothing else."

It's then that she hangs her head, eyes squeezing shut. The tears now flowing freely.

"...B-but it still hurts when you say it, Chiaki-san. It...it still hurts to hear you say it. Even if I know that it's the right thing to do - that all Chiaki-san wants is to just be friends..." Another choked sob, this time muffled by her own gloved hands coming up to cover her mouth. As if trying desperately to smother her cries, although the result of it makes it sound all the worse.

You feel absolutely wretched as you let Iori cry. Right there, in the coffee shop, in the full view of the idols still blatantly scoping the scene, frilled voyeurs with sharp expressions. You...you really wish you could have done this somewhere more private. Somewhere less populated. Where Iori could have cried over how much of an idiot you really are with her dignity preserved, not laid out bare to the bone like this.

What do you do, now?

[]Let her cry it out until she stops. A girl should be allowed to shed tears in peace.
[]Say your goodbyes and leave, right now. You're the last person she needs at the moment.
[]Get out of your chair and take her somewhere private. In your car, maybe. Try to salvage what little of her dignity is left.

Important points to cover:
A - Continue to apologize. It really isn't her, it's us. And the mutant cat we sold our soul to, maybe, but mostly us.

B - We do still want to be friends, and if there's ever a pair of kneecaps that need a magical .50 round through, we'll be ther.

C - Continue to punt all mutant talking cats on sight. If she wants something (us) bad enough, one of them might make an offer, and we should stress how incredibly bad of an idea that is.

I.. I´m not really sure what is the sensible thing to do.

On one hand getting everything out of the system is good for her and fuck dignity, she is a teenage girl for gods sake. On the other hand, you would usually want to cry in peace where no one can bother you and in private.

And you usually do not want to get a hug or sympathy from someone who just dumped you, nor be around that person because that just hurts more.

What I'm a bit worried about is whether QB's contract override is still wholly intact when Mirai sacrificed her life so that her soulgem could be used to house Midori's soul. While Jyubey wasn't able to make Midori witch-out in Siberia, we do not know if the whole soulgem business with Mirai would allow Jyubey a greater degree of control over Midori.

Of course, this all depends on whether the soulgem factors in at all with a contract, or if it's just something that is created as a consequence. It might be important enough to ask QB about.

You stand up and make your way around the table, towards Iori. Yes, alright, you've made her cry, the same way you did when you said goodbye before taking off to Siberia. But she was somewhere safe then - inside a big mansion, surrounded with maids and someone who seemed to genuinely like her despite being a fanboy. It was alright to leave her then, safe to simply remove yourself from the premises and allow her to recover. But here...well, Iori is out in the open. Out in public. A popular idol, popular enough that someone rich enough and sick enough actually orchestrated a plan to rape her and put it out on video. This was something similar - not as sick, but just as damning. Just as damaging.

Before you could take Iori's hand, however, to pull her gently out of her chair and lead her to the car - you see most of the idols that have been watching had risen out of their seats, too. Their eyes narrowed at you as they approach as a group, heads with multicolored hair teased into hairstyles you didn't even know was possible. If you...if you hadn't killed them all personally, you'd have mistaken them for Kilgore's harem. All they needed, really, was knives in their hands and bloody tears dripping down their cheeks, inking lines on grinning faces.

"That's far enough, please," One of them, a tall idol with long golden-blonde hair, styled into a rather unruly, carefree way - speaks up. "Don't come any closer to Iori. You've done enough, thank you. We'll take it from here. Please leave before you do any more damage."

You easily return the collective glare aimed at you - well enough that some of them actually step back, or hide behind their companions - but the rest seems to be determined to stare you down. Despite, you know, you being a Magical Girl and all that. Someone who could, if she wanted, freeze time and end their careers with a point-blank Vindicare makeover.

...Or maybe that was the point, in and of itself? Either way, they've got guts, these idols.

"Matsuda-san." Another voice chimes in, imperious, cold, haughty, but more refined, more elegant. You glance at the direction where it came from, and see Takane Shijou stepping forward from the crowd. One of the idols you met in the gala, where you went undercover as Iori's maid.

"I wish we could have met again in better circumstances. Now that I see your true form, I would have liked to have spend time with you. But as Miki-san said, we'll take it from here. Not just because we wish to protect her from anything else you might do, but also to protect her from anyone else who may see this." Takane gestures towards Iori with a slow, careful hand. "Should the media catch wind of this, it would not be very pretty."

It's then that she narrows her eyes at you, ever so slightly. "Please, Matsuda-san. Couldn't you have chosen a better time to do this? Right here, right now, before the concert?" Her tone seems to be chiding, here.

How do you react?

[]Try to defend yourself. All you wanted was to clear this up before it got too bad.
[]Nod silently, pick up your cap, and leave. You've said all you need to be said.

Ah, sorry. had to get something to eat.

To be honest, I'd prefer to remove those bits from the Ebook and put them in a separate one. The only reason why I don't is because previous times that I've asked the only answer I got was to leave those bits in. Granted, I've only asked twice on /tg/ and I only got one answer of "leave them in" each time.

The only reason why I'm not going to make separate Ebooks is because it takes about an hour to convert the files and upload as is, and I'd rather not needlessly double that. If I do remove those bits and put them in a separate Ebook, then I won't upload the version that has them all in one.

If everyone else wants the Decu and non-Decu bits separated in different Ebooks, I'llv start doing that from now on.

You nod at Takane, acknowledging your mistake. It's...well, she's right. You could have done this some other time, after this whole business with Kirishima Ruri's over and done with. But at the same time...you needed to clear the air. You needed to make sure she understood. Because it would've turned out badly for the both of you. Like...well, like how it's going, now.

...You should have waited. Maybe. But what's done is done. At least Iori's safe now, in hands of people she can trust. You step away as two idols break off from the main group and approach Iori, staring daggers at you the entire way. Short brown hair, with those cute short ponytails. Twins, from the look of them. One of them kneels down beside Iori, taking her hand and murmuring something you can't hear. The other places both hands on Iori's shoulders, leaning in close to whisper as well.

"...Your being silent doesn't really help with our opinion of you, Matsuda-san, but at least we know you understand, now." Takane says, seemingly speaking for the whole group. "If that is all, then please leave. The paparazzi may be coming along any moment, and we really don't want them complicating matters more than they already are, now."

You have no reply as you take your your cap from the table and put it back on, doing so unhurriedly, carefully. You turn back to Iori, who seems to be responding to whatever the twins are telling her, having stopped crying for the time being - and then tell Takane to take care of her. She nods gravely at this.

"I will, Matsuda-san. I promise you this."

You nod at her one last time, before making to stalk back to your car. It's not that far of a walk, but it felt that way, what with the rest of the assembled idols still trying to hate you to death.

Your hand is on the door when Iori's voice suddenly cuts through the thick silence.

"CHIAKI-SAN!"

She doesn't as much say your name as she does shout it, the tinge of desperation in her voice. Not just that, but loneliness. A loneliness that spoke of many nights alone, many days spent trying to work up a smile when you felt empty inside - a loneliness that burned your insides slowly, consuming you inside out, leaving you completely hollow.

"I want to be your friend! Friends... just being friends with Chiaki-san is okay!" You turn to see Iori standing up from her seat, fists clenched, eyes determined even through tears. "B-but...I have to know, please. Did...did Chiaki-san ever feel the same way, even a little bit? Or...is it simply that I never had a chance...?"

How do you react?

Yes, and we talked to someone who looked like Iori, someone who looked like Kumatora drove us here, and someone who looked like Chiaki was in our mirror when we woke up.

If we're going full shadowrun and beyond here, then what if we're still trapped in that illusion 'Midori' put us in and Iori is being raped as we speak?

Guys. For all those of you going the whole "Yes but no because Magical Girl life is pain" route; keep in mind, this might make her think "If I become a Magical Girl, I can be more than just friends with Chiaki-san! Then everything will be fine!"

My vote is to lie, and tell her she never had a chance. Unrequited love is ultimately less painful than knowing you had a chance and blew it. We need to make this unequivocally about US, not about what might or could have been.

You look at Iori, and manage to work up a smile of your own. Even if the last thing you feel like doing now is smiling. Or doing anything at all.

Your smile is a small, sad thing, and you pull down the brim of your hat to hide your eyes just as you murmur your answer. Loud enough for her to hear in the deafening quiet of the coffee shop.

"...I did, Iori. But it wasn't you who never had a chance."

You turn away just as Iori sobs again. You're already getting into the car as you see her friends stepping forward, crowding around her. Takane wrapping her arms around the brown-haired idol and leading her deeper into the coffee shop, away from you. She turns to meet your gaze, giving you an impassive nod before going back to the matter at hand. You shut the door on that scene, blocking your view and theirs with bulletproof tinted glass.

To her credit, Kumatora doesn't say anything for a while, instead quietly starting the car up and driving off. Seemingly getting the hint that you just needed to get away from there as quickly as possible.

The coffee shop disappears behind you in no time, and it's only after a while that Kumatora speaks again.

"There's tissue in the dispenser, sempai," She says, in a voice much more sedate than her usual cheerful one. "The one in the back seat armrest."

Ah. Yeah. That thing that folds up into the back seat itself. You locate it, and tear off a few sheets.

"Where to now, sempai?" Kumatora asks after you've finished wiping your eyes and blowing your nose. Your shield is clicking a bit more audibly now, loud enough for you to hear it clearly, but seemingly unnoticed by the Eversor driving you around. "I can drive around a bit more for you if you just want to cool off for a bit..."

"Sabpyon." Perfect. She was waiting for me in my room when I got back, just sitting on my bed.

"Sabpyon, what did you do with my tablet." The vox whatever in her helmet makes it pretty hard to figure out what Mal's thinking most of the time, but this was...even, I guess. Little more even than usual.

What tablet?

"Don't screw with me, Sabpyon."

I told her I fed it to Lily, because I totally thought about it for like...probably longer than it took to make me the biggest asshole. I couldn't keep the shit-eating grin off my face, though - but hell, that's half of why I wear a helmet.

"Bullshit. If you're going to be like this, I'm going to go find it." She stood and made for the door, like she was gonna squeeze past me. I slammed my arm into the frame at about her chest-height, and when she tried to duck under, blocked even lower than that with my pipe, then shoved her back with it. I pulsed a little rust her way, but it fizzled against her. It was just to make sure she knew I wasn't fuckin' around - I could take off my suit and shove my tongue down her throat and I couldn't do shit against her.

She seemed to get the hint, anyway. Stopped trying to get through, just glared up at me with her hands on her hips.

I gave it to someone, see, to hide for me. So she couldn't mindread it out of me or whatever until she'd actually taken a fucking day off for a change.

"Oh. So Nakajima has it."

Fuck! N...no.

She slipped under my pipe, awkwardly squeezing through the door while I stood there like a retard trying to figure out a better plan. I didn't really come up with one, but I had to do somethin'. So I jumped her and put her in a headlock.

Mal ain't a pussy. She can get out of a headlock, usually with the careful administration of a couple of kidney shots. So I expected that, kinda. But all she did was start laughin'. Which was great. I could work with that.

"This really means a lot to you, huh?" I explained that I'd set things up so that nobody'd explode if she wasn't babysitting for a day. I talked Miss Mami and Dorothy into accompanying the big shots for the day, and between those two there was no way anyone out there was gonna have any kind of fun. Unless they had fun by quietly sipping coffee at a café somewhere and talkin' about…sweaters, or someshit.

C'mon, Mal. Don't be a dick. Be a dude.

"You can let me go, Sabpyon. Just make sure I get it back when we're done." Yessss. This was gonna be awesome. Fuckin', we never got to do this stuff, what with Mal pretty much fucking running the Ninth. I didn't let her go until I'd dragged her all the way back into my room and shut the door behind me.

I didn’t keep a whole lot of shit in my room. Bass guitar that I probably needed to practice more. Bed. High-end PC I mostly used to zone out when I was tired. And the centerpiece, a big-ass motherfucking TV surrounded by piles of…fucking, media, I guess. VHS. DVD. Blu-ray. Even had a coupla laserdiscs but those were mostly, y’know, collector’s items. The TV was my baby, though – had Dorothy help me pick out something made for pretty much a home theater, since she’s into that shit, too. Made it easy to spend days just…sitting and watching movies.

And that’s what Mal liked to do, when we got the time. No fuss. No runnin’ around. No cleanin’ up. She was part of the reason I got this big motherfucker, but I wouldn’t tell her that. She’d pro’lly never believe how much I fucking love this TV again.

We were on our third movie. …’The Last Song’, after ‘The Notebook’ and ‘Nights in Rodanthe’. …Shut up. Shut the fuck up. Okay? Mal was…she liked that kind of shit. We were gonna marathon all of Sparks’s movies. Have a big fuckin’ crygasm.

Her visor was flipped up by the end of ‘The Notebook’, and her eyes were all pink and puffy. …Uh, more pink than usual. At this point her nose was turnin’ red from all the tissues she was burning on it, and…well, I guess mine wasn’t much better. Neither of us said anything, though. Bro code. I wasn’t allowed to be a girl about this shit, and nobody got to pretend Mal was anything but an immovable, sarcastic rock.

…When we finished ‘The Last Song’, something that was nagging at me a little bit finally…I guess I finally had the chance to say it, without fucking up the atmosphere. This wasn’t the first time we’d sat and watched sappy movies together, but we didn’t usually get enough time to think about it. I guess I wanted to know why she liked ‘em so much. I was surprised when she seemed to take the question so seriously, but it’s not like that was weird for her.

“I watch movies like this to remind myself that love makes people do stupid things.” She only thought about it for a second, and there was no hesitation in her voice at all once she spoke. Creaked a little bit because she’d been cryin’, though. Then she offered that smile that…I guess felt like it only belonged to me. I don’t think anyone else ever got to see it. A smile that kinda pushed my worries way to the back of my mind. Mal really had a way of making everything seem okay, even when they were already pretty good.

“What about you?”

…Me? Never really thought about it. It was different from everything, I guess. It was stuff that I never thought’d happen to me when I was in the hospital, and it’s all shit that’s…a hell of a lot fluffier than life now. Not that I’d trade what I got for some cheesy romance novel. …I had a girlfriend that got up early to bake apple pie whenever she was gonna be busy working all day.

I’d give up a lot of shit for that pie.

We were up to ‘A Walk to Remember’ when the door cracked open. We moved in unison – two visors snapped down at once, and in about a second and a half, a couple of tissue boxes and a huge mound of wadded-up tissues were swept off the bed, and instead of some sappy movie neither of us’d ever be caught dead with, Die Hard was on.

…Then it was just Lily, and I think both of us felt a little retarded. I sure did. Lily didn’t care, and she wouldn’t say anything. Looked like she’d been crying, too, and she sniffed loudly as she poked her head in.

“Lieutenant Hartford. What brings you to this very super-important Culexus strategy meeting?” Malal straightened up immediately and assumed a faux-military tone. Man, she really knew how to deal with kids – I could never pull that off with a straight face. I wondered how much she did this kind of thing back at the Ninth. Lily sniffed again and let herself in the room, closing the door quietly behind her and snapping a half-hearted salute.

“Miss Marigold’s leaving, and I don’t know what to do.” She settled in between us on the bed and Mal took her hand and squeezed it. I ruffled her hair a little, myself, and she smiled a little. Malal gave me a look over the top of her head, and over our helmets’ private comm channel, she urged me on.

After a second, I reached over and dug out a half-used box of tissues for her. I wasn’t sure what to say right away, but under Mal’s visor, I could almost see that smile.

…Sometimes love makes people do…weird things. I said it, but it sounded half-assed coming out of my mouth, so I was pretty quick to try and follow it up. The Warmaster…Miss Marigold found someone really special to her. Special enough to jump ship.

“But I’m not special enough for her to stay…?”

Shit. Damn it Mal why are you just sitting there. Her voice crackled through the comm channel again.

-Step it up, senpai.-

So I did. I told Lily exactly what I thought about the whole thing. Warmaster Marigold was batshit crazy and she was probably leaving so she and the Spiritual Liege of the Seventh could bloodfuck every goddamn day without anyone being able to stop them. …Lily stared up at me with the eyes of a kid that didn’t know what the hell she was just told. Which was…probably pretty accurate. It seemed to dawn on her after a couple of seconds, though, and she nodded.

“The Spiritual Liege is strong, so Miss Marigold wants to eat her.” Mal snorted in her mask, and I had to fight back a laugh, too.

Yeah, Shortcakes. That’s exactly right. Kid didn’t seem all that happy about it, but at least she wasn’t crying, now.

With the grace and timing of someone used to cleaning up other people’s shit every day of her life, Mal whipped out a jawbreaker a minute later, after Lily’d calmed down some. Made a cute comment about it being bonus pay, since she was being such a good soldier about all this, then tossed it into the air a bit. A second later, it was in Lily’s mouth, wrapper and all, and after an earsplitting crunch, she spit out the wrapper, with just a little bit of candy-colored saliva in it.

Man, Lily sucks at jawbreakers.

A sufficiently large portion of the player base is sick of this bullshit every time she shows up so we just wanted to get it over and done with

Taking an option because you don't care about the long-term consequences just so you can get the short-term benefit is exactly what led to Midori getting killed.
Both choices were to deal with the current situation in the most expedient manner, regardless of effectiveness or how it might turn out.

And letting Iori down before tomorrow's meeting with Ruri is perfectly fine. But my argument is that it should have been done by getting Iori somewhere private, and not done in front of all her friends and some rivals, in a public area.
THAT shows a lack of concern for the long-term.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 05/29/13(Wed)07:24 No.25109115

You are a Magical Girl, and you've just wrapped up a meeting with one of your former clients.

You don't want to recount that particular event, no. It's not something worth dwelling on. You're forgetting it already. Yes. Nothing more than a meeting. One that ended as well as you could have hoped.

Now you're just...you desperately need a drink. Maybe more. Something, anything to take the edge off.

...For fuck's sake, it's not like you haven't done anything worse than ruin an idol's day. You've done worse things, things you're thankful you only half-remember because you don't really feel doing a really long and exhaustive list. The sort of things that made Valnikov Kharn like you, really like you, to the point that she took you around with her wherever she went. Things that made you deserve the name that sounds like something out of a death metal band. Things that had made Kyoko cheer in undisguised admiration, and Sayaka frown in chilly disgust.

Things that had made Tomoe Mami look at you in sad, wistful disappointment.

Compared to those, this...this doesn't really measure up. Not by a long shot.

And yet, it feels like it's the worst thing you've ever done.

...You really need that drink.

It's a good thing, then, that Kumatora's all but read your mind even before you told her to - the Eversor making a beeline to your old haunt. The nameless bar owned and staffed by a man who never seemed to smile at anything. Scowling was all he did, besides making drinks and taking money for said drinks.

He did give you the barest hint of a nod when you stepped through the doors, Kumatora following you close behind. He even gestured at the cap on your head, reaching up with a large, calloused hand and pointing with a calloused index finger at his massive afro.

...Maybe he wants you to take it off. You're indoors, after all. You do so as soon as you get to the bar, planting your ass on one of the creaky, well-worn stools and setting the headgear on the counter. Your Eversor companion takes her seat with some difficulty beside you - almost falling off after a few tries, but managing it after a while.

"Sorry about that, sempai," Kumatora murmurs sheepishly, cheeks pinking in embarrasment. "It's, er, kind of my first time."

Of course it is. You're pretty sure she's underage, too.

"Y-yeah." The black-haired girl nods. "Is...I'm not going to get kicked out of here for it, right, sempai?"

Nah. Not really. Charles doesn't give a fuck. Never did. The surly bartender grunts at the mention of his name, and you order your usual - double whiskey, leave the bottle. He serves you this with his usual professional speed. He then nods towards Kumatora, who all but pales at the sudden attention.

You tell her, after a few moments of awkward silence, that he's asking about her order. What she wants to drink. ...Yes, it'll be your treat.

"Uh. Um. Straw...strawberry milk?" Kumatora squeaks, reduced to a trembling schoolgirl underneath Charles' glare. "If...if it's on the menu--"

There's a thunderous report of a solid glass tumbler being slammed right onto the wooden counter, right in front of your young companion and making her very nearly fall off her stool. Pink, frothy milk fills it from a perspiring, misting carton, wielded by a calloused hand that could easily crush your skull.

"...They serve strawberry milk here, sempai?" Kumatora clambers back onto her stool, staring warily at Charles' retreating back, as the bartender went to attend to another customer at the far end of the counter. Looks like one of them courier sorts, getting a drink in before another delivery, or something.

He even serves ice cream shakes too, if you ask nicely.

"That's...uh..." The Eversor shakes her head, twintails wagging. "...Um. Well. Cheers, sempai!" she holds out her glass to yours. "Congrats on being Warmaster! If...even if it looks kind of a big hassle!"

You blink at this, before returning her enthusiastic grin with a small smile of your own. Your own glass, half-filled with whiskey, clinking against hers.

Kumatora takes a huge gulp from her glass of strawberry milk, and you knock back yours at the same time. Relishing the nostalgic burn against your throat, the smoky sting against your tongue, and the heat that settles warmly in your chest and stomach as the whiskey claws its way down your throat. You exhale warmly at this, closing your eyes momentarily to savor it - and you open your eyes to see Kumatora gazing deep into her own glass, completely unaware of her strawberry milk mustache.

"...That was something, though, sempai. Earlier, I mean." Kumatora says suddenly, just as you pour yourself more whiskey. "I was this close to jumping out and going into crowd control mode! Surrounding the Warmaster like that...Miss Sayaka'd started cutting off heads if she saw what they tried to pull earlier!"

You very nearly snort whiskey out of your nose as the image of Sayaka killing someone just to defend you flashes in your mind. It's...almost hilarious in its impossibility. You recover quickly enough, and you remind the Eversor that they were still civilians. Officio rules - no civilians as much as possible, unless they turn out to be combatants or Magical Girls-in-hiding. Besides, they were just idols. Even Misaka could have taken care of them.

"That's not the point, sempai!" Kumatora takes another swig from her glass, getting a bigger milk mustache as a result. "You're Warmaster now! You've got the hat! The nerve of them, sempai, trying to strongarm you into leaving! It's not like it's sempai's fault you don't like that girl anyway!"

You find yourself smiling at this. You notice, over Kumatora's shoulder, that someone seems to have left a package on one of the stools. Somewhat of a sizeable box, large enough to contain a bowling ball or something spherical, wrapped completely in masking tape.

...Courier must have left it for Charles. Strange way to deliver something, you decide. You call the bartender's attention to it, and he seems to blink in surprise before walking towards the package itself.

Anyway, you turn back to the Eversor. How do you respond?

[]You heard everything, huh?
[]Right. Not my fault.

thought an illusionist ex-pacifist could pull a 300 and Chiaki her way through a horde of monsters and an evil Ribbon Homura, so Mirai had to be expended to save Midori.

"Well, um, it was hard not to overhear, sempai, the car was parked fairly close to the shop and all," Kumatora replies. "B-but I wasn't eavesdropping intentionally, sempai! I wasn't trying to pry, but when I saw the conversation getting tense and the other girls standing up and walking towards you, I had to make sure nothing bad was going to happen!"

You knock back the double you've poured for yourself, before smiling at Kumatora as you tip the bottle of Kong for another. Well, you appreciate the Eversor's concern for your safety - and she didn't need to apologize for overhearing, anyway - but if it's not too much, you'd like for her to keep everything she heard to herself. Nothing to be said about this to anyone - not to her friends, not to Sayaka, and certainly not to Mami or Kyuubey. Or Kyoko, you add, who isn't so much as a gossip as she is a voluntary wellspring of information, telling everyone everything they asked with an open face and a cheerful grin.

"Right, sempai. You can count on me, my lips are sealed!" Kumatora salutes you, and you can't help but find her enthusiasm infectious.

Of course, you dampen it some by pointing out that besides her lips being sealed, they're also sporting the impressive strawberry milk mustache. This she covers with a hand, going red in embarrassment before laughing about it a moment later, and then wiping it off with the sleeve of her jacket.

You tell her to finish her drink - you're not looking to get plastered here, and the drink you poured should be your last - when Charles suddenly comes forward and places the box he'd received on the counter in front of you.

...The box has your name on it. Murderface. Written on the strip of masking tape securing the thing shut.

It seems it's for you. Which is...weird, considering that you're not expecting anything. You certainly don't list Charles' bar as your mailing address, that gets handled by Logistics back at Headquarters.

The shield clamped on your right arm clicking faster, louder. More insistently.

Yet, only audible to you, from how Charles and Kumatora seem to be sticking around rather than booking it. >>25109600 >>25109601 >>25109604 >>25109608

You grab the rim of your Shield and push it an entire ninety degrees. The clicking gears grinding, screeching in protest, before finally crashing together in a sharp report of metal locking against metal. The 'eyes' of the shield sliding open, revealing two blood-red crimson gems, both glowing a hellish light in unison as time stops its inexorable passage for you.

It's strange, this ability of yours. As far back as you can remember, you never really thought much about it - until it slowly dawned on you, by Kyuubey's own musings and Kharn's overwillingness to show you off to other Officios, that what you had was something unique. Most girls received magical weaponry upon contracting, a tool imbued with the magic of their wish. Some of them received abilities usually thought of as something fantastical or impossible - such as the ability to regenerate grievous injury in mere seconds, or be able to pull a sword from a standard-issue cake with standard-issue icing (candles optional). But whatever you wished for, it seems, got you something unique. Something that no other Incubator could create, no matter what wish they granted.

...Of course, your being able to bend time over a barrel and have your way with it isn't exactly all peaches and cream. Not after Pinky started showing up whenever you used it. You remember that you used to have no trouble with it at all. In fact, you remember leaving it on for days at a time, using it to disappear and hide from everyone when things got a bit too...annoying. A bit too uncomfortable. Sure, one or few times Kyoko had to rush you to headquarters because of how dark your soul gem got after these excursions, but they never seemed to hurt besides that.

But now...well. You try not to use it too much.

Simply because you don't really feel like facing down a giggly eldritchian goddess with a smile too full of teeth and hair the color of pink cotton candy every single time you do.

The world flickers crimson as soon as your shield locks into position, before its colors bleed away, leaving everything cast in dull shades of gray, black and white. To your side, Kumatora, frozen in stasis, continues to look down at the box in front of you. Charles, though, seems to have gone - and in his place is Pinky. Hugging the box to her chest, resting her chin on its surface. A cheeky grin curling her lips, baring rows of sharp, pointy teeth.

"Oh, hello, Homura-chan! So glad you can join my little game of What's In The Box!" She chirps, all sunshine and daisies and botched autopsies. "But before we begin, can you tell the rest of the viewers how it feels to stomp someone's feelings into the ground? You seem to be the resident expert in that particular field, if I'm any judge!"

It's then that her voice turns into a cruel mimicry of the brown-haired idol you left in tears back in that coffee shop.

"Friends!...It's okay to be friends with Chiaki-san! Look at me, I'm an idol and I'm being moe, boo hoo hoo!" It's then that she narrows her sunless eyes at you. "I fucking told you to forget about that slut, Homura-san! WHY AREN'T YOU LISTENING TO ME?!"

This however goes down the drain should this box contain anyone`s bodyparts. Because it would really make me hate you."

"Well, I don't like you talking to her!" Pinky snarls at you, sharpened teeth snapping together, as if biting off every word she spits out. "No more talking to idols, especially her!" It's then that she pouts, here. "Uuu...if I'd only known that you'd have an idol fetish just by one making eyes at you after you saved her, I wouldn't have even lifted a finger to help you out of Midorin's illusion! Stupid Madoka-chan! STUPID HOMURA-CHAN!"

Yes. she should learn how to stop those annoying impulses of being a decent person. It gets in the way of what you're obsessively gunning for. You're working on that yourself, really. It must be really tough for someone batshit insane like her to struggle with morals. You can tell - it's not helping her complexion much.

"What?" Pinky blinks at this, before narrowing her eyes. "What...what did you say? Are you...are you making fun of ME, Homura-chan?"

You ignore the disturbing way that the world around you suddenly seems to darken the slightest bit, a dull roar rumbling in your ears as the ground under your feet starts to shiver. You're just puzzled, after all - what's gotten her upset THIS time? It's not like her to be jealous since you shot Iori down. That's what she wanted, isn't it? And to think you were going to introduce her to some of your new friends tonight, what with her being lonely and all. It all goes down the drain, however, if what's inside the box is the one thing that it shouldn't be.

Because that would be bad. And you wouldn't be able to be friends anymore.

"But that's not--" Pinky starts, frowning still, yet her pure-black eyes flickering in uncertainty for a split second. "It's not MY box, Homura-chan! I didn't put it together for you!"

Really. Can she still say that, if it turns out that this was sent by someone using a Golden Weapon? She'd still be responsible for that.

"...Hah! That's impossible!" Pinky has the gall to scoff here, waving a clawed hand as if to brush your accusation away. "Everyone I've chosen isn't as crass as this, Homura-chan! Kilgore, maybe, but not everyone else!..." It's then that she blinks again, tilting her head to the side and scratching at a cheek with an index finger.

"Well, er, Kirika-chan was sort of nuts to begin with--but ah, you already took care of the both of them, anyway! The rest are...alright, alright, maybe it's possible for one or two of them, but it's really not their style to-"

...You're not too sure how to feel about that. But whatever. You're here to open the goddamn box and see what's inside.

"Eh, are you really sure, Homura-chan?" It's here that Pinky's smile turns sly. "You should just quit while you're ahead, you know~"

Shaking your head at the pun - you expected more from her, really - it's then that you plant one heeled foot onto a nearby stool, tugging the combat knife strapped to your ankle free of its sheath. You take the box from Pinky's grasp - the crazed goddess with the bleeding eyes sulking still, mouth upturned in a pouty frown - and begin to carefully slice open the tape securing the top shut. There's a lot of it, but your knife's sharp enough to--

The smell is faint, but you pick up on it immediately, setting off warning alarms in your head. You saw through the tape faster, quicker, more urgently - and the scent gets stronger the more you unseal the damn thing. It's blood, that much is certain. Tangy copper, with a faint edge of rust. Old blood, spiced with the subtle sweetness of fresh decay.

You finally manage to cut away the rest of the tape, and you stab the combat knife into the counter. The bladed weapon turning gray the moment you let go of it, both your hands now tearing the lid free.

We're still in stopped time. We can check the face and catch up with the courier if we wanted to.

Unfreezing time now is the wrong choice. Check, make sure it isn't her, then chase down the courier.

Pinky can come along if she wants to.

But do not under any circumstance unfreeze time until we have checked the identity.

I'm thinking it's along the lines of a warning.

Hell, for all we know, it could be perverting her desire to see Chiaki grow as a person. Like how Zoom does all these horrible things to the Flash and his family out of a perverse desire to make him a better hero.

If we unfreeze and call up, but find out Mami's not there we'll have wasted time tracking the courier. This will deprive us of a lead.

You spend a few moments in silence as you stare down at the gruesome package, feeling...an odd sense of calm, of peace washing over you. Maybe it's because of your blood suddenly running cold at the sight - of the thought - that someone had finally gotten to you in a way no one has ever before, taking what you held the most dear and then simply tearing it right in front of your face. Maybe it's the freeing tranquility of finally knowing that everything you love will no doubt perish because of the sins you committed and continue to bear. Or maybe it's the cold sense of certainty that you've finally been given a reason to raze this city to the ground, and hunt down every Magical Girl party to this murder.

The thing is, you're not freaking out. Not right now. Not when there's still stuff to do.

The first of which being...well, to verify the identity of whoever it was in the box. You have an idea who, but...either this is a horrible and stupid joke that someone will die for, or Pinky's prediction had come true before you could do anything about it, and Mitakihara will burn for it.

Reaching down - taking the severed head with both hands, by the cheeks, noting just how warm the flesh is, still - you turn the grisly present and see something that allows you to take another breath. And another.

Before you grit your teeth and force the bile back in your throat, feeling a wave of vomit threaten to surge up and deposit itself all over the front of your costume.

It's not Mami. The face is...gruesomely vandalized, but it's not Mami. You're sure of that.

The eyes are nothing more than gory, empty sockets, the eyeballs gouged out, trails of bloody tears inked down its cheeks. The lower jaw has been torn away, leaving the tongue flapping loose, with half of the appendage chopped off. On the forehead, carved by what looks to be a box cutter, is a five-word phrase that you've become quite intimately familiar with.

Someone had carved THE FLESH OF FALLEN ANGELS on the severed head's face. The jagged writing giving it away that the girl was still struggling when the deed was done. Not very subtle, but then again, well. They went to the trouble to make their victim look like Tomoe Mami. That's as unsubtle as it can get.

Examining the gruesome souvenir even further, it's here that you spot more differences, more cllues that it's not her. The hair is obviously dyed blonde, with roots of a darker color showing there. The brooch is fake plastic. The cheeks have a faint smattering of freckles on them. But most telling of all is how there isn't a soul gem in the box at all. If this was indeed Mami, they'd have shipped her soul gem - or what was left of it - along with the head. That meant that they'd killed her outright, with no hope of her being ever brought back. Not doing so meant that this was either a fake, or a bluff. Her Soul Gem still being intact would still give you hope, and that would be enough to fuel you into hunting her kidnappers down.

"See? It's not them. They don't work like that." Pinky frowns, resting her elbows on the bar, propping her chin up with her hands. "Honestly, though, I'm not sure why you like her so much. You're not even sure if Mami-san likes you back! Sure, she's got those great pancakes, but do you think she cooks them for you and no one else?"

You place the head back into the box, letting it drop there with a soft, greasy thump. You wipe your bloodied hands on your skirt, staining the once-pristine purple cloth crimson.

What do you do now?

In cases like the latter, it was more about random people dying in the crossfire, or to fufill some dark agenda that didn't have as much to do with us. In this case, it's more of a thing to think about because someone literally murdered a girl solely to play a sick joke on us, so this feels less detached from us.

“Maybe you should leave this to me, Nakajima-san.”

“Nahhh, I’ve got this. You can take the rest of the day off, Miss Culexus.”

This was supposed to be my last day in the Silent Room, but it’d turned into…probably the like, third-most-horrifying thing I’d ever experienced. Shit, I’d put up with just living here for the rest of my life if it meant not having Nakajima and Queen Shit Culexus hovering over me for the better part of a day. It reminded me of the hospital even more than the Room already did, and…man.

“You’re undercompensating. I know you think her ability’s cool or something, but the whole point of this is to make sure she can function normally outside the room.” It was pretty hard to tell if Mal was getting pissed off because of her voice thinger, but I’d probably guess yeah. Nakajima had that effect on people, it seemed like.

“No, you’re overtuning it. Look, maybe in Japan it’s fine to be wishy-washy about stuff like this, but here? Here I get shot at walking to work in the morning. We don’t half-ass things here.” Nakajima was definitely getting pissed. Her big, dumb smile was getting wide, and real forced. It looked like her face was gonna crack any second now.

“I don’t think it counts if you get shot at for being a pest.” They’d pretty much been at this since I got up this morning. See, the Ninth heard about our problem. Our, uh, me problem, with not being able to live outside a Silent Room without a lot of fucking collateral damage, and they sent Mal over to assess the situation a couple months ago.

“Hey, this is a vox unit, right? Nnnneat. Can I take it out?” Mal just sighed. She’d been sent here this time with a Culexus suit for me from the Ninth. Some crazy antimagic bullshit. She told me it would let me focus my…thing. My rust thing. It meant sitting around all goddamn day while they calibrated the suit around me, though. It was like being awake during surgery. Not a new feeling? But it was still a pretty shitty one, especially when we’d step out and test shit out outside the room. Every time it’d been ‘completely numb’ or ‘prickly all over and starting to smell blood pretty fucking fast’. Depending on, I guess, whether it was overtuned or they were undercompensating or whatever.

“It’s not. I modified this suit a little, since Sabpyon’s not a Culexus. Doesn’t need to take the same precautions.” Aw. I wanted a sweet robot voice. “Hey, Sabpyon. Are you still with us? Think we’re ready for another test.”

The look of relief on Nakajima’s face was pretty clear when we got out of the Silent Room. I made a note to treat her to Freckle Bitch’s or something, because man, nobody else would spend more than five fucking minutes in there. She out and out clapped when I told ‘em how I was doing – no prickles, no pain, no bleeding into my suit. I could still feel everything, though it was still kinda numb.

“Good. Glad we found a middle-ground. We aren’t quite done yet, though.” I followed her gaze to the pile of shit we’d been using to test. A couple of plywood boards, an old, shitty one and a newer one, freshly cut. A cutout from a chain-link fence. A stop sign I was pretty sure was supposed to be on a street a couple blocks from here, with a hunk of concrete still stuck on the bottom. …Slumped over on the floor was a girl’s body, too. Hospital gown. Bag over her head. I was pretty sure she was breathing, but the other two didn’t seem to have a problem with it. I was…

I was kinda hoping I wouldn’t have to test on her. I already knew what rust did to a dude. And it was never pretty.

Mal tossed me the shitty board first, and I caught it. …Nothing. Seemed like I could at least hold stuff normally.

Uh…how do I do the thing with the suit on…Well, not like this was the first time I’d tried focusing on something… After a second or so, it started to turn black as it got softer in my hand. I could still do it, it just…took a little trying. Which I was kinda grateful for. ...Destroying shit was never supposed to be so easy. I asked Mal if that was good enough, but she shook her head and told me to keep going. Only took a minute, probably not even that, before the board was pretty much just soft, black, and crumbly in a sorta heap on the floor.

She didn’t waste any time in throwing me the next board. It took a couple of seconds more, but not much. Rust pretty much doesn’t give a shit. Rot, I guess. Entropy maybe? Dunno what entropy is exactly but it got thrown around a fucking lot whenever I talked to the boss.

The fence went down even easier. Metal was kind of a specialty, I guess. Even now I barely had to think to fuck the thing up, and just touching the stop sign and kinda…pushing that feeling toward it made the whole thing dissolve away in almost no time, with the concrete under it cracking and crumbling into dust.

That…that was good, right? …Mal just shook her head, and Nakajima covered her mouth with one of her sleeves, glancing away. It didn’t seem like either of them was going to drag the other one over to me or anything, so I… made my way over to her. My legs felt like lead. Man, this was probably just some girl. A POW, or somebody Nakajima grabbed off the street. I didn’t know her all that well, but I heard she did some real twisted shit.

I crouched down next to the...yeah. She was breathing. The unconscious girl and just stared for a second. I reached down to touch her, and…

“How it do, bitches?” A deep voice boomed from behind me, and I just about pissed myself. Fell back on my ass and everything, and turned to glare at the source. …Well, it was the boss, I knew that on some level, but shit. He had a way of sneaking up on you, even now that he’d, uh…gotten some kinda little…cart thing? Looked like one of those robot vacuum deals, but painted gold and studded with enough diamonds to pay all three of us for a year. And I knew Mal’s salary, at least, had to be pretty fucking high. It was one of those little things about Eightball that made him look like a huge asshole, not that I’d say it to his face. He’d been pretty cool with me, and he bailed my ass out hard in the first place, so…

“Things should be in order after oooone more test, boss. Then you can get your torture room back! So how’s your ride treatin’ you?” Kinda seemed like she was stalling. Or trying to distract him, maybe.

“Ballin’, baby, we ballin’. So why the fuck y’all got some bitch sittin’ out here? You gon’ kill her? I tole you ‘bout that shit, Nakajima. You go crazy again-“

“Relaaax. That’s one of mine. She barely even counts as a person right now.” I looked to Mal while the other two talked, but…well, she was kinda unreadable. Looked a little impatient, I guess. …Guess after a while, killing somebody just loses meaning for magical girls, huh. Not like I hadn’t, but…

“C’mon, Sab. Do your thing. We’d have to go and show the bossman later anyway, so just think of this as good timing.” …Yeah, it probably was, I guess.

I took a deep breath and grabbed onto the girl’s wrist. Even though she talked big, Nakajima squeezed her eyes shut and looked away as the girl’s skin started to puff up, then turn a kind of sick green, spreading all the way up her arm and all over her body. …It was turning black just a second later, and I could feel her wrist turning into mush under me.

She stirred a little. Whimpered. Started to shake as her body fucking liquefied in my hand. She was alive for…way too long. Felt it for way too long. She must have been a magical girl... …It was never pretty. Never.

“Good work, bitches. Very good work. Tell my bro we’ll work out the gritty shit later, Malal-baby.” He gave a nod to Malal before fixing his ridiculous-ass sunglasses on me instead. “Yo’ shit’s already in ya new room. Welcome back to th’rest of the fuckin’ world, Blackburn. You gon’ be workin’ in a special Eversor squad with Nakajima, so you bess get along. Eightball gon’ send a bitch check on you later, make sure you settlin’ in.”

He rode off like nothing had happened. Like he usually did, I guess. Called Nakajima after him as an afterthought a couple of seconds later, something about hydraulics, and she gave me really vague, crappy directions to my new room and left me and Mal to find for ourselves.

And clean up a squishy pile of dead girl.

"So what d'you think?" Mona asked, a wide grin plastered on her face as she held one hand on the steering wheel. "Nice, right?"

"Oh yeah," her partner answered. "Yeah, its' a pretty good car."

Megan Laurie and Mona Bernard sat side-by-side in the latter's brand new Porsche 911 Turbo. The car was sleek, fast and painted a stylish silver and Mona was loving every inch of it. The pair sped down the express-way, bickering the whole way as they returned from errands out of town.

"'Pretty good'?" Mona questioned, glowering at her partner.

"Yeah, pretty good," Meg answered, nodding her head. "I like it."

"Come on, Meg," the taller of the two Eversors groaned. "A ham sandwich is 'pretty good'. This is like... Like the BLT of cars."

"Alright, alright, don't get your panties in a twist," the other eversor yielded. "It's nice, but it's not PERFECT."

"Oh, here we go."

"Coulda gotten it in red. Or gold. That would be cool. Silver's kinda plain... And, and I don't mean to alarm you, but," Meg waved her hand at the centre console, "no cupholders. You got this square thing that's just the wrong size for anything, and that's it."

"REALLY?!" Mona roared. "That's what your gonna nitpick? "

"Just sayin'," the shorter girl shrugged, leaning back in her seat. "You'd think a hundred and fifty thousand dollars might be able to buy a couple of plastic rings. So yeah. Sexy car," Meg made a much stronger and more firm gesture at the console, "no cupholders."

"I hate you so much," Mona mumbled.

The pair had been together practically since they were contracted. Inseparable to the last, the dynamic duo of Meg and Mona had never actually been assigned missions alone; it seemed as thought Fubey himself didn't want to break the set.

The straight man of the pair, Mona Bernard, was a good head and a half taller than her partner. Her figure was proud and imposing, her dark chestnut hair always tied back tightly with a black satin ribbon. Even her costume seemed to fit the image - a feminine variation on men's white tie dress, the dress coat having distinctive long, sweeping tails that curled up at the ends. With her intricate swept-hilt rapier and buckler, she would make for an imposing opponent... had it not been for her partner's constant presence.

Whereas her partner embodied elegance and majesty, Meg Laurie leaned more toward the brute force end of the spectrum. She was short and curvy with a mess of short, jet black hair that often fell in front of her eyes. Her weapon of choice was an enormous battle axe, stuck somewhere between a bardiche and a horseman’s axe. Riding her golden motorcycle, Gold-Mane, the sight of the axe wielding magical girl was a thing to behold.

"Hey Mona," the shorter of the two started, "think we'll ever make Valkyrie squad?"

"No," Mona answered flatly.

Meg's mouth hung open in disappointment. "Whaaat? Why not?"

"I'll give you one good reason," the taller Eversor answered, turning the car into their exit. "You remember Eversor karaoke night?"

"My best idea yet!" the smaller girl beamed.

"Which is saying something," Mona said, utterly dead-pan, "considering three people died."

"They got better!"

"That doesn't excuse it!"

"Everyone had fun and complimented it and said they'd love to do it again," Meg pouted.

The taller girl groaned, "Yeah, because it was a bloodbath. Most Eversors love bloodbaths."

"I don't!"

"Neither do I, that's why I said most, dingus."

The car sped through the bustling streets of Toronto, the pair of Eversors bickering all the way. It didn't take long before they rolled into a space in the Seventeenth's personal parking garage. Mona turned to her partner as she pulled the car into 'park' and glared.

"If you slide over the hood one more time, your ass is mine."

Meg made an exaggerated cringe. "You're supposed to say 'no homo' after something like that."

The taller girl simply shook her head as she popped her door open and circled around to the front of the car. From the trunk she pulled a small, unmarked package wrapped in brown parchment paper. Meg sauntered up shortly after, peering at the parcel.

"What do you think it is?" She asked, eyes shining with curiosity.

Mona cocked an eyebrow. "What? You didn't hear?"

The shorter of the two remained silent and shook her head, still mesmerized by the package.

"The girls in Hamilton had a couple casualties," Mona answered, rattling the box gently. "I guess the Foob decided to bring their gems back to home base instead of going out for them."

"Maaan," Meg groaned, "out of twenty, we end up with the fat and lazy one."

“Good thing if you ask me,” the other girl replied. “I've heard stories about the others. I'd take fat and lazy over being seen as livestock any day of the week.”

Together, the two made way for the parking garage's elevator. The smaller Eversor took the package while the other punched in the code to reach the Seventeenth's HQ: Two, nine, six, eighteen, fifteen, nineteen, twenty. The doors slid shut as the lift began its descent - nine floors down by their count - and eventually ended in the rainbow hall.

"Eversors Mona Bernard and Megan Laurie," announced Mona as she stepped to the centre of the room, her partner nervously following suit. "Delivering a special package for Mister Fubey. Clearance level red."

After a few moments the elevator to their left and closest to the entrance hissed open.

"Cause no trouble," Holly announced, putting on a faux-Russian accent.

The two Eversors stepped into the lift and pressed the first of three red buttons along the top row. The elevator lurched and began moving, seemingly in every direction at once. One minute and thirty-nine seconds later, the doors opened to reveal a short, barren white hallway with a single polished wooden door on the opposite end marked with a large, golden seventeen. The pair couldn't help but notice that the carpeted floor of the hallway was extraordinarily clean - almost as if it were vacuumed daily.

The corpulent incubator sat primly atop his desk, staring down the pair as they entered.

"Timely and efficient. Excellent work, the both of you." The incubator carefully lifted the package with his moustache just as the black-haired Eversor set it down beside him. "I shall set to work on these shortly."

"Any time, boss," Mona replied.

The chubby incubator's office was sparsely decorated; the only furnishings of note were his wooden desk, the numerous monitors lining the far wall, several chairs against the left wall, and what appeared to be an incubator-sized spiral staircase leading from the ground to the top of the desk. Fubey set the package back down on his desk and turned back to the two Eversors.

"In recognition of your recent efforts, I would like to offer the both of you a far more important assignment." He gestured at the screens behind him with his moustache-paw as images and text appeared. Mona shifted uncomfortably as she looked up at the pictures. "Mister Marcus Finn, a close friend of one of our chief benefactors, was found murdered yesterday. Said benefactor requests that we look into the death of Mister Finn privately on his behalf. I trust you will accept?"

The pair looked at each other nervously for a few moments, then nodded in unison.

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 6 archivalfag 05/29/13(Wed)12:11 No.25112011

"Excellent." The incubator clasped his moustache-paws together, then gestured to one monitor in particular, which displayed a short portfolio on Finn. "It seems Mister Finn's heart was pierced, leaving a hole approximately one inch in diameter through his chest. We suspect that the killing is related to organized crime, but we can not be entirely certain." The monitor flashed, then showed a file on a second man. "This is Mister Vincent Rossi, a trusted associate of Finn. Our benefactor suspects that Mister Rossi would have information regarding the murder. You are permitted to use whatever methods you wish to retrieve this information."

"So it's like a murder mystery?" Meg asked, her eyes glistening with excitement.

Fubey blinked. "Something of the sort, I suppose. Though, I would appreciate you taking this a bit more seriously." The incubator nodded before settling down on his desk, his moustache limply flowing over the edge. "Miss Corbin will forward everything you need shortly. You are dismissed, but if possible I would like to speak with Miss Bernard in private."

Mona gave the incubator a stern nod before turning to her partner. "I'll only be a bit. Just, uh, go wait by the car or something."

"Ah, o-okay," Meg answered hesitantly. "I'll, um, just leave you two alone then."

The tall Eversor and the incubator kept their eyes on the shorter girl until they finally heard the click of the door shutting. The monitors slowly each went black as a cascading darkness filled the room. After a moment of total blackness, several automatic pot lights went on around the edge of the ceiling. It was only then that the incubator began speaking again.

"I would like to begin by offering my condolences to your father," Fubey began. "It is always trying to lose a close friend."

Mona nodded quietly. "I only met Uncle Marcus once or twice, but he seemed like an okay guy. I'll pass on the message."

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 6 archivalfag 05/29/13(Wed)12:11 No.25112018

She'd had an inkling of who the 'chief benefactor' had been and it seemed that the enormous incubator felt little subtlety was needed in the matter. It was no secret amongst the Officio's girls that the Bernard family was one of the largest investors in the organization and Mona found precious few people willing to overlook that fact. Meg Laurie was one of them. She never prodded too hard or questioned Mona's status as 'the rich girl'. It was one of the very, very few things she knew to keep quiet about.

"Now, as for the other reason I kept you," Fubey paused for a moment, seemingly to collect his thoughts. "It is just about promotion season, as you are no doubt aware. In the next few weeks, there will be an opening in our most prestigious squad. You have time and again proven yourself an able combatant, which is why I would like to extend the opportunity to you personally."

"You're," the Eversor gulped, trying to process what she was hearing, "you're asking if I want to become a Valkyrie?"

"Of course, this would entail ending your partnership with Miss Laurie." The incubator tilted his head in a sort of semi-shrug. "I understand that you would probably like time to think about the offer. You may have two weeks, after which I will pass it on to another."

"I- I understand, sir," Mona stuttered, nodding. "I'll, uh, I'll think about it. And thanks."

Fubey gestured toward the door with his head. "I appreciate your consideration, Miss Bernard. You are dismissed."

The two Eversors sat in Mona's car, parked across the street from a dingy pub with the name "Harrison's" emblazoned on a bold, sweeping sign out front. The taller of the two watched silently, her gaze centred on the stairway leading down to the entrance. The other girl sat to her left, noisily turning the pages of one of her favourite comics.

"Y'know," Meg started, "I gotta say. Stake-outs are a lot more boring than I imagined."

Mona nodded and grunted in agreement, not entirely paying attention.

"We just kind of sit here and wait," the shorter magical girl continued. "In the movies they just skip to the end. Or show some playful banter. We kinda blew our load early on the banter thing, huh?"

"Mm," Mona mm'd.

"Lucky for us, though, eh?" Meg said, flipping a page. "Guy frequents one of our bars. Whoda thunk?"

"Just be quiet and read your comics please," the other girl groaned. "The hell is that anyway?"

"Miracle Melanie and Murder Marjorie," Meg answered, turning another page. "Rumour is that it's written by a magical girl. Not all that realistic, though. It's like, EVERYONE is a lesbian."

"Well... to be fair..."

"And, like, how does Melanie put up with Marjorie?" The shorter girl continued as she read. "She's a huge cunt and practically rapes her every chapter!"

"Then why are you reading it if you don't like it?" Mona asked, furrowing her brow.

"Oh no, no. I like it," Meg replied. "It's just so crazy. It's not meant to be taken seriously, duh. It's like a parody of being a magical girl. People like this couldn't REALLY exist. The original Japanese version is way bett-"

"Whatever, shut up," the other Eversor hushed, tapping her shoulder. "I think we've got our guy."

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 6 archivalfag 05/29/13(Wed)12:13 No.25112038

Mona pointed to a man just leaving the pub, ascending the staircase. The pair of magical girls rushed to exit the car, then took up a brisk pace as they began tailing him. After a block, they began to notice less and less cars passing by. Mona gave her partner a nod and the pair halted a mere meter from the man.

"Mister Rossi, was it?" The taller Eversor called out.

As soon as the girl had called, the man spun about and with a cry of "Oh hell no!" took off down an alley. The two Eversors nodded at one another as their clothing shifted to their costumes. Mona took off down the alley, rapier in hand, while Meg mounted her golden motorcycle – which had suddenly appeared at her side - and continued down the street.

The man threw down garbage cans and scattered trash as he ran in a vain attempt to slow down the chasing Eversor. The girl leapt over and dodged each obstacle with an agility one would expect from such a thin and lithe form. Still, it seemed as though every time she was about to catch up to him, the alley turned again. The chase continued for at least several minutes before she heard the familiar roaring of engines in the distance.

Finally, the man turned into another alley. A long, straight path leading back to another street. Mona stopped in her tracks just as a bright light appeared at the far end. The man stopped as the light grew accompanied by a loud metallic thrumming. Meg whooped and hollered as the she closed in, sandwiching Mr. Rossi between herself and the pedestrian Eversor. Finally, she pulled the bike to the side, screeching to a halt mere inches from the terrified man.

With the two girls closing on him from either side, brandishing their weapons menacingly, Rossi could do nothing more than press his back against a wall and pray.

"Oh no," he wailed, "no, no, no NO. You're Helk's goons, aren't you? Oh fuck... Oh fuck, oh FUCK! I swear I didn't say nothin' to no one!"

The pair of magical girls looked at each other and shared a look of confusion. Mona stepped forward and pressed her rapier to the man's stomach.

"We're whose goons?"

"You're," Rossi blinked and gulped, "you're not with Helk? Then who the fuck are you?!"

"Security Firm Seventeen," Mona replied, throwing a business card at him. "We just wanted to ask you some questions. Let's start with 'Why did you run?' and 'Who's Helk?', shall we?"

"I- I ran because I was gettin' pulled over by a couple of scary lookin' bitches, that's why!" He shouted.

Mona looked back at her partner, who then shrugged.

"In what fucked up world are WE scary looking?" She asked. "Now tell us who Helk is before I need to making more of a point." She punctuated her statement by jabbing the rapier into his stomach just enough to break the skin.

"H-Helk? Did I, uh, did- did I say Helk?" Rossi stammered. "I meant, uh, 'help'! That's right! HELP! SOMEONE! HELP ME!"

His pleas were answered by one of Mona's fists sailing into the left side of his jaw, sending him to the ground.

"We were told you would know something about the death of Marcus Finn. That right?" Mona asked, crouching down and jabbing her sword to his throat.

"Finn? I don't know him!"

"Oh for fuck's sake!" The taller girl groaned, stabbing her rapier into the man's hand eliciting a loud scream. "TELL US WHAT YOU KNOW."

"Whoa, whoa, whoa, Mona!" Meg shouted. "Calm down! Just take it down a notch!"

"You aren't the one who had to chase this schmuck down and get covered in shit! This guy talks now or he gets to write down and cry about losing his tongue!"

"Whoa! Hey! We can talk this out!" The shorter Eversor cautioned.

Mona flicked her spear at her partner. "Back off! I got covered in filth that's probably coated in a nice layer of hobo piss trying to catch this fucker! Now shut up or I'll stick you next!"

Meanwhile, Rossi simply sat and watched the arguement silently, scared out of his wits.

"You think we're gonna get anything out of him if you spill his guts?!"

"I don't know, but I'll sure feel a hell of a lot better about all this!"

"You're gonna spill his intestines all over the alley just cause you got a little dirty?"

"You trying to say something, Laurie?!"

"You're gonna be getting bits of Rossi out of your clothes for weeks if you don't calm down!"

"You know what," Mona said, making a particularly sharp turn back toward the cowering man, "screw this I-"

"I'LL TALK!" Rossi shouted, holding his hands up in surrender. "I'll give you whatever you want! Names, places, whatever! Just don't hurt me!"

Mona blinked, the anger quickly draining from her face. "You'd- you'd do that? For us?"

"I'll tell you everything! Just shut up!"

"Well gosh, Rossi," Meg said, taking a seat beside him and throwing a playful punch at his shoulder, "you're not such a bad guy after all!"

"Alright," the taller Eversor announced, pulling out her phone and setting it to record the conversation. "Now spill."

"Helk. Charles Helk," Rossi started. "He owns a club downtown. Real popular, not my kind of place, called Club Mist. He also happens to be a small time arms dealer. Lets the higher-ups work out of his club for a cut of the profits. I happen to work for him. A-anyways, Finn, right?"

"Yeah," Mona replied. "He was murdered. We were asked to look into it. Any idea who it was?"

Rossi nodded. "The Wolf."

The Eversors blinked, then looked at each other.

"Da big bad woof?" Meg asked playfully.

"S-S-Something like that," the man replied. "About a week ago, Helk calls a meeting. So a bunch of us come in and he's sitting at his desk, same as usual. 'cept there's this girl with him. Real fuckin' scary bitch wearing this outfit that looks like straight-jacket. She's standing there beside him, not sayin' a fuckin' word. Just smiling. Not like one of them psycho smiles, but like, she KNOWS we're fucked. All smug and shit."

"Oh no..." Mona groaned.

"Oh yeah," Rossi answered. "One of yours, I'm guessing?"

"Might be," Mona nudged him with her rapier. "Keep going."

"Right," he gulped. "So crazy bitch has this big ass golden chain in her hands with two huge fuck-off hooks on either end. I don't even gotta say that we were freaked the fuck out. So this guy, Dmitri. Big fuckin' Ukie or somethin'. Real swell guy. The kind of fella that makes you wonder how he got roped up in this stuff. He starts freaking out, thinks she's like some slave or something. Says human trafficking is something he just won't do. So he tries to get the fuck out. BAM!"

Rossi slapped his one good hand on his leg, making Meg yelp. Mona still stared, unflinching.

"She hooks him. We barely even saw her move," the man explained, shaking his head. "Got him right through the throat. She starts yapping about how he made a bad decision and all that shit. That's when we knew he wasn't fuckin' around. Helk said she'd be sticking around, keeping people in line. Said he was in charge now. Never said her name either, just called her his 'Wolf'."

The taller Eversor narrowed her eyes. "Anything else?"

Rossi gulped and nodded. "Y-yeah. We hadn't really noticed, but Helk has this big fuckin' rock on his neck with a golden chain. I ain't no faggot, but it was the most beautiful thing I ever seen. It was blue and twinkling and... fuck it was nice. Then he pulls out this box and opens it. Three more of those rocks. Said they were ten times more beautiful than diamonds and sold for a hundred times the price on the black market. Wouldn't tell us where he got 'em, but he said he found a buyer and that we were gonna be the richest motherfuckers in the city. Or at least, he was. That's... that's all I know. I swear."

Mona reached for a choker hidden under her clothing. After a short burst of light, she held out a small silver rose with a swirling indigo gem in the centre. "Those gems look anything like this?"

Rossi's eyes bulged and he took a quick gulp. "Y-yeah. That's the ones."

"They're selling soulgems," Meg observed, her mouth hanging open.

"Those gems," Mona asked hesitantly, "what colours were they?"

"Uh, lemme think," Rossi mumbled. "One was a really pale orange. Almost white. One was green, with a bit of black in the middle. The other was nearly all black with a little blue around the edges."

The two Eversors looked at each other, sharing looks of shock and concern. The two stood up and leaned into each other.

"We need to tell the warmaster," Meg stated bluntly.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 05/31/13(Fri)08:29 No.25152871

The box drops from your hands and onto Kyuubey's desk with a damp squelch. The stench of blood immediately wafting from it as its gruesome contents bounces up to knock the lid loose.

The Incubator blinks at this, then up at you. Its expression managing to depict mild annoyance despite its unchanging features.

"...You will, of course, explain to me why you've just dumped a severed head on top of my paperwork, Matsuda."

You don't need to fucking explain anything, you growl at him. All he needs is to look inside the goddamn box and connect the dots himself.

Another blink, another moment of silence. And it's then that he obliges you.

"...Ah."

Ah. That's all he says? 'Ah'?

"...I'd say something about not losing your head, Matsuda, but I do feel that it's not the proper statement to make at the moment."

>> ☐ Deculture 05/31/13(Fri)08:31 No.25152887

>>25152871

You are a Magical Girl, and it's been a long day. A very long day.

And it's not even over yet.

It started off well enough. You managed to reach a civil agreement with Miki Sayaka without either of you trying to stab each other in the face. You managed to delegate this week's high-profile missions and make some important decisions without embarrassing yourself too much. You got your new office on the way to being straightened out. You managed to cheer up a bedridden Callidus, and even cleared the air - mostly - with an idol without too much drama.

You managed to do all those things without pulling a gun or someone. Some - including yourself - would say that this is the closest thing to you not resorting to that one-size-fits-all solution for a span of time longer than ten minutes.

And it was going all so well, too. You'd very nearly gone a day being...responsible. Being diplomatic. You were beginning to think that this Warmaster thing wouldn't be so bad.

Now this. While having a drink with one of your subordinates, you received a strange package out of nowhere. A box, all taped up nice and tight, with your name written on it. Generally cautious with this sort of thing, you opened it while stopping time in its tracks - Pinky looking over your shoulder as you did, being the same insane eldritchian nightmare she usually is.

And surprising no one, it's a head. A severed human head of a girl, mutilated beyond recognition. Five words painfully familiar to you carved crudely into its forehead. Eyes torn out, revealing hollow pockets of blood and gouged flesh. A challenge, maybe? A warning? Or just someone fucking with you?

>> ☐ Anonymous 05/31/13(Fri)08:31 No.25152891

Shoot him. In the face.

Then apologise, but only sullenly.

>> ☐ Deculture 05/31/13(Fri)08:31 No.25152895

Never mind that whoever sent you this package made the girl look like Tomoe Mami before sending it to you - dyeing her hair the same shade of blonde, teasing it into the same curls. Even having her wear a copy of the flower brooch Mami always wore. No, you're not even upset about that, now that you've confirmed that Mami was still safe and sound (she was having tea with Sayaka at the time).

What's upset you is that the person who did this - whoever it is - knew enough about you to do something like this. Worse still, the words that they'd carved into the poor girl's face meant that they were familiar with the Golden Weapons. With what's happening to you. And everyone who knew about that was either a close personal acquaintance, freezing in Siberia, or dead.

...You've never wanted to shoot someone in the face as badly as you wanted to now.

You'd stuffed the box - head and everything - into your inventory, just after promising Pinky to bring her some of Mami's pancakes next time you made the natural progression of time your bitch. She merely pouted at this, before grumbling about how she'll be waiting - and then faded into nothing as you turned away. Still in frozen time, you ran out of the bar, looking for anyone who resembled the courier earlier. ...No dice, not even after you've ran a couple of blocks. You even checked the cars, to see if they'd snuck into one. Your Shield was clicking frantically, nearly red-hot by the time you'd finished. There was no trace of him - as if he'd disappeared.

You disengaged your Shield and walked back to the bar, your mood black as you met a nonplussed Charles and a baffled Kumatora in the middle of her second glass of strawberry milk. She'd asked where you went, or what was in the package you'd been holding earlier - you merely shook your head and asked her to finish her drink, as you needed to get to the Officio right away.

She didn't ask about the bloodstains on your skirt, although you saw her eyes flicking down towards it. Smart girl.

The drive was quick, and you rushed past stuttering Magical Girls and kowtowing employees to get to Kyuubey's office. The Incubator was in the middle of signing a heap of paperwork when you burst in. That was when you dropped the box on his table.

Which brings you back to now.

"...I'll try to look past the fact that I'll be conducting some takeover negotiations with bloodstained paperwork and ask you, Matsuda, if you've any idea what this is about." Kyuubey looks down into the box again, one appendage reaching forward and carefully nudging the head to reveal its grisly message. "I have my own suspicions, of course, but I'd like it if my Warmaster offered her own opinion. Show some proactivity for once."

How do you respond?

There isn't anyone I can name that isn't already dead
There are a few factions I would guess that might have something to do with this

As nothing solid can be proven though I would suggest assigning Tomoe Mami a guard and possibly relocating her to the officio for the time being, while she is quite skilled we have seen that there are those out there who are extremely dangerous and losing her would be a blow to our officio both in morale and in the void it would leave in our ranks

Also I recommend putting some effort towards discovering who this head is of, who sent it and what they are planning to do other than threaten Mami

As warmaster this is my recommendation, the safety of our operatives is part of my responsibility as their superior

"Point 1: Whoever did this possesses, or is at the very least familiar with, the golden weapons. Because that goddamn phrase.

Point 2: It was deliberately dressed up as Tomoe Mami.

Point 3: It was not delivered in a terribly Conventional manner. Given the freshness of the dead head, whoever did it would have had to have known exactly where I was at any given moment, and had a girl on hand to provide the head.

Point 4: I had been informed, en route from Siberia, with a cryptic warning indicating that someone referred to as "The Prophet" needs to die, or Tomoe Mami will.

My conclusion is as follows: Someone connected to the golden weapons has either put out a hit on, or intends to kill one of the best magical girls in this officio. Furthermore, it is probable that hey are doing it specifically to fuck with us, either to draw me out, lure me into a trap, or simply hurt me.

You want proactive? I'm issuing an order to have a team protecting Tomoe Mami at all times. I am also dispatching a team specifically to investigates this. I want a strategy meeting with all senior staff and rank leaders to plan a counterattack to deal with this threat.

Someone just declared war on us, Kyuubey. And I intend to show them what a war really is."

It would be a piss-poor officio if it didn't have a single Callidus before we 'recruited' Midori. Unless it was one of a specific Meguca's powers related to their wish, to switch bodies easily.

Overreacting is just as bad as not reacting enough.
If the Prophet knew enough about us to target Mami, then they would know enough that we would have a disproportionate response.
In fact, that's probably what they planned on.

There's three reasons as to send something like this;

1: sender is crazy
2: sender wishes to provoke a response
3: sender is using the item as a delivery method for something else

1: we can't do much against.
2: The most likely response we have is keeping mami safe, meaning putting a guard on her. What does that do? Mami doesn't do too many solo missions, so it's not we'll be crippled there. An honour guard takes some resources up so it might be that, but it's not exactly something that will really be a problem.
3: Make sure we check it's not a bomb, JC.

It might be someone who has access to files on golden weapon users, or who has personally seen golden weapon users in action enough to know that they're violent and insane and like saying a certain phrase a large number of times.

That could narrow the list down a bit, but it's best to start with the most likely people who would have a grudge against Chiaki enough to send this horrific message.

Oriko would be a suspect. Chiaki killed Kirika in her attempt to save Mami. If she was bitter enough about it, she could have contracted with an incubator to help her get revenge on Chiaki, or otherwise hired another agency to do such a thing.

You gather your thoughts at the same time you take a deep breath. Composing yourself, forcing back the compulsion of pulling steel and pumping a few cathartic rounds into the smug mutant cat. Reasoning to yourself that it would just slow things down; that it would just annoy the both of you; and that it would be a waste of ammunition. You close your eyes, letting your breath out in a sigh, before talking.

You tell him what you know and what you think, point by point. You make sure to emphasize the most important facts, here: that the culprit knows about the Golden Weapons, it knows about your habits, and it know about your connection with Tomoe Mami. The message is there, plain and simple - someone is planning to have the blonde killed. This being anything else - intimidation, psychological warfare, or even a taunt - is much too optimistic to even consider. Someone wants Tomoe Mami dead, pure and simple, and they were willing to get someone innocent dragged into it by using her head as the proverbial brick through the window.

"A serious allegation, but one I can fully understand where it's coming from." Kyuubey muses. "You seem terribly convinced, here, though."

...Who else wouldn't be convinced? Someone just sent you a fucking severed head. There's not much gray area in this one. And since he wants you to be proactive, you'll do so right now, by issuing an order to have a team protecting Tomoe Mami at all times, as well as a team to investigate this thoroughly. You also want to meet - immediately - with all senior staff and rank leaders to plan a counterattack, just in case the worst case scenario happens.

"Let's not get too ahead of ourselves, now." The mutant cat replies gently, before falling into silence, shaking his head, and then continuing. Both appendages carefully placing the lid back on the box.

"I do agree, however - this seems more and more like a declaration. Someone has their sights on Tomoe Mami.

Very well, I'll have the rank leaders come up in a little bit. But before that..." Kyuubey looks up at you.

"I'd like you to be more honest with me. You are my warmaster, I am your Incubator. You are my right hand. We must have honesty, Matsuda. We need to understand each other."

...What? What's he being touchy-feely about, now?

"Three times I've felt you thinking about shooting me, Matsuda, in as many minutes the moment you stepped into my office. I knew what you were here for the moment I saw you. No, I wasn't reading your mind - merely skimming the surface, nothing more. You've certainly given me enough evidence to believe you, as well as a solid-sounding theory. But what makes you so sure? What gives you that conviction?"

"Ever since Tomoe Mami rescued you from that barrier, you've always been a difficult one to deal with. You killed me, twice, before I could even get a word in edgeways. You've been a source of frustration and worry, both to me, Tomoe Mami, and even Sakura Kyoko. Malal had always hid it, but there's little you can hide from an Incubator, even when you wear a Culexus Helmet every waking hour." Kyuubey sighs. "You are Warmaster now, Matsuda, and I'd like to take this opportunity to ask if there is anything you are hiding from me. Convince me that my decision to make you Warmaster is the right one."

It seems that the mutant cat wants you to spill the beans about Pinky.

Faust does not have good memories of the Incubators, and she's been deliberately mucking with the work that the Incubators have been doing.

[Truth]
"...Let me see if I can sum this up briefly. I'm from another timeline. Something went terribly wrong with an amazingly powerful magical girl, something I don't entirely remember, who is now an insane goddess with the power to re-write reality. Now she haunts me, appearing to me oftentimes when I use my power to stop time, and she's behind the appearance of the golden weapons. But she's mostly just given them out to the violent or deluded, and hasn't usually facilitated their plans or seemingly made any of her own. She seems to have a fixation on me, but also wants me dead, and with her craziness it's hard to get usable information out of her, but in this case I think she may be telling me the truth in that this particular case isn't her doing, Like the Kilgore case, where she didn't anticipate someone else taking the golden weapon and using it for their own ends. But at least if I suspect a golden weapon may be involved, I can sometimes confirm it if she says something that matches up.

So I guess you could say I have a little pink bird on my shoulder, one that may rip out my jugular at any moment."

It would have been difficult as hell to get Mirai back to Japan, though. It was shown that Jyubey could possess the soulgems and make them witch out at will; even if she were alive, she'd likely be a prisoner for the rest of her life in a secured cold room in Siberia, or killed because she'd be too much of a liability in a top-secret R&D (and containment) facility.

How much do we actually know about our own past in-character now anyway? Presumably we got some stuff back with the defrag in Siberia, but I get the impression that we're still not quite to 100% yet. Do we even remember our own history with Pinky at this point in the first place?

Regardless, I think a brief, bare-minimum answer is best anyway. If we give full disclosure about Pinky, we risk imminent termination. It's a tossup as to whether QB would see us as an opportunity to learn more about Faust, or a liability who's been compromised and needs to be eliminated. Actually dragging QB into stopped time to MEET Pinky is full pants-on-head retarded. There's absolutely no possible way that can end well.

Keep it short, simple, and cryptic. An Incubator-style answer for the Incubator.

>> ☐ Deculture 05/31/13(Fri)10:21 No.25153948

You make your decision, and give the Incubator a slow nod. Reaching over the box with both hands, picking him up off of his seat.

"...Matsuda?" Kyuubey's voice carries with it a note of puzzlement. "What are you--"

You shift him to one arm, just as you take hold of the rim of our shield. Pushing it slowly, carefully, the abused gears grinding and gnashing painfully as you force time to a dead stop. The world, as always, loses color, reduced to a dull cast-iron gray. Silence fills your ears, along with the sound of your own breathing, and your own blood pulsing through your veins.

"What's this?" The Incubator asks again, his voice echoing in your mind. "Matsuda, is this what happens when you stop time? I..." Kyuubey sounds like he's about to say something again, but falls silent. "Fascinating. Quite fascinating. But I don't know what this has to do with--"

The moment you realize something is wrong - terribly wrong - is the moment that the world disappears. Leaving you standing in the middle of a flooded, ruined Mitakihara. Bodies, corpses everywhere, some facedown in the mud and muck, others looking up to the sky, their faces permanently frozen in horror. Not one of them whole - each one torn apart or dismembered to some extent. The smell of rot - of decay - is sickeningly sweet, a scent that grows chokingly stronger when the scream erupts, loud enough to shake the sky.

"WHAT IS THAT THING DOING HERE?! WHY DID YOU BRING HIM HERE, HOMURA-CHAN?!"

You turn to see Pinky - no, Faust - in the form that you encountered in Siberia. A twisted, giant presence, with the stark face of a dying sun, a grin full of too many teeth, and eyes blackened with too many secrets and too many lies. Her claws are no longer playful, pointy tips to her gloved fingers - they are now scythes, each the length of your arm, dripping with blood and gore, gnarled where they sprouted out from arthritic knuckles.

"WHY. DID. YOU. BRING. HIM. HERE?!" The monstrous beast's roar hits you, a wall of sound, slamming into you and nearly bowling you over. Kyuubey scrambles up your arm and perches tightly on your shoulder - you feel his tiny claws push against your skin, through your clothes. "THIS WAS SUPPOSED TO BE JUST OUR SPECIAL PLACE!"

Without warning, without preamble - the monster that was once Pinky charges you. Loping at you, its clawed feet tearing through the ground, its scythed fingers slicing air. Its maw blooming open, exposing its forest of ivory teeth, each one stringy with pink saliva.

"I have no idea why you brought me here, Matsuda, but I'd like to get out of here now," Kyuubey says, strangely calm, yet his words are hurried. "If this was your idea of an explanation, then I will consider it. But let us leave before something happens."

Jyubey's power might not actually work unless the soul gem is being possessed currently by the magical girl in question, hence why he didn't do anything until we put Mirai into the fake body. Salve Trader Quest. We weren't that benevolent. Shit, in the same thread people had him kill two innocent kids to eliminate witnesses of the murder we just had commited.

The way he died was absolutely fucking retarded. After going to town with our brother to party and fuck, we wake up naked, hang-over, and see several bandits with really advanced (for that period) fire-arms kidnapping some noble or something who we have absolutely no relation to, who we barely know and doesn't affect us in any way or whatsoever. The bandits tell everyone to keep calm and that they will not hurt anyone unless provoked. What do the players suggest in a situation where the MC has absolutely no power but is not in ANY danger? LOL LETS RUSH THEM LIKE FUCKING IDIOTS DURR HURR

I hope this explains to you what kind of absolutely retarded players /tg/ sometimes has and can affect a quests you've been playing and enjoying for a long time.
Seriously, the authors should take this into account. You don't have the same players playing each time and you must anticipate absolute idiocy and keep in mind the veteran players who might not be on at time to keep it at bay.
And when you see the idiocy happening, at least wait much longer till update and keep refreshing while you're writing to see if consensus has changed.

Remind you of anything?

Also, you didn't read that quest but it ended with the protag rushing several men armed with semi-automatic guns.
What else was the author to do, he even gave us dice roll to beat (75) and chose best of 3.

Of course, there's also the option of killing off beloved NPCs. Honestly, I think killing off, say, Mami or Midori would be more painful to most players of this quest than a simple game over. Game over is basically "screw you guys, I'm taking my ball and going home". Killing off something really precious both to the protag in-character and the players out-of-character is a whole different level of punishment.

I'd say so.
The Katana was being pushed up against a rock and a hard place.
The "Get fucked" was just plain stupid because there was no chance for that to go well, and we ignored Midori's powers of stealth-kills in favor of bravado against a target that doesn't give a shit.

And this situation, we were given "Tell the Truth" vs. "Lie to him" and instead chose "bring him in front of an eldritch monstrosity that hates him"

Shooting Coobie seems like the most reasonable option, if I'm honest. He's seen what we bought him here to see, and I can see that as being the fastest way to get Pinky to stop flipping the fuck out.

When we get back to reality, we can explain why we shot him. He's a practical kind of Coobie, so simply explaining that seeing him get shot had a chance to calm her down should smooth things out.

I'm not sure how that will affect an Incubator's resurrection process.

Though, shooting him and telling Faust "What, I thought you'd like seeing me put a bullet between an Incubator's eyes" MIGHT work, since if he's the object of her fury, and we shoot him in front of her, she might calm down.

Well, if a retcon is done tastefully enough and it turns out to be much narratively better than what occurred, it can be good.

I've been in a quest with a very minor retcon due to the QM not seeing a large majority of votes swinging the other way due to writing. But he left the other scene in just to reinforce how important thinking things through was. Though both decisions didn't impact the story a whole lot in the end and only would have cost a single grunt trooper, resources were scarce and shit was hitting the fan at warp speeds.

Another similar action was done in the Lamia Child quest, in which the retcon was proposed by the QM himself after he thought that the direction it would have taken thing would've been detrimental to the narrative. It was honestly a surprise to all the players who thought it was OK, but agreed to go along with it. The implications from the retcon were much more interesting and opened up a lot of narrative venues.

However, there's also something to be said about letting bad decisions have consequences.

It does not matter what each path consists of or leads to.

Two things

1 not everyone shares your definition of interesting

2 the reason for this even being discussed is because it was a fault in the counting not in the players choice

So first off a retcon is suggested because we did not vote for this course of action
It was a miscounted by Deculture which lead to this entire situation

And secondly we need to get a better system for voting whether it is only counting a vote with and X, [ ], [X] or some similar symbol that is decided on by Deculture so that we all know which are votes and which aren't

Decu's pretty much going to deal with this crapfest in the morning. He sounded like he was really upset by the whole thing and some of y'all need to chill the fuck out, honestly. I DID pass on the actually constructive ideas here - marking votes more clearly and maybe marking the ends of voting periods - and past that we'll have to see how he feels about a retcon in the morning.

Honestly, if people could be a little more polite about this instead of screaming 'DECU FUCKED UP BAD DM' we could all get through this a lot more cleanly. And I'm not just saying we should suck it up and take the bad call either, but come on guys. Jesus. You don't scream at your DM for fucking up, either.

Thanks to the people that have been civil about the whole thing, though, too.

>a work of fiction for which we have input

Yes, and our input was ignored, not because of QM fiat or because of being outvoted, but because of a counting mistake.

This is just as much about having proper representation of player participation by taking the retcon than it is about winning.

Well said, and we've enough 'polite discourse' on possible solutions/fixes that Decu can relax on the whole "THE SKY IS ON FIRE" business.

Man, reading his twitter, I feel really bad that this has gone from a genuine mistake in counting to people getting outright angry at Decu. I mean, sure, he made a mistake; we all fuck up at times. That's no reason to flip our shit on him for mathing bad once in like, about a hundred fucking threads.

Hell, I for one am impressed he managed to run the quest this long without any prior counting mistakes. So yeah, hope he knows we aren't all screaming about the sky falling, and that he feels more up to looking into this in the morning (by which time the rest of us will have hopefully calmed the fuck down, Jesus Christ people).

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 06/02/13(Sun)08:57 No.25195380

The box drops from your hands and onto Kyuubey's desk with a damp squelch. The stench of blood immediately wafting from it as its gruesome contents bounces up to knock the lid loose.

The Incubator blinks at this, then up at you. Its expression managing to depict mild annoyance despite its unchanging features.

"...You will, of course, explain to me why you've just dumped a severed head on top of my paperwork, Matsuda."

You don't need to fucking explain anything, you growl at him. All he needs is to look inside the goddamn box and connect the dots himself.

Another blink, another moment of silence. And it's then that he obliges you.

"...Ah."

Ah. That's all he says? 'Ah'?

"...I'd say something about not--"

--Not losing your head, but he feels that it's not the right thing to say right now, right? That's what he was going to say, isn't it?

"...No. No, I wasn't."

You tell the Incubator that he is a liar and a fraud. More than that...head puns? Really? You thought he was better than that.

"Simply trying to lighten the situation, Matsuda. Although, seeing as it's not working, I may as well quit while I'm--"

Your trademark glare cuts him off, and he averts his eyes from you after a moment.

"Yes. Er. Well. Hmm." Kyuubey looks back down at the package. "This is quite serious, then. Very serious. Much too serious for puns."

Damn right.

>> ☐ Deculture 06/02/13(Sun)08:57 No.25195390

>>25195380

You are a Magical Girl, and it's been a long day. A very long day that isn't over yet.

It started off well enough. You managed to reach a civil agreement with Miki Sayaka without either of you trying to stab each other in the face. You managed to delegate this week's high-profile missions and make some important decisions without embarrassing yourself too much. You got your new office on the way to being straightened out. You managed to cheer up a bedridden Callidus, and even cleared the air - mostly - with an idol without too much drama.

You managed to do all those things without pulling a gun or someone. Some - including yourself - would say that this is the closest thing to you not resorting to that one-size-fits-all solution for a span of time longer than ten minutes.

And it was going all so well, too. You'd very nearly gone a day being...responsible. Being diplomatic. You were beginning to think that this Warmaster thing wouldn't be so bad.

Now this. While having a drink with one of your subordinates, you received a strange package out of nowhere. A box, all taped up nice and tight, with your name written on it. Generally cautious with this sort of thing, you opened it while stopping time in its tracks - Pinky looking over your shoulder as you did, being the same insane eldritchian nightmare she usually is.

And surprising no one, it's a head. A severed human head of a girl, mutilated beyond recognition. Five words painfully familiar to you carved crudely into its forehead. Eyes torn out, revealing hollow pockets of blood and gouged flesh. A challenge, maybe? A warning? Or just someone fucking with you?

>>25195390

In any case, you brought it back here, with Kumatora being none the wiser but wise enough, at least, not to ask any questions about it. Kyuubey, however, was proving to be an inquisitive little mutant cat. Well, you can understand where he's coming from, somewhat, but this would really go down much more smoothly if he didn't start with the fucking puns.

It's then that he looks up at you, again. "I...well. I suppose I'd ask you what your opinion of this is, but I have the strangest feeling I already do. You believe this is some sort of warning, some sort of threat, I gather? Someone who wants Tomoe Mami killed? And you'd want to have security detail on her at all times, as well as a strategy meeting with the current rank leaders?"

You open your mouth to snap at him, before blinking.

That's...yes. That's what you were about to say. All of it.

...What the hell? Is he reading your mind?! Is he fucking around inside your head, the little bastard mutant cat?!

"No. No, put your gun away, Matsuda. Nothing so crass." To his credit, Kyuubey didn't even flinch when you stepped forward. "Mind reading is a gross violation of privacy, and I've never taken that kind of liberty with you or anyone in my payroll, although it would certainly be a much more efficient way of extracting information. But no, certain things must be done right, or not at all." It's then that he shakes his head. "Although, if I may say so, it does feel like we've been through this before, and we're just merely repeating things."

He's getting that too, huh? And you thought it was just you, for a second.

"Is that so?" Kyuubey tilts its head to the side. "Fascinating. Quite fascinating."

A moment of awkward silence stretches between you, before you apologize about pulling a gun on him. It's...it's been a long day.

[2/3]

>>25195399

"Hmm? Oh, I've forgotten about it already. Put it out of your mind, Matsuda." The Incubator shakes his head. "Right. Well. Before we proceed, I'd like to ask if there's anything you'd like to tell me first. This...warning. The threat to Tomoe Mami's life. From your reaction earlier, I see that you feel quite strongly about this theory of yours. Certainly, the evidence is much to your favor. But what makes you so sure, I wonder? Is there something you're keeping from me?"

"Ever since Tomoe Mami rescued you from that barrier, you've always been a difficult one to deal with. You killed me, twice, before I could even get a word in edgeways. You've been a source of frustration and worry, both to me, Tomoe Mami, and even Sakura Kyoko. Malal had always hid it, but there's little you can hide from an Incubator, even when you wear a Culexus Helmet every waking hour."

Kyuubey sighs. "You are Warmaster now, Matsuda, and I'd like to take this opportunity to ask if there is anything you are hiding from me. Convince me that my decision to make you Warmaster is the right one."

It seems that the mutant cat wants you to spill the beans about Pinky.

I reckon we could have managed that situation. We just had to make Pinky think we were doing it for her. Tell her we really wanted to get the golden weapons for her, but the only way to get the mutant cat to help was to prove our sources to him. [x]Tell him. "...Long story short, I'm from another timeline. Something horrible happened involving an incredibly powerful magical girl from my past, neither of which I really remember. She followed me here, and has gone completely batshit insane, and has been haunting me like a very violent ghost whenever I use my magic. While she's the direct cause of the appearance of the golden weapons, she hasn't acted as much more than a provider, not seeming to have any real plan or direction other than to torment me. She doesn't account for what anyone really does when they're given a golden weapon, such as some immediately losing theirs to outside forces such as Kilgore. Confronting her is impossible, but sometimes from her madness and cluttered brain, I can glean some hints about things that are going on. One such hint has been that someone known as a "Prophet" is after Mami. And judging from the writing on this head, it's someone who knows about the golden weapons, and possibly is merely a vehicle for a vendetta against me, or possibly but less likely, the Officio.

So yeah. I've got a little pink bird on my shoulder. One named Faust."

I'm of the opinion that we really, really need to not try and introduce Pinky to others. She may hate Kyuubey now, but there's no guarantee she's going to really hate anyone else that much less once they intrude in her "Special Place" with Homura.

I know Pinky can be really moe at times but we really need to be prepared for the possibility that she may be undeniably insane in unpredictable ways, and we may straight up get someone murdered if we're not careful.

The thing is that its not that easy to tell how she would react.

Maybe she will go "Buh special place" on the other hand she did kind of react to Chiaki telling her that she wanted to introduce her to some friends tonight.

I think it might be okay if its Mami and/or Midori.

That said, the main thing is, do we really trust or friends enough to tell them about our connection to Pinky and do we really want to drag them into this mess.
The only people who know of her so far and are involved are Katerina and Midori.

I believe that we may be able to keep her sanity in check if we show her that we don`t ignore her, as in, bringing Midori or someone else along. Remember that she isn`t able to fully interact with the physical world so she probably doesn`t get much visitors.

Other than Crazy Worshippers, that is.

This may be something to consider long-term. Though Pinky says she'll compete fairly with Midori for Chiaki's affections, that doesn't mean that she won't go back on that if she gets super-jealous AND if we keep treating Pinky as an exposition NPC. Though attempting to obviously play Pinky and Midori's affections simultaneously could also backfire if not handled carefully.

You decide to tell him, finally, about Pinky. About Faust.

You don't tell him, everything, of course, but just enough to stress just how much fucked up your situation is with her. About how she doesn't just appear in your dreams - she's actively there, every single time you've stopped time using your shield.

About how she seems to know a horrific lot about you, and how she's been handing out the Golden Weapons to try and get you into some sort of game with them and their users. Like some sort of tournament or deathmatch, except all the participants have a penchant of going stark raving mad during halftime.

You also give him the reason why you know that someone, somewhere, wants Tomoe Mami dead - she's all but warned you about it, but in a much more oblique way. About how a prophet needing to die, or else Mami will be the one doing the dying.

You've told most of this to him before, already, back when you had your debriefing after Kirika's retirement. The warning, of course, is a new one.

You don't tell him about your suspicions, though. About how she may have helped Midori with pulling you out of that barrier.

He doesn't need to know that. The Incubator may be a damn sight better than most of his brothers, but you know how the little mutant cat bastard's mind works.

"I see. So your association with Faust isn't as minor as you'd lead me to believe, then, Matsuda." Despite his unchanging expression, Kyuubey almost looks...disappointed, somewhat. "Still. I'm glad you came forward with this information." He taps at the keyboard on his desk, and the entire room darkens as the wall screens come alive - each one blinking before displaying a portion of Faust's grief seed hovering behind the moon.

The surface is...much more cracked than you remember. Like the surface of an egg just about to hatch. Towering, barbed spikes of steel and stone jutting out from where the fissures converge.

"As you can see, the surface has become much more volatile. We believe something may happen soon enough, although we're not sure what. Some are saying that it will give birth to a Witch stronger than anything we've encountered before. Others are saying that a 'Blessed Lady' will rise and bring the world into the heaven it deserves to be. Lots of scenarios, none of them proven or attractive." the Incubator turns briefly to look at the display, before swiveling back to face you. "In any case, we're still observing it closely."

...Can't you just blast it out of space, then? If it's posing that kind of threat?

"I knew you'd suggest that. Predictably, violence is your first recourse to anything, isn't it, Matsuda?" Kyuubey seems to smirk, here. "Of course, a few of my brothers share your sentiment. The Eighth in particular was very vocal about having it destroyed, as well as the Seventh - strangely enough. Of course, we outvoted them. It seems like such a waste, and it warrants further study."

Even if you already know that it's the Grief Seed of a Witch that's haunting Magical Girls and leaving them dead?

"The attrition rate isn't that high, admittedly. There's been a marked decrease of reported sightings or deaths related to those sightings."

But still--

It's then that Kyuubey's eyes narrow at you. "Let's not turn this into a discussion of morality, Matsuda. The First believes - and I am forced to agree, myself - that if we manage to find a way to leverage the energy that Faust's Grief Seed contains, then we will have enough resources to stave off this universe's heat death for millennia."

"I'll consider that a comment made under duress of adjusting to your new rank, Matsuda." Kyuubey replies archly, before tapping at his keyboard again. The display fades, and the room is flooded in white light once more.

"Very well, I've alerted the Rank Leaders, as well as our last remaining Culexus. They'll convene in your office in ten minutes. As for the security detail, I will have a squad of Eversors and Vindicares shadowing Tomoe Mami whenever she's outdoors." He looks up at you. "Is there anything else you'd like to add or ask? Since he asked, you'd like the identity of the girl who had her head get used as the proverbial brick thrown through the window in this case. Surely Kyuubey has people that can take care of something like that? See if they can find out anything - fingerprints, hair, the usual kind of forensic stuff that can clue you in as to who sent the package.

"Yes, of course. I'll have the remains properly disposed afterwards, as well." Kyuubey looks down at the package once more, shaking his head, before placing the lid back and patting it gently. "I can say for sure, though, that this was an uncontracted civilian. Always the pity, reallly, whenever innocent bystanders get involved."

...Well. You'd also like to have media suppression on anything that may be about your meeting with Iori, earlier. It...didn't really go as planned, and you'd like to spare her the embarrassment of it having to be seen on the news.

"...Are you saying, Matsuda, that you've already caused an incident worthy of a news blackout, and you've been Warmaster for only a day or so?"

Yes. That's what you're saying.

"I see." Kyuubey nods. "Well, you might be disappointed to know that Kharn managed to do the same thing an hour after being formally declared Warmaster. So you didn't break that record of hers, if that was your aim. If it wasn't, though, then consider me quite relieved that my new Warmaster is turning out to be an improvement over the last."

An hour? God...God dammit, Kharn.

Anyway, besides that, the thing about the Prophet--

"Yes, yes, I'm ahea--er, I considered that in advance. I'm having our staff compile a list of any Magical Girl with abilities that match that of a prophet - precognition and its many forms. I'll have it sent directly to you as soon as it's done."

Right. Well. That's...that's it, really. You've nothing else to say.

...Has there anything changed, though? Now that you've told him the truth about you and Pinky?

Maybe not Kyouko, she's with Midori right now. Either at the apartment or going over mission details. Sayaka probably. She was mentioned as the most likely candidate for our Eversor Rank Leader so she'd probably get called in for such a meeting.

You make your way back to your office just as you take out your smartphone and dial in Mami's number. The blonde answers after the second ring, and she seems to be in a rather populated area, from the buzz in the background. She also sounds like she was in the middle of talking to someone just before she answered.

"Take care, Sayaka-chan! Ah, please don't run!" You hear something that sounds slightly like someone snarling 'FUCK MURDERFACE' underneath her breath, and Mami tut-tutting directly afterward. "Sayaka-chan, please watch your language! ...Um, anyway, yes, Chiaki-san? Can I help you with anything? I'm just having tea in the cafeteria at the moment." A giggle. "I heard you caused quite the commotion here, earlier. Something about buying a Waifu Special for somebody? And acting really cool about it?"

...You have no comment to that.

"Really, now?" Another giggle. "All kidding aside, Chiaki-san, you should be more careful about how people might see you. You're Warmaster now, and while I know you don't particularly care about how anyone may think of you...you need to start taking care of your reputation." You can hear the smile in her voice. "And I might get jealous of who you bought that lunch for - whoever it was."

Uh. Um. Well. Er. You have no reply to that, other than the silent noises you're making, your jaw working up and down, trying to form words.

That hat, seriously. You should ask Kharn about it when you get the chance.

"Um, Chiaki-san? Are you still there? ...Chiaki-san?"

You reply to the affirmative. You're still on the line. And you were calling to...to see if she's okay.

"Well, of course I'm okay, Chiaki-san. Why would you ask?" A pause. "Is...is everything alright? Is there something I should know, Chiaki-san?"

Do you tell Mami about the threat to her life?

That was a special case. Remember, Kirika was a friend and another who had partaken of the Flesh. Was probably thinking Kirika could be salvaged like she was. Without Midorin and Misaka as stabilizing influences, we'd be next, in her eyes. Then that'd put undue pressure on her as a tainted one, and we all know how Mami gets under duress.

Homura is super short. Chiaki is super short. In Midori's arc, she confirmed that she was taller than Chiaki.

You decide to tell her about the threat to her life, and you do so, but without going into the...specifics of the thing. Basically, you leave out the thing about the head, about the writing on the head, and what the head was made to look like. You just tell her that you're sure that someone wants to take her out, and was confident enough in their ability to do so that they personally sent YOU, the Warmaster, a warning.

Mami goes silent at this, not asking questions, merely asking you to continue as you pause every couple of sentences. The warmth in her voice replaced with a calm and collected professionality. You idly wonder if this is how she talks to the people she's about to kill - after all, Mami may be nice and everything, but you do know that to even be considered Warmaster, you need to be involved with quite a lot of missions. And Mami, if anything, was involved in a rather large number.

"I see. And...you're to meet with the rank leaders in a little bit, to discuss strategy in case of an attack?" You reply to the affirmative, and she makes a rather pleased noise. "Well, that's good, Chiaki-san. I was prepared to give you a primer on what to do as Warmaster in cases such as these, but...you're adapting to your position quite quickly. I may not have to give you that primer after all!"

Well, maybe...maybe you still need it. You're just reacting to the situation as you find it prudent.

...For someone who's just been told that someone's gunning for her, Mami sure sounds calm, though.

"Oh? Ahah, well, of course it's not something I wanted to hear, Chiaki-san," The blonde tells you in a chiding tone. "...but you might say I'm used to it. Remember, I was acting Warmaster for a time, and I was just about to get elected. I've received no less than four death threats during that time, most of which really came up nothing even after we investigated them."

...Four?

"Mmhmm. Of course, there was also that one time during a joint mission with the Third's Eversors...but a good friend of mine handled it quite well, if a bit excessively." She giggles, again. "That's why I'm not worried - because that good friend is telling me about this one right now, and she's doing a good job of handling it, too."

...Ah. Well. Um. Yes.

Mami does have this effect on you. You really can't understand why.

"Is there anything else, Chiaki-san? Only, um, there's suddenly a few people wanting to ask me about things. I suppose this is the security detail Kyuubey-san is talking about, hee."

...No. No, there's nothing else. Will...will she still be coming over? For your file and your haircut?

"I wouldn't miss it for the world, Chiaki-san, security detail or no." The tone in Mami's voice would have sweetened the most bitter cup of Duncan Hills Coffee money could buy. You spend a few moments blushing in silence before exchanging goodbyes, and the call ends.

You find yourself in front of your office. The door is wide open. You blink at this, and step inside, seeing four Magical Girls already loitering around. Two of them you don't recognize. One of them is leaning against the wall, wearing a Culexus hardsuit, helmet secured and visor down. The last one is Sayaka Miki, who seems to be the only one bothering to stand at formal attention when you stepped in.

"Warmaster in the premises!" Sayaka barks irritably. "For fuck's sake, Ashford, stop messing about! That's the Warmaster's throne!"

"...I merely wanted to see what it felt like to use." The addressed girl - a rather short one, just a few inches taller than Misaka, with blonde pigtails and thick-framed glasses - murmurs in a calm monotone. She slides off of Kharn's throne, wincing in pain as she rubs her posterior with a gloved hand. On her back, you see what looks to be a strange, bulky handcannon, rather blocky and unorthodox in design, with blue stripes all over. "There was no need to shout."

"Ah, that's Sayaka-chan for you, always the high-strung one." The second of the unfamiliar girls say, stepping away from the bookcase. This one looks a bit...unorthodox too, wearing something akin to a kimono reserved for royalty and suchlike. Her long black hair very nearly touching the ground, the bangs cut in a severe line just above her half-hooded, sleepy eyes. She nods at you with a bedroom smile curling her lips.

"Warmaster. You summoned us, here we are." Her hand, covered by her kimono's overly-long sleeve, gestures to everyone else in the office. "The Rank Leaders of the Eversors, the Callidus, and the Vindicares. And I see that our one remaining Culexus is here, too."

The Culexus doesn't react to this, merely giving the merest inclination of her helm as acknowledgement. "Our esteemed Incubator was unfortunately sparse on the details as to why we've been called here, so I hope you would offer enlightenment regarding that."

...Yes. Well. There's a good reason, but...it hasn't even been ten minutes, is it?

"Punctuality is important," The one called Ashford murmurs, her amber eyes glowing behind her glasses. "It's not everyday that we get called into the Warmaster's office for a meeting."

[x]Ask them about themselves, first. You'd like to get to know them better as Warmaster.

For our meet with the Division Heads I think we should go over 4 main points. After everyone gets here of course.

#1: Introductions. Name, rank, designation, and skills. This is our first formal meeting with them, we need to know about them and get this formality out of the way. This includes who we are and our 3 aides.

#2: Brief them on the situation. Someone wants Mami dead. Tell them about the severed head. It was either to goad us on or for some other purpose, probably both. This is most likely related to the Golden weapons. Mami is already being taken care of.

#3: Their mission. First priority, finding The Prophet. Second priority, finding Golden weapons. If they do find something it is to be reported immediately to us. We will decide how they proceed from there. The Golden Weapon users we have fought almost killed us every time and required serious backup. Tell them how dangerous the weapon is by itself even if they manage to disarm a hostile Golden Weapon user. We say 'user' instead of magical girl because anyone can use them, magical girls are just the ones who start with them. The only reason we can use them is because of a top secret surgery that almost killed us.

#4: Q&A.

Also note that we aren't telling them to entirely drop their current assignments for this. Just to put out some feelers. Part of this meetings is to decide who gets the job of devoting her entire time to The Prophet. She will report to QB after this meeting to sync up with his plans.

Yuma looked up to Malal though and she didn't hate her for her close association to Kharn.

The events are still fuzzy but Souji says that the event that got Kharn exiled was our fault and got all the Culexus killed. Yuma, presumably, hates Kharn because of this unspecified event. It might be that she hates us for it too, or it might be that she blames it solely on Kharn.

Whatever the case, Yuma's cut off contact with both Kyouko and Sayaka, so that's probably the most worrisome thing about her right now.

Kid is isolating herself.

Oh, as for Q and A, How does Kyubey and the other officios get enough Grief Seeds to support all of their magical girls? Do the coobs just suck the despair out and reuse the same grief seeds, or are there just that many witches running around to kill? Part of the answer is secret, but I'll tell you what I can.

The part about recycling grief seeds is correct, but there are witches all over the world to fight, yes. There's also the deal with Officios having an active duty roster - at any one time, only a fraction of the Magical Girls in an Officio are using their Soul Gems. The rest are going about their daily lives, untransformed and not accruing any 'despair' but still earning money by doing other mundane assignments (such as research, clerk work, or even community service). There is also one Officio that is dedicated completely to hunting witches, but we'll get to that soon.

We get to see Chiaki acting like a respectable Warmaster hopefully. Her reputation probably really precedes her and thus the Division Heads aren't going to take this too seriously at first.

What I want to know is how is she going to introduce herself. As Warmaster Chiaki "Murderface" Matsuda. Or as just Warmaster Chiaki Matsuda.

I think Murderface should be in there. Respect for Kharn. We have our own name now, but too many people know us as Murderface to not include it in our working title. Want to avoid people going, "Warmaster Matsuda? Wasn't Murderface supposed to be the new Warmaster."

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 06/04/13(Tue)08:15 No.25234611

You are a Magical Girl, and you're currently in a meeting with the four most high-ranking Magical Girls in your Officio - well, after you, of course. You can't help but smirk at that, somehow. A couple of months ago, you wouldn't even have dreamed of talking to them face to face like this - not that you wanted to, anyway - but the fact that you can, now, seemed to help sink in that you were in fact Warmaster. You're a big deal. The biggest.

Hell, you probably could ask them about the underwear they're wearing, and they'd have no choice but to answer without giving you any lip.

...Not that you would, of course. Not that you would at all.

Fucking, no-good, piece of shit hat.

>> ☐ Deculture 06/04/13(Tue)08:16 No.25234621

>>25234611

Anycase, you started things off with introductions. Easy enough, right? You began by saying your own name - which got you nothing but surprised stares. "Chiaki...Matsuda, Warmaster?" The girl in the kimono had asked, breaking the awkward silence. "I beg your pardon, but isn't the current Warmaster's name, um...Murderface?"

Yes. Yes, that's your name, you replied. But you're going by Chiaki Matsuda, now. It's a much better name, anyway.

"...I suppose so, but it doesn't have the same ring as Murderface." The girl shrugged here. "I've always thought it was a good name. A very brutal name. Right, Ashford? Ashford?" She turned towards her more diminutive companion, nudging her with an elbow, while Sayaka all but positively seethed at her direction.

. . .Right. Well. You moved on from there, noting that this particular officer may be a handful to deal with.

You got their names easily after that. The mouthy girl in the kimono is Karasawa Enishi, Callidus Rank Leader and the Officio's current Etiquette Officer (whatever the hell that meant). Short stuff with the glasses and pigtails and weird-ass gun is Rea Ashford, Vindicare Rank Leader and Logistics Officer. Sayaka, well, you already know her. The one in the Culexus hardsuit, though...all you got was a burst of static, and a murmured "Omegon". Which...didn't really tell you anything other than the fact that whoever was underneath that helmet may or may not be Yuma.

But it's got to be Yuma, right? Malal wouldn't be wrong here, would she?

Putting that aside, you began to brief them from behind your desk, taking a seat on the throne as you did so. You told them, as succinctly as you could, about the package you received. The head, and who it was made to look like, and what you think it means. No doubt they've been asked to reassign girls to Mami as security duty - this is the reason why. You note here that Sayaka's eyes narrow at this, the blue-haired Eversor standing up straighter.

You then tell them about why you summoned them here - the Prophet. You have reliable intel that a Prophet is involved in all of this, and may be the key to finding the one wanting Tomoe Mami dead. Once Kyuubey finishes compiling the list of potentials, they'll be the ones to apprehend them for questioning. They are to be brought back to the Officio alive - standard Silent Room protocol. Dead, only if nothing else can be done.

Finally, you told them about the Golden Weapons. If they find a lead about them, or hear rumors about them, or even know about someone using it - it is to be reported to you directly and immediately. No one engages without you knowing and being on-site. You stressed how dangerous they really are, even if they manage to disarm whoever's been waving the Golden Weapon around. Only you can handle them safely enough, and even then it's still a risk, due to a procedure you underwent in Siberia. Both Rea and Enishi blinked at this, Sayaka remained her usual scowling self.

"...Well. First impressions aside, Warmaster, I do believe you've got everything handled. I was getting worried that we'd be needing to wait until your aide translated everything into intelligibility. I have high hopes, and welcome our new Warmaster." Enishi smiles and bows, the gesture elegant even in when curt. "Rest assured the Callidus are at your command, Matsuda-sama, and we will keep watch for these Golden Fiends."

"The Vindicares echo the sentiment," Rea murmurs in her usual deadpan tone. "We will hunt down this Prophet and prepare him for the Warmaster's justice." Her amber eyes glint from behind her glasses.

"You know what I'm already going to say, Murderf--" Sayaka is just about to reply in her customary irritated manner - until she catches the gaze of the two other Rank Leaders staring at her sullenly. "...W-what I meant to say was, likewise, Warmaster." She amends herself quickly. "The Eversors will have this prophet's skull for your throne before too long."

. . .What?

"Sorry. Reflex." Sayaka grumbles, looking away, scratching the back of her neck in embarrassment.

Well. Anyway. That seems to be it, you think. More or less.

Is there anything else you'd like to ask them? Tell them? This should be the time.

Oh boy, the most exciting time of the day!

Within the week, we'd like a report from each of them on each section's forces, current strengths and weaknesses, and any priority matters that they consider should be looked at, and have it forwarded to our aid, Kyouko. Though they can delegate that, of course.

We'll impress on them we'll try to make this place a bit more professional at its core - that is, we'll get the job done. Then, check for any immediate current concerns that they might have.

Try to resist the urge to snark at Sayaka and shoot anyone.

Exchange phone numbers so we can contact each other.

Then thank them for their time and that Chiaki looks forward to working with them.

Dismiss them but ask Yuma and Sayaka to stay behind for a short while. Hand Yuma her box of skull parts and Malal's message, that she specifically asked her to reassemble Remov.

Tell Sayaka of the impromptu housewarming party. If Kyoko is there, no reason her life partner shouldn't be there tonight.

Ask them to keep an ear out for rumours of Golden Weapons. We already know about Kyoko Sakura's spear; that was modified from a safe weapon and is not relevant.
After that, dismiss everyone but Sayaka, and call Mami. She didn't seem to take our previous warning seriously and, despite the inherent unpleasantness, will need to be informed that this isn't just some insane rant posted on the internet or stuffed in the mailbox.
Once we're alone with Sayaka, take the goddamn hat off and lament how shit our first day on the job has been.

Well, that is pretty much it, you decide. You don't want to hold them up for too long, you know they've got a lot of things to do, as Rank Leaders.

You exchange phone numbers with them, though, before dismissing them, so they can contact you the moment they find anything about the Golden Weapons or the Prophet. They should feel free to call anytime, but in the off chance that you can't be reached, then they're to call Sayaka, your Equerry, or Tomoe Mami herself. Both Rea and Enishi blink at this, and even Omegon lifts her helmet to look at the suddenly-awkward Eversor.

"My. Rank Leader AND Equerry, Miki?" Enishi snaps a paper fan open with a flick of her wrist, covering a coquettish giggle with the trinket. "You're certainly moving up in the world. Maybe we should start saluting you also?"

"Eat a dick, Karasawa," Sayaka snarls, before glaring at you. "Why couldn't you have waited 'till your ratification ceremony? Why'd you have to bust that out now, huh?"

There's nothing wrong with the Rank Leaders knowing about it. What the hell's her problem, anyway?

"It's the look of the thing, for fuck's sake! Dammit, Murderface, I haven't even told my own goddamn squad--"

"Relax, Miki. I was just making fun." Enishi tuts from behind her fan, again, before looking at you sidelong and then bowing again. "It has been my pleasure, Warmaster." She says, before making her leave. Rea stares at you for a moment too long, before nodding and following the kimono-clad Callidus out of your office as well.

"...Well, now I gotta tell the girls, and they're going to make a scene about this," Sayaka gnashes her teeth, raking one gloved hand through her hair in sheer frustration. "Thanks, Murderface, really." She makes to leave, but stops just as she passes Omegon. "And you. You'd better stop fucking hiding from Kyoko, she's been asking about you. I'm not going to keep lying to her face about you any longer."

All the enraged Eversor gets in reply is a nod, and it only seems to make her angrier. She goes to storm off, before you stop her by calling her name.

"What." She snaps. "Is it. Murderface."

...'Murderface'?

"...Warmaster. Christ, please, don't be difficult about this--"

You shake your head and tell her that there's going to be a small gathering at your new apartment later. Mami, Kyoko and Midori are going to be there, so she might as well be, too.

Sayaka's silent for a few moments, before you see her shoulders droop in surrender. "...Housewarming, eh? Fine. I'll...I'll bring some takeout. Probably someething to drink, too. God knows I'll need some." She turns to glare at you, but softens somewhat with a tired grin. "Later, Murderface."

You bid her goodbye just as she closes the door behind her, leaving you and Omegon alone.

The Culexus seems to be shaken from what Sayaka snapped at her, by the way she's no longer leaning against the wall, but rather tense and wringing her gloved hands together.

She glances at you, then at the door, but seems to catch your intention, and stays instead. Waiting for you to make the first move.

How do you approach this situation?

You get up from the skull throne and make your way towards the Culexus. You're not all that sure if this is really Yuma, but you know what Malal told you, and you're going with that.

You take out the box containing Remov from your inventory, and hold it out to the girl. The visor of her helmet reflects your face for a couple of seconds, before two gloved hands reach out to receive the package. She takes the lid off just as you ask her if she knows anything about it - your voice low, careful, measured. If a bit hesitant, you'll admit. You still have no fucking idea who this is.

"...Remov," comes the whispered reply, all warmth and character ruined by vox corruption. "The Betrayer's Servitor Skull. Yes, I know about this, Warmaster. I bought it myself, when Miss Kyoko took me to buy presents for everyone." She shakes her head. "...Why's it disassembled? Even the memory unit's taken apart. You'll have to do some serious repairs just to get it flying again..."

Well, that's what she'll have to do. Malal did tell you to have her fix it.

"...Malal? Miss Malal told you?" Despite the vox unit in her helmet ruining her words, you can't help but hear suspicion in her tone. "How? I--"

You take out the note that Malal had left you along with the box. She reads it quickly, and grows silent for a bit before letting out a sigh. "...I see. Alright, Warmaster. I'll have this put back together for you as soon as I can. It'll take a while, but I'll try to make the wait a short one." You notice that her grip on the box is shaking slightly, but it disappears as soon as she places the lid back. "I can't fathom why you'd want to find out what the Betrayer's thoughts are, but orders are orders."

...At least that confirms what she feels about Kharn. Somewhat.

But another thing...so she's Yuma, right? She's not anyone else? It's just that you can't tell, what with the helmet and all.

You seem to have hit a sore nerve somehow. You weren't even trying to, but there it is.

"Is there anything else, Warmaster? Only I've got a skull servitor to put together, and you've got your housewarming party to get to."

How do you react?

It would be a nice gesture, and Sayaka seemed to think that Yuma was being really withdrawn since the incident. Although it seems that Culexus tend to make some Meguca sick to their stomachs.

Some of the discussing is pretty funny too. Especailly when decu decides to take snippets of it and put it into the post. Like last thread

>What I want to know is how is she going to introduce herself. As Warmaster Chiaki "Murderface" Matsuda. Or as just Warmaster Chiaki Matsuda.
>Want to avoid people going, "Warmaster Matsuda? Wasn't Murderface supposed to be the new Warmaster."

And then the OP post has exactly that. Or how our insane paranoid ramblings end up in Chiakis mind.

I would like a compilation of all the art though. Most quests end up with a website with all the quest art posted on it. Like with the Bromont quests.

Yes, which is exactly why Yuma isn't going to be happy to know that Kharn has been made a housewife.
It means that Kharn's won. She survived EVERYTHING, and still came out the other side alive and can now live out her life on a Grief Seed-a-month pension. She's gotten something that most Magical Girls will never get, and that Yuma, as a Culexus, can never have.

You guys think it's funny, but from a Magical Girl's perspective, Kharn got the true best ending, when before the best end you could expect was dying in a fight before you have a chance to Witch Out, followed by second-best, which is being retired by a friend before you can Witch Out.

Omegon - or Yuma - shakes her head after a few moments. "No apologies necessary, Warmaster. That was a long time, and I was aware that you were not yourself when it happened." The vox destroys what sounds like a chuckle coming from her. "And that doesn't really make me feel better, to hear that the Betrayer got a happy ending when Miss Malal didn't. But I appreciate the attempt." With one arm hugging the box to her, she gives a salute. "If I can be excused, then, Warmaster."

...Wait. She can come to your housewarming if she wants. You were just about to invite her.

"I know, Warmaster. And I wasn't going to accept it." Yuma shrugs again. "Nothing personal, but we don't really know much about each other. I'm just your subordinate, and I'd very much like to keep it that way, if it's all the same to you." Another vox-ruined chuckle. "Really, Warmaster, it's fine. Don't look like I pissed in your cornflakes just for the kick of it. Besides, no one invites a Culexus to a housewarming party - that's bad luck, and brings evil spirits into your home."

That's a whole lot of bullshit and she knows it.

"Maybe. But really, if you want to make me feel better about the entire thing, Warmaster?" She walks towards the door, gloved hand reaching out for the doorknob and twisting it. "You'll take the Betrayer behind the shed and put her out of her misery. Barring that, well...just try not to be Kharn 2.0 and you'll be just fine."

...Right. Alright. You...guess you can do that.

"Hopefully you don't forget. We Culexus don't, you know." She salutes you again. "Warmaster."

She steps through the door and closes it behind her. Leaving you alone in your office with your throne of skulls and a rapidly-sinking sense of defeat.

You don't even want to consider how busy tomorrow will be. You've got that mission with Kirishima Ruri slated for then, don't you? Great. At least you got all the bothersome stuff out of the way first.

You grab a fistful of the hat and tear it off your head, tossing it on the table as you lean back on the uncomfortable throne made out of head bones. Surely the entire place won't go to hell and back if you take a short nap. It's not even a nap, you're just going to rest your eyes a bit. Yeah. That's all it is.

Just resting your eyes...

"Sempai?"

You feel someone shaking your shoulder. You grunt something vaguely offensive, and turn to the other side. The shaking becomes more insistent, and you grunt something else more offensive while slapping the hand away.

Fucking hell, who do you need to kill to get some sleep around here?

"Sempai, you can't sleep here, you'll get a stiff neck or something." It's then that you recognize the voice, even with your mind still cloudy from sleep. "Besides, uh, you asked us to take the thronen to storage, right? The replacement's here, and we're just about to pack it away."

What? Oh...oh, right. Yeah. Replace this stupid thing, yeah.

You blearily open your eyes, and see Kumatora looking down at you. Behind her are some of the maintenance guys you've seen working around the floor, unpacking what looks to be a rather comfortable - if intimidating - high-backed black leather chair. The sort Bond villains use.

"Anyway, um, Miss Mami told me to wake you up, since you're supposed to have your haircut tonight. Also asked me to tell you that everyone's waiting for you back home, and I'm supposed to drive you there."

Ah. Right. Um. Well. You'll be ready in just a few, you reckon. You sit up slowly, scratching your head while smacking your lips.

"You got some drool on you, sempai. Left corner."

...Thanks, you tell her, just as you wipe at your mouth with your sleeve.

Yeah, you're doing great as Warmaster. No problem.

The drive to your apartment is a short one. Not much traffic, considering rush hour and everything. Kumatora seemed all too ready to leave, but you shanghaied her into coming along with you. Might as well start things off right, even if you did somehow mess up with Yuma earlier, eh?

As soon as you come within a few feet of your apartment door, however - with Kumatora tagging around, clearly pleased at being invited (she couldn't stop thanking you) - it's then that you hear an echoing report come from behind the door. Followed by what sounded like Midori and Kyoko shrieking, and Sayaka cursing herself a blue streak.

"Sempai, that sounded like...!" Kumatora's face goes pale as she tugs on your sleeve.

Yes. A gunshot. You can't place what caliber.

The entire setup reminding you of how all this shit began.

It's...it's fine. No reason to overreact. Must've been something that only sounded like a gunshot, not a gunshot exactly. You're being paranoid. Stop being paranoid.

...Still, you pull a gun from your Shield, just in case. You let out a sigh in relief; it's not golden, just your usual Beretta M9. You thumb the safety off and glance at Kumatora - she seems to be ready for anything, too, judging by her expression. You nod at her, and then knock at the door with your free hand.

Nothing, except some whispering. You knock again, and hushed giggling reaches your ears. Finally, after what seems like an eternity, the door's locks undo themselves with a series of clicks, and it revolves out of view to reveal...Tomoe Mami, unharmed and intact.

...And her white dress shirt seemingly soaked through and rendered transparent by...champagne? Do you smell champagne?

"Oh, Chiaki-san, you're just in time!" Mami greets you with a beaming smile - her cheeks flushed, but whether it's from champagne or in the embarrassment of being an inadvertent participant to a Wet T-shirt contest, you don't know. "Well, I suppose a bit late, since Kyoko-san got impatient and got started with the food. Sayaka's gotten her under control, don't worry."

It's then that she notices you staring, and looks down at her own blouse. "Ah, er, I wanted to get the champagne open when you came in, but I sort of had an accident, and--" It's then that you hear a certain russian arms dealer giggle somewhere inside your apartment, along with what suspiciously sounds like a ravenous beast gorging itself on food.

Misaka? Misaka's here?

"I picked up Misaka-chan to join us, since I thought you'd want her to be here, too." Mami smiles. "That's alright, isn't it?...Oh, hello, Kumatora-chan! Pleased to have you join us!"

"A-ah, good evening, Miss Tomoe," Your subordinate hastily bows. "S-sorry if I'm unexpected. The...the Warmaster invited me, and--"

"Oh, no, it's fine! It's fine, right, Chiaki-san?"

You can't stop staring.

Pale lace design, minimal frills, yet tasteful. Front-clasp. Push-up.

"Sempai? Sempai!" Kumatora elbows you hard in the ribs, making you wince but not making you break your stare. "Sempai, Miss Tomoe asked you--"

Yes. Yes. Things are fine forever.

Another dig in your ribs, and you finally break out of your trance. You turn towards Kumatora and give her thanks, before murmuring something approaching thanks to the blonde. Averting your eyes from her front.

...Mami really does get this reaction from you, doesn't she?

"Well, come on in, anyway! You should have told me this was going to be a housewarming party, Chiaki-san, I'd have made more food!" Mami ushers the both of you into your own apartment. "Good thing Sayaka-san came here just in time, and we ordered out a bit more. Western food, burgers and pizza, just for something new this time. And yes, before you ask," She says as you open your mouth. "...I made you pancakes. It's by your chair. I also brought you what you asked for - we'll look at it together while I'm giving you your haircut, okay?"

Okay. That's fine. It's...fine.

You manage a smile as she leans in to place a kiss on your cheek.

"Welcome home, Chiaki-san. For real, this time."

Yes. For real, this time.

You're not sure if you deserve this, but you don't particularly care. Not right now.

You can only wish that this doesn't end all that soon.

Upon entering, you see the small handful of people in the world you actually give a damn about. Sayaka is sitting on the living room sofa, with Misaka on her lap. Kyoko is sitting in front of the food-stocked table, cross-legged, dual-wielding two slices of cheese-laden pizza. Midori is holding a half-empty bottle of champagne, her own white shirt also soaked through and clinging to her chest, revealing interesting....curves. A printed banner is pinned up up on the wall, spelling out the letters 'CONGRATURATIONS, MURDERFACE' in cheerful, kiddy typeface.

Both Misaka and Midori immediately exclaim as you enter, and you manage a smile before getting the wind nearly knocked out of you through a russian arms dealer missile right into the gut. She hugs you for all you're worth, and you give her a thorough head-patting as she tells you just how much she's missed you, and how you should promise never to forget her again.

You promise, of course. You never will.

"Oi, Murderface!" Kyoko cheers, holding up a slice of pizza. ...Judging by the boxes stacked on the living room table, Mami's ordered enough for an entire squad. "Nice party! Thought it was just gonna be a regular sleepover, hah!"

"It was going to be, until she suddenly changed her mind," Sayaka snaps. "...Welcome home, anyway." She tosses this your way, and you give her a nod.

Midori works up a smile of her own, despite...well, the wet shirt and everything. "S-sorry about the mess, sempai. Just wanted to help out."

You shake your head. It's fine. She doesn't need to worry. You'll just clean it up later.

"Well, I'll help out!" She insists, before grinning and giving you a hug. "Welcome home, sempai. And, er, maybe put the gun away?"

Ah. Yeah. Right. Away the gun goes, back into your Shield. That's taken care of.

Well, looks like the housewarming party is in full swing. Kumatora's joined Kyoko, but not after greeting Sayaka and asking permission.

What do you do now?

[x]Feed Pinky Pancakes

It may be "target rich" but those "targets" consist of her best friend, Mami, her best friend's girlfriend, a little girl, and Midori. All of which should be pretty safe for one reason or another, so long as there's some measure of Madoka's influence on Pinky. Kumatora, I dunno, but she's also not exactly involved in anything serious for Pinky to get mad at.

Besides, it's a party, why shouldn't we bring the best girl?

Except, they're not. Because Pinky isn't Madoka, she's Faust with Madoka's memories.

And Mami isn't protected, going by what Pinky was saying about her last time we met, and her general disregard for Mami's safety.

Just went back and checked, we both have it wrong.

We put the hat on him before handing him to Kumatora, but Kumatora made no effort to take him before we handed him over. And she showed no particular reaction to him one way or the other.

>Your response is of course to take off the Warmaster Cap and place it on the Incubator. Of course, it's a miserable fit - the hat's not quite made with mutant cat head sizes in mind - but as it tips forward, the brim effectively rendering Kyuubey blind, his...prehensile secondary ears or whatever they're called move up to carefully lift the headgear out of the way. "...Matsuda, please stop joking around. Really, this should be beneath you." The Incubator is miffed now. "What purpose does this serve?" Science, you reply. With the damnable hat on him, more or less, you hold him out to Kumatora, who's now just looked up, blinking in surprise. "E-eh? Semp--er, Warmaster, what is it?" Kumatora's brow furrows, reflexively reaching out to take Kyuubey from your hands. "Does...does the Incubator need me to carry him to the elevator? If that's the case, I can easily--" No, no. Does she feel anything when looking at this particular Kyuubey? The one with the dashing hat? "Well, it is a rather fetching hat, Warmaster," Kumatora says after a moment, staring at your boss. "No offense to Sir Kyuubey, of course, but I rather think the Warmaster wears it much better."

As the famous poem Desiderata says:

"As far as possible without surrender be on good terms with all persons.
Speak your truth quietly and clearly; and listen to others, even to the dull and ignorant; they too have their story."

With that in mind even though our tripfag friend may be dull and ignorant (I'm sorry tripfag, but that's really retarded, we should play it safe) he could be useful.

This is because we were holding him out at her, making her assume we wanted her to take him.

It wasn't that the hat made her want to take him, it's that the fact that we were holding him out to her made her assume we WANTED her to take him.

This...this is the first time you've been to a party. Well, one that's being held for you, anyway. You've been dragged along to Kharn's celebrations, that much you remember, and there was always the Officio get-togethers with the raffles and the Christmas parties and so on. You've always been a wallflower in all of those things, drinking yourself to sleep in a corner. But now...well. This is your party, and you get to enjoy it any way you want.

You pat Misaka on the head a few more times, before taking off your hat and putting it on her. It doesn't seem to have an effect, although she does look cuter with it on. You send her back to Sayaka, whose expression seems to soften when she sees the russian arms dealer with the hat. ...You very nearly laughed, but your attention was stolen by Midori taking you by the arm - wet t-shirt and everything - and leading you to your chair, where your own stack of freshly-made pancakes sat on the side table, waiting for you. You stop by Kyoko for a second to touch fists with the red-haired Eversor, who continued to stuff her face of pizza without even missing a beat.

...You mumble thanks without staring too much, allowing yourself pushed onto the most comfortable chair in the world. You ask her if...if she's going to change, or something? Doesn't champagne get sticky?

"Well, um, I'll just take a shower later, sempai. Besides, it's not that bad." She pulls at the collar of her shirt, before letting it snap back - confirming that she's, uh, not wearing anything under the cotton material. Mami seems to be in the same school of thought, although she'd unbuttoned her shirt down to the fourth button, which...well, draws your eyes like nothing else. "Ah, in any case, please enjoy yourself, sempai! There's a lot of pizza, burgers are coming in any moment now, and you've got your pancakes!"

"Take it easy with her, Midori-chan. Our Warmaster doesn't mix well with parties." Mami chides the Callidus, as she pours you a glass of the bubbly stuff. She pushes it into your hand. "Here. Now, you know I try not to encourage your drinking, Chiaki-san, but there's an occassion, and it's just champagne." She clinks her bottle against your glass. "Cheers!"

You murmur the customary reply, before taking a sip of the strange bubbling fluid. Mami, meanwhile, takes a healthy slug from the bottle.

With that, you try to enjoy your housewarming party as...best as you can. Which means that you immediately tucked into your pile of pancakes. Blissfully spearing, chewing and swallowing each and every forkful. It's pancakes like you've never had them before. And with the captivating scenery in front of you, well...sometimes you wonder if this is the universe trying to give back for everything it's taken away from you, even just a little bit.

As the proceedings continued, Kyoko revealed a surprise: she'd found your old bomber jacket, the one she gave you that one Christmas. You'd forgotten about that, actually - in fact, it was the one you were wearing when Kyoko set you on fire - but it seems to be repaired, looking like brand new. You put it on, and continue eating pancakes while the rest of the party continued. After a few drinks, it seemed that Midori remembered what she was there for, too - and had placed herself behind your chair, styling your hair in every which way, barring that of actually cutting it.

The party wound down much too early. After three bottles of champagne and the rest of the pizzas tucked away, Kyoko and Sayaka decided that they needed to get back. Well, Kyoko did, Sayaka was much too drunk and grabby to be left in your apartment. Misaka was fetched by Tiny Pete, of all people, and you watched the terminator hurl itself over the railing - its descent slowed down by the deafening roar of what looks like a massive jump-pack attached to its back. Kumatora, still sober yet really full, excused herself, but not before giving you an awkward hug of your own and taking one from Mami herself.

Midori was a lightweight, clearly - she fell asleep on the couch after three glasses of bubbly. Sayaka had made sure to put a pillow under her head and covered her with a blanket. The Callidus, now snoring and dead to the world, left you and Mami alone in your apartment.

"Well, Chiaki-san. Let's get that haircut of yours out of the way, alright?" She says this with a smile, and you nod. You've finished the pancakes, all except the bottom two. You're saving this for...later. For someone who, despite how insane and bloodthirsty she may seem, is actually very lonely and in need of some company.

Working quickly, sitting behind your comfy chair, Mami had you set up for your haircut. With the cloth drape to prevent the cut hair from falling on your clothes and everything.

"So, Chiaki-san, how do you want your hair to look like?"
